ARE EXCUSES LEARNED RESPONSES?

Webster's New World Dictionary and Thesaurus defines excuse as; to apologize, give reasons for, or defense for some action. Think about a young child and when s/he starts making excuses. Often it begins with "I didn't do it, somebody else did it." The child may be afraid of being punished. Is it the fear of punishment that we do not take responsibility for our actions?

As parents or other adults, we model for the young people. I am also guilty of making excuses for being late ect. As I work with our young people, I stress that they take responsibility for their behavior. As I attended a Landmark Education class I was given this RESPONSIBILITY:

Responsibility starts with saying you are the cause in the matter.

Responsibility is not a burden, fault, praise, blame, credit, shame or guilt. In responsibility, there is not evaluation of good or bad, right or wrong. There is simply what's so, and your stand.

Being responsible starts with the willingness to deal with a situation from the point of view that you are the generator of what you do, what you have and what you are. That is not the truth. It is a place to stand.

No one can make you responsible, nor can you impose responsibility on another. It is a grace you give yourself- an empowering context that leaves you with a say in the matter of life.

After taking this class, I realized that I was not being responsible for my behavior. I need to plan ahead to allow control of my time. Of course there are incidents such as a flat tire that are out of your control. Therefore, I challenge each of you, especially me, to examine our excuses and take responsibility for our own behavior and not make excuses.

Mike Mentz: Working Artist in Residence

Mike Mentz is the working artist in residence for the 2018-19 school year at Montana Western with a focus on glass blowing. Originally from Indianapolis, Mentz started blowing glass in high school. "I was blowing glass just as a hobby. I didn't know that going to school for art was a possibility, but my mentor suggested I look into it, so I applied to a few schools and saw Cleveland's education system," said Mentz.

He attended the Cleveland Institute of Art, receiving a Bachelors of Fine Arts in Glass with a minor in Metal Work. Mentz graduated in 2018 and after, worked as a studio technician for a glass shop.

Mentz applied for a position at Montana Western so he could continue his glassblowing career. The multiple aspects of the artist residency have afforded Mentz the ability to split his time efficiently between his residency duties and personal studio time to create artwork, all while having full access to phenomenal facilities.

"I get to do what I love to do as far as making my own artwork. I also love teaching," said Mentz.

At UMW, Mentz has learned more about glass work while expanding his skillset. Associate Professor Michael Hengler has taught Mentz more about flameworking, and visiting artist

Sally Prash also introduced Mentz to new glass blowing techniques.

"Having visiting artists is so important, especially in a workshop crash course," Mentz stated.

In his personal works of art, Mentz likes to focus on the tactility of glasswork. His college thesis project utilized interactive artwork by creating ruminating fields of thought for an individual.

"It is great when you can put something as fragile as glass together in a way where when it moves, it is safe to handle. It's kind of a taboo, but for the most part, so is the art world," said Mentz.

Mentz will continue his artist in residence at Montana Western through the semester. He plans to continue pursuing glass blowing as a career.

For more information about the Montana Western Glass Studio and Glass degree programs, please contact Associate Professor Michael Hengler via email at michael.hengler@umwestern.edu or call 406-683-7344.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES DILLON

In 2018, my law firm celebrated its 38th year of providing legal services to our clients and I have been practicing law for 42 years. As we moved into 2018, I decided to sell my 1031 property exchange business, American Equity Exchange, to a friendly competitor, Accruit, LLC, and work for Accruit as Executive Vice-President and part of their executive management team.

As a result of that decision, three of my key staff, Michele Smith, Dana Huffaker and Shanda Turner are now also working for Accruit. Rosemary Griffin retired in June and Jeni Schmauch and Bobbi Konen chose to pursue other vocations. Accruit could have easily continued to service our clients from its Denver office but decided to invest in this community and is renting part of my office space in Dillon. Our exchange company is now part of a larger organization giving our property exchange clients more and better resources.

Karen Kipp continues to work with me in my law firm but in making the decision to join forces with Accruit, I also made the decision to wind down and eventually end my law practice. It's been a wonderful ride and I have a priceless tapestry in my mind of names, faces and stories which will be with me the rest of my life. I could certainly continue the practice but I no longer have the time and energy to run two businesses. I am excited about the opportunity I have to continue in the property exchange business and spend more time with my wonderful family.

Dana Pepper and Bina Peters at River and Range Law, P.C. in Bozeman will continue to represent our clients who are still involved in the water rights re-adjudication process. I am referring my other clients and friends who need legal assistance to highly qualified attorneys who can assist them with their legal needs. Karen and I will continue to work to deliver past and current files to our clients and ease their transition to other representation.

Thank you so much for your business and support over the years. I have been honored to serve you, your families and this community. My co-workers and I at Accruit-Dillon and my family will continue to be a part of this community. My family loves our home on Carrigan Lane and look forward to making memories there. My New Year wish for all of you is continued safety and prosperity in 2019 and the years to come!
