improve community leadership and engagement.

"We are fortunate to house a program to advance the role of women across our state," said Dr. Sara Rinfret, academic director of the Montana NEW Institute. "It allows our students to be part of a nationally recognized cohort of women to advance their leadership skills."

The program parallels the University of Montana's SEA (Safe, Empowered, Accelerated) Change initiative, a campaign dedicated to providing a safe and empowering campus for all women and a community that accelerates influential lives.

"I spoke with influential women in local and state government positions. I learned new skills about networking and how to connect with people to create changes for the better. We heard the quote "you can't be what you can't see" over the course of the program, and that as women, we need to step up into leadership positions. We need to be more worried about being brave than being perfect. This conference showed me that women can do anything, and we need to start doing a better job of supporting other women and advocating for ourselves," stated George after being asked what she took away from the program.

Leadership skill training like the Montana NEW Leadership Program may help women bridge the gap between political interest and political leadership by influencing women to be active and feel empowered to participate in politics.

"There were a lot of great girls and inspiring guest speakers that I got to meet. Sara Rinfret talked about how your path isn't going to be completely straight and that you can be all over the place and still end up where you need to be, or even in a better place than you planned. That was a big thing for me," said Hanser when asked about what she learned at the program.

The Montana NEW Leadership Institute is hosted by UM's Mansfield Center. The Mansfield Center promotes ethics in public affairs and leadership, as well as global understanding in the spirit of Sen. Mike Mansfield (1903-2001) and his wife and life partner, Maureen Hayes Mansfield.

Letter to the Editor

Will the U.S. military ever stay home and quit trying to police the world? No! The war hawks always want war with someone.

Just why are we in the Middle East? Some say to protect our interests, which usually means oil and money.

America has a long history and a number of conflicts with Iran. 1. In 1980 the Iran Hostage Crisis. 2. 1986 the Iran Contra affair, which a number of President Reagan officials were found guilty of felonies. 3. In 1988 a U.S. warship sank an Iranian frigate and shelled two Persian Gulf oil platforms. 4. 1988, the U.S. Navy accidentally shot down an Iranian commercial jet. 290 passengers and crew lost their lives. The U.S. never apologized.

Now the Iranians have shot down a U.S. drone. Now the U.S. has put millions of lives in jeopardy. The U.S. is spending millions of dollars in the Persian Gulf. The ships that were attacked in the Gulf did not belong to the United States and the countries that owned the ships have not come to defend themselves. So why is the United States the police of the world?

The U.S. has many problems at home. We need to fix America for America. Lets hope the draft dodger with bone spurs keeps the United States out of war.

Taxpayers should be on the lookout for new versions of these two scams

With scam artists hard at work all year, taxpayers should be on the lookout for a surge of evolving phishing emails and telephone scams.

Taxpayers should watch for new versions of two tax-related scams. One involves Social Security numbers related to tax issues. The other threatens taxpayers with a tax bill from a fictional government agency. Here are some details about these scams to help taxpayers recognize them:

The SSN scheme

- The latest twist includes scammers claiming to be able to suspend or cancel the victim's Social Security number. This scam is similar to and often associated with the IRS impersonation scam.
- It is yet another attempt by con artists to frighten taxpayers into returning robocall voicemails.
- Scammers may mention overdue taxes in addition to threatening to cancel the taxpayer's SSN.

Fake tax agency

- This scheme involves a letter threatening an IRS lien or levy.
- The scammer mails the letter to the taxpayer.
- The lien or levy is based on bogus overdue taxes owed to a non-existent agency.
- The fake agency is called the "Bureau of Tax Enforcement." There is no such agency.
- The lien notification scam also likely references the IRS to confuse potential victims into thinking the letter is from a legitimate agency.

Both these schemes show classic signs of being scams. The IRS and its Security Summit partners – the state tax agencies and the tax industry – remind everyone to stay alert to scams that use the IRS or reference taxes. Being alert is especially important in late spring and early summer as tax bills and refunds arrive.
