7th Annual Brown Bag Breakfast: Remembering Sacagawea and the Lewis and Clark Expedition

At the Missouri Headwaters
Saturday, July 27th, 8:30 a.m.

Montana State Parks (stateparks.mt.gov) The Brown Bag Breakfast remembers the 9 a.m., July 27, 1805 morning that Sacagawea, Captain Lewis, and the expedition canoes arrived at the Missouri headwaters. Members' journals describe the beauty and bountiful resources that the expedition enjoyed while at this special place—now Missouri Headwaters State Park. This year we will be dedicating a new contour map at the interpretive pavilion near the park entrance!

Bridge at Cobblestone Fishing Access Site on Madison River to be replaced

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks is preparing to build a new bridge at the Cobblestone Fishing Access Site on the Madison River, about 10 miles south of Three Forks. The new construction will replace the current foot bridge over Darlington Ditch.

Construction is scheduled to begin Aug. 5 and expected to last about two weeks. Users of the site will need to wade the ditch to access the Madison River and beware of heavy equipment in the area from Aug. 5-6. The site may also be closed for a short time while the cattle guard at the entrance to the site is cleaned out.

This project is funded through cooperative efforts between the Madison-Gallatin Chapter of Trout Unlimited, Northwestern Energy and FWP.

A Gun for My Wife

By: Bryce Angell

My wife declared, one Sunday morn, "I'd like to have a gun."
I asked her, "Are you scared, or do you want a gun for fun?"
I told her she could use my guns whenever she's alone.
But she wanted something smaller and a gun to call her own.
For her a gun would be okay. She'd been around a few.
But what really made me wince was this: She wanted bullets, too!
So, with some hesitation and a check book in my hand,
I drove on down to Harold's place. I knew he'd understand.
Well, Harold dealt with guns and gear. He recognized my plight.
So, he said, "Get her a gun today. You don't, you've got a fight."
Harold wasn't kidding, so I took one on the chin.
Then noticed a revolver that a patron traded in.
I asked to get a better look. He handed me the gun.
A Smith and Wesson .38. My shopping day was done.
He took my cash then wrapped the gun and bullets, too, of course.
I took it home and really hoped I'd never feel remorse.
My wife unwrapped the gun, and now she had her own defense.
We went out in the backyard, nailed a target to the fence.
Men like to show their prowess. I knew how to shoot a gun.
But when it came to handguns, my experience was none.
I aimed straight down the barrel, took a shot. Where did it go?
I missed the target and the fence. My wife said, "You shot low."
Embarrassed wasn't quite the word. I'd proved I couldn't shoot.
But then, it was a handgun, so who really gives a hoot.
My wife reloaded. Took her aim and fired a single shot. Then squeezed the trigger five more times. Dang sure she knew a lot.
She never missed the target. She'd been shooting on the sly.
Each doggone bullet found its mark. Two hit the darn bull's eye.
So, I guess I should be happy, since my wife was tickled pink.
And life don't get much better, 'cuz I got that special wink.

Attorney General Fox Announces Historic Equifax Data Breach Settlement

Over 380,000 Montanans Impacted by 2017 Breach

Attorney General Tim Fox and 49 other attorneys general announced an historic $600 million settlement with Equifax concerning its 2017 data breach affecting over 147 million Americans – more than half of the U.S. population. That number includes an estimated 380,441 Montanans.

"Today's announcement marks the largest data breach settlement ever in our country," said Attorney General Tim Fox. "I encourage Montana consumers whose personal information was exposed by Equifax to request free credit monitoring and reimbursement for money and time they've personally spent addressing the data breach."

This settlement is part of a global settlement Equifax reached with the Federal Trade Commission, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, and the Multi-District Litigation private class action. Equifax will:

- Offer affected consumers free credit monitoring services for 10 years;
- Provide free identity theft restoration services to all affected consumers;
- Strengthen its data security practices to help protect against another breach;
- Help identity theft victims and concerned consumers to:
  - o Understand their credit reports;
  - o Dispute inaccurate entries on their credit reports, including those resulting from identity theft; and
  - o Assist active duty military members, veterans, and their families with credit report issues unique to service members.

Additionally, Equifax will pay $300 million into a settlement fund for the benefit of affected consumers, with the possibility of paying up to an additional $125 million into the settlement fund, for a total of $425 million. It will also pay $175 million to the states.

Affected consumers are eligible to request these reimbursements from the settlement fund:

- Reimbursement for time spent trying to avoid or recover from identity theft (up to 20 total hours at $25 per hour);
