ONE DIES IN ACCIDENT

A 12-year-old Alberta, Canada girl died in a single-vehicle crash in Beaverhead County Saturday night about 10:30 pm, according to the Montana Highway Patrol. The vehicle was heading north on Interstate 15 when it crashed near mile marker 44

The vehicle was traveling through a construction zone when the driver attempted to merge, went off the right side of the road, and struck a delineator post. The driver then re-entered the roadway and over-corrected, causing the vehicle to roll. MHP said the vehicle came to rest on its top in the roadway.

The girl was thrown from the vehicle; she was transported to Barrett Hospital where she was pronounced dead on arrival. The girl was likely not wearing her seatbelt, according to MHP.

A 44-year-old man, 40-year-old woman, and two children ages five and 11 were seatbelted and injured in the crash and were taken to the hospital.

The crash remains under investigation. Authorities believe speed was a factor.

Bear Meat

By: Bryce Angell

Our wall tent kept us toasty warm. The wood stove burned on low.
We sat around the table waiting for the cook to show.
Henry shot a bear that day. The cook had dressed it out.
The smell of bear meat filled the air. Would I eat or go without?
Mose, the cook, stood at the door and held a pan of meat. I smelled some spuds and onions, thought that's prob'ly what I'll eat.
He glanced at me and said, "I think you're looking mighty sick."
I told him that I wasn't sure that bear meat's what I'd pick.
I then relayed a story that took place some years ago.
I wasn't sure just when, but I was twenty-one or so.
I'd opened up the gate to let the mare in for the night.
She always came a-runnin' and was never out of sight.
Then way out in the pasture, I could see the old mare's head. She was stretched out on the ground, and that old mare was sure 'nuff dead.
I hooked her to the tractor and dragged her to some trees.
I knew it wouldn't be long 'fore she would permeate the breeze.
A day or so went by before I checked on the old mare.
She was ripe and right for eating then, a dinner for a bear.
At dusk I climbed up in a tree and kept the mare in sight.
I figured an old bear would show and, sure enough, was right.
A black bear crept in slowly with his nose up in the air.
He tore the carcass open wide and rolled around in there.
He gobbled up some innards. It was positively gross.
Then started in on maggots, and that's what he liked the most.
The maggots drooled down from his mouth. I puked out in the air.
He saw me but then turned back to his smorgasbord of mare.
When that hungry critter got his fill of eating rotten meat, he ambled over to my tree. I guess I was no treat.
The old black bear soon wandered off. I promised then and there that I'd never eat a morsel from any type of bear.
I said, "So, Mose I'm telling you: For me there'll be no bear.
I'll just eat spuds and onions. You can surely have my share."

County educators get 'back to school' present

The state of Montana awarded Dillon Elementary District #10 with a remarkable "back to school" present which supports the implementation of a widely known and highly praised set of strategies for educators and students in Grades K-5. The PAX/ Good Behavior Game is a social-emotional learning program shown to improve students' self-regulation skills and reduce disruptive and inattentive classroom behaviors.

In Fall 2018, Parkview Elementary Principal Greg Fitzgerald implemented PAX/GBG in all five kindergarten classes. "In my 17 years as principal, I hadn't seen students treat others with the respect and kindness I witnessed this year," he said. Students learn important teamwork skills which support productive and peaceful class experiences. "This program truly supports transformational change in behaviors, distractions, and classroom attentiveness," according to Fitzgerald.

The evidence based program data shows teachers implementing the program report less stress, improved job satisfaction, and increased time for productive classroom instruction. Students learn resiliency skills, a benefit throughout their education years and into adult life.

The across the board implementation of the PAX/GBG in all K-5 grades in Fall 2019 is a key piece of District 10's Strategic Plan. The plan addresses the emotional well-being of all elementary students, according to District 10 Superintendent Randy Shipman. "We put kids first," he said. "We believe every student, if given the needed support, can be a success story. When kids learn resiliency skills early on, and have repeated opportunities to use them, we're providing important tools they'll use to succeed in this ever changing and stressful society."

The money comes to the school through the state Department of Public Health and Human Services. The state received a federally funded State Opioid Response grant in order to target substance abuse. The PAX/GBG is proven effective in preventing substance abuse and suicidal behaviors among youth when implemented as an early prevention strategy in other Montana schools.

The long term benefit for children is the reason the local school district applied for the grant and why teachers will attend specialized training in August in order to implement the program this fall, according to Shipman. "We have a remarkable staff of outstanding educators. Their focus is not only on what's best for kids today, but what skills do our students need for successful futures. The positive impact for our students is too great not to implement this program. These strategies are all about what's best for kids and we're all in."

The grant pays for all training, supplies, and support for the school district and includes an evaluation component. Nationally certified PAX/GBG instructors will provide training in Dillon to certified educators, paraprofessionals, and support staff in the Parkview Cafeteria on August 23-24.

Due to the support of Beaverhead County Superintendent of Schools Linda Marsh, county-wide rural schools teaching and support staff are eligible to attend the training. Marsh said Beaverhead County faces key challenges in the form of suicide and substance abuse. Nationally, Montana has the highest rate of suicide among U.S. states. The 2018 Prevention Needs Assessment report showed binge drinking among Beaverhead County youth is higher than the state average. The report showed binge drinking among area youth nearly doubled within the last two years.

Marsh believes the PAX/GBG is a step in the right direction. "Adolescents with good self-esteem and specific social skill strategies make healthier choices when dealing with adolescence issues, e.g. peer pressure, substance abuse. A positive, healthy classroom atmosphere is essential in building strong, resilient children," she said.

The grant is also supported by the Be the Change 406 Coalition, a grassroots organization, targeting the reduction of underage drinking and other substance use in Beaverhead County. For more information about the grant, contact Shipman at 406.683.4311, option 3.
