Fish, Wildlife & Parks Fading Licenses CHECK YOU LICENSES

Hunters and anglers with licenses that are displaying faded text making them difficult to read can have those licenses replaced at no cost at their regional Fish, Wildlife & Parks office. Another option is to go to fwp.mt.gov, login to MyFWP and request a digital version of your license to print at home or download to a smart phone. Digital licenses are good for everything but a carcass tag.

Replacement at an FWP office for faded licenses do not count against the number of replacements an individual is allowed. Local license providers are unable to offer free replacements; the cost is $5 for each license replaced.

ANTS

By "Swede" Troedsson

In the summer of 1961, I was stationed on the Curlew Ranger District, on the Colville National Forest, north of Spokane, Washington.

During the summer I was dispatched to the Ash Pile Fire on the Powell Ranger District, on the Clearwater National Forest, in Idaho. The fire was adjacent to the Lochsa River Highway 12, down river from the Powell Ranger Station. Local Dillon, MT resident Dan Pence was also on that fire.

I was assigned to a night crew. The fire had gotten into the heart of huge dead cedar trees, which would burn and tip over. Being on line at night, and listening to those large cedar trees fall nearby in the dark, made for a very tense situation.

Getting a decent rest in camp during the day was impossible. Men were talking and shouting, generators were humming, and vehicles were moving about. To add to the discomfort, the camp was full of ants, which crawled all over you.

The Lochsa River was just across the road from us. In the middle of the river were large, flat rocks. In our desperation to get some decent rest, some of us stripped down to our undershorts and swam out to the flat rocks. There cool air coming off the river, NO ANTS, and the quiet gurgling of the river lulled us to sleep.

I wonder what the tourists thought as they drove by and saw all those men in their undershorts asleep in the middle of the river.
