McClusky Fire

Fire Crews Continue Fuel Break along Lower Whitetail Road

The McClusky fire saw growth yesterday to the east, northeast, and southeast due to east winds and the fire backing in heavy standing dead and downed trees. The fire is estimated to be 90 acres and is 0% contained.

Firefighter and public safety are the number one priority. Firefighters continued efforts and made good progress creating a fuel break on the west side of the fire, along FSR 173 Lower Whitetail road commonly known as the Gillespie Basin Road.

Firefighters will continue constructing and improving the fuel break aided by chippers that are expected to arrive this afternoon. Crews will utilize the chippers along the road to remove debris which was cut for the fuel break.

Fire Salvage Project Approved

Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest Supervisor Cheri Ford, has signed the Decision Notice for the Little Hogback and Meyers Salvage project. The project includes two locations: the Little Hogback salvage treatment area consists of 1,200 acres; and the Meyers salvage treatment area consists of 331 acres.

Pintler District Ranger Cameron Rasor said "The purpose of the Little Hogback–Meyers Salvage Project is to protect the health and safety of the public, recover the remaining forest product's economic value, as well as benefit and restore portions of the landscapes burned by these fires."

The project will remove hazard trees, salvage merchantable dead or dying trees on 1,531 acres, as well as plant trees in portions of the 2017 Little Hogback and Meyer's fire areas. Implementation will also include construction and decommissioning of 3.7 miles of temporary roads.

The Little Hogback Fire located 12 miles NW of Philipsburg, started on the Lolo National Forest and continued to burn for more than two months. When officially contained the fire had burned approximately 34,352 acres.

The Meyers Fire located 21 miles southwest of Philipsburg, started on the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest. It also continued to burn for more than two months, and eventually burned onto the Bitterroot National Forest, including the Anaconda-Pintler Wilderness, Sapphire Wilderness Study Area, and impacted some private inholdings. The Meyers Fire burned roughly 62,034 acres.

The Project Decision Notices are available for public review online at the project web page https://www.fs.usda.gov/project/?project=53959, or copies may be requested by contacting the Pintler Ranger District Office at (406) 859-3211.

FIRE LOOKOUT

By "Swede" Troedsson

In June, 1953, I was hired as a Fire Lookout by the Superior Ranger District, on the Lolo National Forest, in Montana. I had hitch hiked up from Baton Rouge, LA., were I was attending college at LSU.

After attending a week of "Guard School" at the Nine Mile Remount Depot, I was installed on the Marble Mountain Lookout on the Superior District. The lookout was a 15 square foot cabin mounted on four 35 foot long wooden legs. Windows were on all sides. In the off-season, hinged shutters would be lowered over them. When the lookout was occupied, the shutters were propped up. It contained an "alidade" fire locator, two folding metal cots, a table, a chair, a stool, some cabinets, eating and cooking utensils, and a small wood cook stove that included an oven. The basic dry staples were in a "30 day, one man" box. The dry staples were supplemented by fresh vegetables, meat, and other supplies. There was no refrigeration, so, when received, the most perishable food was eaten first, then back to the canned goods. Included in the box was a wonderful Lookout Cookbook. The lookout was far from a water source, so the packer visited twice a month with his mule string packing water in 10 gal. milk cans, and fresh food supplies. The water was poured into a 160 gal. buried holding tank.

With the supplies in the box, I could bake six different pies (apple, cherry, raisin, blackberry, blueberry, and peach). The packer, Tom Vann, would call me prior to departing Superior for my lookout, and tell me what kind of pie he wanted with coffee when he arrived.

In the evenings I would visit with other lookouts on the telephone.

Shortly after arriving at the lookout, I looked for a broom. The broom I found was in shambles. I called the District and requested they send a replacement broom. They informed me that they had forgotten to replace the broom. The previous summer the lookout was "manned" by two elderly sisters. They had been tossing food down to a black bear, who routinely returned for handouts. One evening, shortly after retiring to bed, they felt the tower shaking. It was the black bear climbing up the tower stairs looking for a handout. One of the sisters charged out in her night gown with the broom, and beat on the bear, and chased it off. And this is how the broom was demolished.

There was a garbage pit, covered with logs and soil, located a short ways down slope from the lookout. Access to the pit was through a one foot square hole, with a removable lid.

One evening, from my catwalk, I witnessed a black bear trying to get into my garbage pit. He had removed the lid, but could not get his shoulders through the hole. He turned around, plunked his butt into the hole, and was wiggling it in order to try to widen it. He ran off when he heard me laughing. The packer brought up a can of creosote on his next trip. After spreading creosote over top of the pit, I had no further bear problems.

The lookout was grounded against lightning. The feet of the stool legs were inserted in glass power line insulators. We were instructed that during severe lightning storms, we should sit on the stool.

One evening, while lying on my cot, a severe lightning storm sent electrical arcs shooting from the stove to the alidade. One tremendous lightning strike sent an electrical arc from the stove to the alidade, then from the alidade to my cot, giving me quite a start!

There was a salt lick behind my lookout. A large bull elk would routinely arrive to lick on it.

On one of his trips, I asked Tom why he carried a holstered Colt .45 caliber revolver, hanging off his saddle horn. He told me that the previous summer he had been packing supplies, including a replacement chain saw, into a trail crew. While crossing a bridge across a draw, a mule broke through the bridge and fell into the draw. The mule had one leg stuck in the mud, which appeared broken. Tom was trying to figure out how to put the mule out of its' misery. He had no pistol then. His gaze fell on the chain saw. He crawled down into the draw with the chain saw, and after starting it, began to approach the mule, who was desperately trying to pull its' leg out of the mud. Tom said that the closer he got to the mule, the bigger the mule's eyes got. He was about to sink the saw into the mule's neck, when it gave a final desperate lunge, and pulled its' leg out of the mud. The mule was fine.

If Tom had a pistol that day, he might have killed a good mule. But, he swore he would never again be without a pistol while traveling with his string of mules.

After six weeks on the lookout, I spent the rest of the summer helping clear trails and piling logging slash. We lived in a trailer while on the on the slash piling project area. One evening a young black bear raided our food cache, which we kept stored in a cooler in a creek bottom. We clipped onto a Forest Service telephone line and notified the district. The Assistant Ranger came up and shot the bear. We cooked and ate a nice bear roast.

After terminating my summer employment, I hitch hiked to Minneapolis to visit an uncle and his family. On the way, I spent one night on an Iowa pig farmer's couch. After visiting my uncle, I hitch hiked back east to visit my Dad, before returning to college.

It was a great summer.
