Labor Day Already?
Raging Moderate by Will Durst

Are you kidding? Labor Day? Already? How the hell did that happen? Didn't we just scrape down the Weber for the first summer barbecue on Memorial Day? Wasn't that like a week ago?

No matter. The kids are back in school. Every team in the NFL has legitimate playoff hopes. The trees are turning colors. Detroit is rolling out their new pieces of iron. Time to celebrate. Go out and party hearty everyone, like we're getting a day off of work to celebrate what it is we do for a living. Because that's what this day is really about.

Labor Day is also the seasonal marker between summer and autumn. The day that acts as barrier between coolers full of iced cans of PBR and icy winds swooping down from Manitoba. When we stow the swimsuits and flip-flops and pull out the parkas and galoshes. Storms go up, screens come down. The bright yin slowly changes into the dark yang.

It's when watermelons get carted off the floor of the grocery store behind those big black plastic flappy things and out comes the squash. When we roll up the garden hose and check the exhaust hose on the snow blower. Verdant shades of green are replaced by the orange and black of Halloween.

It will never be mistaken for the king of holidays - more like a wandering minstrel on a discount donkey, blissfully unshackled to any official duties required of royalty. No proscribed traditions to uphold, and no pumpkins or fir trees to kill. No bunnies or turkeys or Cupid mascots to venerate. No flags or fireworks or dead presidents or foreign wars to remember. It's a feets up, shoes off, potato chip and dip kind of day.

And as a holiday, it gets little to no respect. Like a gym teacher substituting for an advanced honors biology class. Or an usher at a Saturday afternoon pre-school screening of a "Frozen" sing-along. An accountant in a biker bar. Artichokes at a cookout.

The name is definitely part of the problem - Labor Day. Kind of a bummer, when you think about it. After all, hard labor is a punishment and any woman who has gone through childbirth is not going to wax ecstatic either. So unsexy, it should be wearing support hose. The people at Hallmark will never make a penny off the first Monday in September.

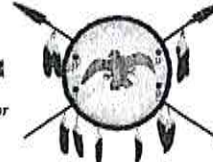

But don't blow it off because this holiday is a gift for everyone: from the masters of the stock market to the stock clerks at the corner market. Equally to be enjoyed by the wizards of Wall Street and the folks who shovel blizzards off of Main Street. For the blue-collars and the white collars and the diamond collars and the no collars and the studded dog collars.

Just one day off to relax. To sleep late and maybe meet up with friends and family for one last warm weather blow out, and then again, maybe not. Do it up good or do nothing. Because this holiday is about the true American heroes. The ones who keep democracy alive and growing and stable. Who keep their heads down and continue to move forward trying to carve out a living in this crazy world. You know - you and me.

Okay. Mostly you. Happy Labor Day everybody.

Attorney General Fox Announces Sex Assault Kit Tracking System Completion

Attorney General Tim Fox announced the completion of Montana's Sexual Assault Kit Tracking System. The system, which launches September 1, will be used by sex assault survivors, health care professionals, and law enforcement agencies statewide.

The Montana Department of Justice designed the Sexual Assault Kit Tracking System to serve as a hub for confidential information while enabling survivors to remain updated in real-time on the status of their kit. Survivors will be able to trace their kit's cycle through the criminal justice system, including its distribution, inventory, collection at a health care facility, storage by law enforcement agencies, analysis at a crime lab, and storage. When their kit's status changes, survivors can opt-in to be notified of that change. The system also offers survivors the option to track the status of their kit anonymously.

Attorney General Fox launched the Sexual Assault Evidence Task Force in 2015 to determine how many evidence kits had never been submitted to the state crime lab for testing, and to develop a plan to address the issue. In 2019, Fox brought forward legislation revising how kits are collected, stored, delivered, and tracked. "Our new tracking system marks a significant change in the law, procedures, and practices related to sex assault kits in Montana. This type of access for victims serves not only as a tracking tool, but provides for better communication among health care professionals, law enforcement, and sex assault survivors across the state," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "My Sexual Assault Evidence Task Force and our team here at the Montana Department of Justice worked hard to develop a system tailored to the needs of our state, and I'm proud of the results."

Additionally, if a survivor chooses not to report the crime to law enforcement at the time of the sexual assault examination, DOJ's Office of Victim Services will hold the kit for one year. If the survivor later consents to law enforcement involvement, the kit will be sent for lab analysis. The Montana SAK Tracking System will track these kits as well.

Health care professionals and law enforcement agencies can learn how to use the tracking system by visiting the Montana

The information contained in the Montana Sexual Assault Kit Tracking System is confidential and not subject to public disclosure.

BACKGROUND:

After Attorney General Fox launched the Sexual Assault Evidence Task Force in 2015, in 2016 the Montana Department of Justice received a National Sexual Assault Kit Initiative (SAKI) Grant award from the federal Bureau of Justice Assistance. This grant has been used to test more than 1,200 previously unsubmitted sexual assault kits, strengthen victim services, prevent revictimization, develop new training materials, create best practices and standards for sexual assault cases, and implement new policies to eradicate the accumulation of untested sexual assault kits. In addition, it provided resources and a partnership to develop Montana's Sexual Assault Kit Tracking System. Bible Truth... About the consequences of forsaking truth.

Statement of belief: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God..." (2 Timothy 3:16-17), thus all beliefs in conflict with the scripture, God's holy word, are false.

At a time when Israel had turned away from God to idols and false beliefs, the prophet Isaiah (59:14) states that judgment had departed to the rear, righteousness was remote, and that truth was wavering and feeble making it impossible for the entrance of uprightness.

Just as truth, judgment & righteousness had become remote & weak during the days of Isaiah, American society over the past 60 years seems to be experiencing the same thing.

Rejecting truth will also have a terrible, eternal consequence on those who ignore the truth of God's word, which provokes the question, "Can we know that the Bible is really God's word?"

Consider the fact that the Bible was written by about 40 men over a period of 1500 years. This means that it couldn't have been written by men who convened, coordinated & harmonized what they wrote to be sure to avoid error. God had the Apostle Paul write the following words of explanation to be sure mankind could have confidence that the Bible is true. The reference is 2 Timothy 3:15-16, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect [of a mature nature], thoroughly furnished to all good works."

The truth is that men who reject the truth recoded in God's word will suffer the eternal consequences referred to therein. Disbelieving the truth has never changed the truth to a lie. When Romans 6:23 states that "...the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord," it means that all who do not believe in Jesus Christ as their Savior will be eternally separated from God. This truth will not change just because one does not believe it to be true. Not believing it to be true will not change the consequence of those not believing the Bible and its message.

There can be no doubt that the Bible is true, therefore believing and acting on its promises is critical to each individual's eternal destination.
