GRAPEFRUIT

By "Swede" Troedsson

In 1952 - 1953, while attending Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, I took a part time job as a waiter in an off-campus cafe, named The Baker Cafe.

My wages were 40 cents an hour, plus free meals. On week days I worked the evening dinner shift, and full day shifts on weekends.

One of the students working the breakfast shift was an easy going southern boy named Jim (I forget his last name). Jim was a HUGE man who "rough necked" on oil rigs on the Gulf during the summer.

Because the university offered curriculums in petroleum, and sugar, engineering, the university was attended by quite a few students from South America. Among students who came to breakfast every morning was a student from Caracas, Venezuela. You could tell he came from a wealthy family. He drove a new Chevrolet convertible, flashed lots of spending money, and treated waiters as if they were his servants at home. Every morning he would order a grapefruit with his breakfast. He insisted it be sectioned, so big Jim would oblige with a smile and section it.

One Saturday morning I came into the cafe for breakfast. The university was hosting a state high school basketball tournament. The cafe was full of high school students. The place was bedlam. Jim was moving as fast as a big old southern boy could move.

In saunters the Venezuelan, and orders breakfast with a grapefruit. In his haste, Jim forgot to section the grapefruit.

Above the din, you could hear the Venezuelan shout "HEY GRINGO". The place went dead silent. The Venezuelan pointed to his grapefruit and demanded it be sectioned.

Jim's face went red. He walked over to the Venezuelan, picked up the grapefruit, and smashed his huge fist into it. Pits and juice squirted up. He set the smashed grapefruit down in front of the Venezuelan and said "Eat this, you S.O.B."

The boss was watching all of this with a big smile. The survival instinct overcame the Venezuelan, and he commenced to spoon up what was left of the grapefruit.

Two elk found exposed to brucellosis in Ruby Mountains

Two elk sampled recently in the Ruby Mountains were found to be seropositive for brucellosis, indicating they've been exposed to the disease. The Ruby Mountains are currently outside but near the boundary of the Montana Department of Livestock's Designated Surveillance Area, an area where livestock brucellosis testing and traceability requirements exist due to the presence of brucellosis in elk.

These seropositive elk were two among 100 elk sampled by Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks in the Ruby Mountains this year. The sampling is part of the ongoing Targeted Elk Brucellosis Surveillance Project. The goal of the project is to determine the presence of brucellosis in elk and understand the movement patterns of elk populations. This research provides important data on the overlap between elk and livestock on the landscape.

"The discovery of brucellosis-exposed elk in the Ruby Mountains emphasizes the importance of elk surveillance near the boundary of the DSA," said Montana State Veterinarian Martin Zaluski. "We appreciate the continued partnership with FWP which helps us identify where livestock are potentially at risk."

Brucellosis is a bacterial disease that infects cattle, bison and elk and can result in abortion or the birth of weak calves. The disease is primarily transmitted through contact with infected birth tissues and fluids.

For more information about brucellosis and the Targeted Elk Brucellosis Surveillance Project, visit fwp.mt.gov/fishAndWildlife/diseasesAndResearch/healthPrograms/brucellosis/.

Last week, 8th graders had their meeting at the high school. If you missed this very important meeting, you will have to go to the high school to get the information. Also, this week, those 8th graders interested in testing for the honors' English program in high school – please call the high school.

These young ladies met Senator Tester, Senator Daines, Senator Kennedy, Congressman Gianforte, the Speaker of the House, and many more. In addition, Olivia and Brooklyn rode the underground train, visited the cloak room, and rode the Senator's only elevator. These ladies proudly represented our school and community of Dillon during their time in Washington D.C. and we couldn't be more proud!
