State Mental Health Administrator In Dillon

The Beaverhead County Mental Health Local Advisory Council hosts the state health department's Addictive and Mental Disorders Division Administrator Zoe Barnard during their regular meeting on Friday, March 13th at noon. The LAC will meet in Dillon on the University of Montana Western's campus on the second floor of the Lucy Carson Library.

Ms. Barnard will address a number of questions regarding the current status of statewide community mental health services, projected changes, and upcoming challenges associated with finding sufficient state budget dollars to address critical gaps in services.

"Beaverhead County was particularly hard hit in Dec 2017, and since, when a number of state human service oriented agencies closed, LAC member Katherine Buckley-Patton said. "Those closures included the Western Montana Mental Health Center, Beaverhead Office of Public Assistance, and Southwest Chemical Dependency (outreach) Office. The mental health center's departure left a huge gap in mental health services for adults and children which we're still dealing with today," she said.

The WMMHC closure affected a wide swath of area residents, including Veterans, who depended on the Center for the adult day treatment program, medication management, mental health therapy, housing services, therapeutic case management, mental health primary care, and a host of other critical community services.

Ms. Barnard will spend time responding to individual questions and concerns raised by those present at the meeting. The AMDD Administrator is a strong advocate for Montanans challenged with mental health and addictive disorders. She will address current services in Beaverhead County, funding, and proposed changes to adult community mental health services.

Anyone interested in gaining updated information on the status of statewide mental health services for adult and children is urged to attend. The meeting is open to the public.

Grizzly bear encounters in Southwest Montana increase from recent years

Recreationists in southwest Montana reported having more encounters with grizzly bears in 2019 than in recent years.

Montana's portion of the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem saw 18 potentially dangerous encounters between humans and grizzly bears mostly in non-residential areas last year. In those encounters, five people were injured and two adult bears were killed. Fortunately, none of the human injuries were fatal. Last year's 18 incidents happened in the Madison, Gravelly, Absaroka and Beartooth mountain ranges, with 14 of them occurring after Sept. 1. Most attacks from grizzly bears happen in surprise close encounters with people. Grizzly bears often attack defensively when encountering people in dense brush or timber, at the site of an animal carcass or when cubs are present.

Grizzly bears are currently listed as threatened under the Endangered Species Act. Management authority rests with the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, working closely in Montana with FWP, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wildlife Services, the U.S. Forest Service and Tribal lands who conduct the investigations and management actions. However, grizzlies have expanded well beyond recovery zones and become more densely populated in southwest Montana. The Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem's grizzly bear population, which includes portions of Montana, Wyoming and Idaho, is estimated conservatively at about 750 bears.

Preparing for 2020

March is typically when bears start emerging from hibernation, and by April, most, if not all, bears are active again. This is also when residents and recreationists are spending more time outside. Residents can help minimize bear attractants by doing a spring cleanup of their yard. Bird feeders, pet food, garbage and other attractants should be stored securely. Bear-resistant garbage containers are available to residents in many areas.

If a bear finds an artificial food source during the bear activity seasons, it is likely to return to the same place to look for food and lose its natural drive to find food in the wild.

Recreationists should always be prepared to handle a bear encounter. Carry bear spray and travel in groups; these two factors proved essential for people who survived bear attacks last year. Casual noise can help alert bears to your presence. Animal carcasses can attract bears, so avoid them. Follow food storage orders, which went into effect on Mar. 1 for public lands in Montana. For more information on avoiding negative encounters with bears, visit igbconline.org/bear-safety.

Southwest Montana Veterans Home Update #40

By Mike Lawson

Greetings once again, to you the Veterans/Communities/Countries of SW Mt., who are the chief organizers and supporters of the SW MT Veterans Home.

It continues to be gratifying to see the progress going on in the four buildings that are standing and being worked on, at our SW MT Vet Home Site. Mark Gollinger and I were very fortunate to walk through all these building, with Carpenter General Foreman John Kotka being our guide. His excitement in showing/explaining the things being done, by the different craftsmen, was catching to say the least. He's on top of everything and has a lot to keep track off. The weather has been on the mild side except for a few days of high wind. Being able to work inside these building, was the saving grace, on those windy days. I did get in contact with Site Construction Superintendent Mike Ascherman, who gave me a good overall assessment for work done this week and for what is to come in the next couple of weeks.

SW MT Vet Home Construction Update:

Community Center: Inside — The activity in this building was impressive, especially with the sheetrock (drywall) that was nailed to the wall studs. There's an incredible amount of sheetrock that needs to be hung. It really looks more and more finished as the sheetrock goes up. Some of the sheet rocked rooms, had the tape and mud applied to the sheetrock (Drywall) joints. Once finished, throughout the building, the painting can take place in the sequence that Superintendent Mike Ascherman, gives them the ok to do so. We continued on our walk through this building and saw see a lot of the HVAC (heating system) ductwork, hanging from the upper ceiling/support structures etc.. Most of the insulation is done as well as the fire painting. All the metal door frames were installed except for two, which came in wrong and replacements are on the way. Storefront window systems are mostly installed with the glass entrance doors scheduled for installation this week. Outside — The outside exterior wall's 3M Air Barrier peel and stick material is completely wrapped around this building, as well as the blue foam insulation board, installed over that. The Carpenters were framing the outside soffits that go from the top of the walls to the edge of the overhanging edge of the roof. Mike Ascherman expected the siding contractors, from Great Falls, to be on the job site this week, to begin the siding process. Anxious to see the color as well as the overall finished look.

Cottage #1; Inside— This building, as GF John Kota explained, is where the big concentration of getting everything completed enough, to enable the Sheet Rock workers (Hangers) in to start hanging sheetrock. The "lid" which is the sheetrock nailed to the bottom of the roof trusses, will be the first order of business, for them. The other important part of the construction is having the man-lift sub-contractor, install the man-lift tracks in each of the resident rooms. (Hopefully next week for sure). The fire painting is completely done. The shower and bath backing are completely framed in. (Big Job!!) The electricians are all over this building, getting their rough-in wiring put in the walls/ceiling/outside/etc.. Mike Ascherman and John Kotka both said that the big push is to get the different building construction sequences completed, so what's happening at the Community Center Building, can also happen here. Outside — With all the outside framing pretty well done, the 3M Air Barrier, peel and stick material is being wrapped around this building. As was said in previous articles, once this material is applied, then the blue foam insulation board is installed over that, followed by the window installation. We could feel GF John Kotka's enthusiastic, concentrated all out push, in getting all the Cottage #1 framing completed. It is happening, as we were privileged witness.

Cottage #2; Inside — This building is going to see more framers and electricians moving from Cottage #1 to here as #1 gets completed. The big push from #1 will continue to Cottage #2, then to Cottage #3 and so on.. With GF John Kotka leading the way, talking a mile a minute on all the going ons, you could feel the momentum of this construction, leaping forward. The fire painting is complete. The never-ending framing of the blocking and the bathroom backing is ongoing. The roofing is completely finished. Next week will probably see big and busy things happening here.
