have the right under the Montana Constitution to observe and participate in local governmental affairs by personally attending all public meetings of the Dillon City Council and other City boards and committees.*

However, please respect that unprecedented public health concerns remain with the COVID-19 virus pandemic. It is likely that more than 10 people will potentially be attending this Special Council Meeting (8 City Council members, the Mayor, and selected staff). The City of Dillon respects the public's right to attend this meeting, but highly recommends that members of the public take public health risks into account when considering whether to personally attend. Like all City of Dillon meetings, a recording of these proceedings will be made and preserved for later public review if desired.

Thank you. Mike Klakken, Mayor

UMW Students Explore Montana Wildlife Research & Careers

Dr. Michelle Anderson, Montana Western biology professor, and four UMW students, Mike Grover, Kayla Coleman, Mark Mastrofina and Will Larson, attended the Montana Chapter of The Wildlife Society (TWS) annual conference in Butte, Mont., held earlier this year.

Montana Western is the only public four-year university in the country to offer Experience One, where students take one course at a time for 18 days, take a short break and then move on to their next course.

According to the TWS website, this year's conference focused on land conservation and what the future holds. The theme centered around the many approaches to habitat conservation, explored successes and challenges from the past, strategies that are currently in place, and future plans.

Student costs were covered by a 2020 Montana Chapter of the Wildlife Society Travel Grant. The UMW students who attended, majoring in Ecology and Environmental Science, participated in a student and professional mixer, while also attending several research presentations. They also competed as a team in the Wildlife Quiz Bowl, where Montana Western came in second place out of five teams. Anderson was also a guest judge of the graduate and undergraduate student presentations from other campuses.

"It is beneficial for our students to meet undergraduate and graduate students engaged in wildlife research across the state, learn about current research in wildlife and natural resource management, and have the opportunity to network with wildlife professionals to explore career opportunities," said Anderson.

The University of Montana Western is the only public four-year university in the country to offer Experience One, where students take one course at a time for 18 days, take a short break and then move on to their next course. Experiential learning opportunities, including conferences, internships, and research projects, provide students at Montana Western with real world experiences and professional connections in their fields of study.

The conference allowed students to interact with attending researchers and learn about upcoming volunteer and internship opportunities, including a Dusky Grouse project and Western Bumblebee study that will each include sampling in Beaverhead County.

Attorney General Fox Urges Online Marketplaces To Prevent Pandemic Price Gouging

Today, Montana Attorney General Tim Fox and other attorneys general urged Amazon, Facebook, eBay, Walmart, and Craigslist to more rigorously monitor price gouging practices by online sellers using their services.

"We want the business community and American consumers to know that we endeavor to balance the twin imperatives of commerce and consumer protection in the marketplace," the attorneys general wrote. "And, while we appreciate reports of the efforts made by platforms and online retailers to crack down on price gouging as the American community faces an unprecedented public health crisis, we are calling on you to do more at a time that requires national unity."

"When consumers can't get reasonably priced products to protect their families and prevent the spread of coronavirus, our communities are at risk for serious health consequences as a result," Fox said. "Online marketplaces aren't exempt from price gouging laws, and companies like Amazon, Facebook, eBay, Craigslist, and Walmart need to step up and do more to prevent sellers from unconscionable mark-ups that violate consumer protection laws," Fox added.

The letter lists several examples of price-gouging on these marketplace platforms, all of which took place just this month:

- On Craigslist, a two-liter bottle of hand sanitizer was listed for $250
- On Facebook Marketplace, an eight-ounce bottle was priced at $40
- On eBay, packs of face masks were listed at $40 and $50

The attorneys general recommend several changes to protect consumers from price gouging:

- Prevent exorbitant price increases from occurring in the first place by setting and enforcing price increase limits based on a 90-day average of the item's price before an emergency begins.
- Trigger price gouging protections prior to an emergency declaration, such as when your systems detect conditions like pending weather events or future possible health risks.
- Implement a complaint portal for consumers to report potential price gouging.

Montana law protects consumers from unfair or deceptive trade practices and price fixing. Earlier this month, Fox warned Montanans of potential coronavirus scams and price gouging. Anyone with coronavirus-related consumer complaints should call the Montana Department of Justice's Office of Consumer Protection at (800) 481-6896 or (406) 444-4500, email contactocp@mt.gov, or file a complaint online.

ARE WE SUFFERING FROM MAGAZINE OVERLOAD?

by Danny Tyree on March 25, 2020

Since "Playboy" recently published its final print issue, and since I'm reading a biography of publishing magnate Conde Nast on my tablet, I felt it appropriate to share my misgivings about magazines.

During the research phase of this column, I developed severe writer's cramp while standing in a bookstore frantically scribbling down the names of the mind-numbing array of specialized-yet-overlapping periodicals. (Luckily, one of the magazines was the April issue of "Your Right to Loiter in A Bookstore If You $#@& Well Please Illustrated.")

Maybe I'm overly nostalgic for the days when millions of Americans watched the same three TV channels and read the same general-interest magazines ("Life," "Look," "Family Circle," "Saturday Evening Pliers for Changing TV Channels," etc.). But I'm alarmed by the wretched excess of niche magazines for every hobby, profession, ethnicity, travel destination, political persuasion, vehicle ashtray model and level of skill at making bridesmaids' lives a living hell.

Don't get me wrong. I love magazines. I'm even one of those people whose eyes are bigger than his stomach and who (with the hope that springs eternal within the human breast) hauls discarded magazines home from the library demonstrably faster than he can read them. ("If we quietly move the bed and the microwave onto the deck and don't do anything to antagonize the heap of magazines, maybe it won't attack us.")

I can't read my scrawled notes, but I think there really was a "Northern Hemisphere Invertebrates Whose Eyes Are Bigger Than Their Stomachs Monthly" on the bookstore's magazine shelves.

Spinoff magazines add to the clutter. There's "Teen Vogue," "Very Interesting Junior," "National Geographic Little Kids." The dental offices of 2035 will doubtless feature late-2020 issues of "AARP Magazine: The In Utero Edition."

I'll admit that some of the magazines sound like they'd make absolutely brilliant ONE-SHOT publications. But, realistically, how can they keep delivering on the hype month after month after month? When the cover of a survivalist magazine touts "25 more essential survival skills," it makes me feel sad for the poor losers who kicked off LAST year (you know, 300 essential survival skills ago!!!!).

It's not just survivalists. Are there REALLY 75 sizzling new sex secrets, 50 all-new kale-and-Pop Tarts recipes, 42 unprecedented mullets and 63 must-have tattoos based on the video game Pong each and every month?

These claims are about as trustworthy as a live-in lover promising you, "Baby, here are 25 MORE exciting reasons you should forget about that gun-in-the-face incident last night and continue letting me crash on the couch all day while you work three jobs to pay for my beer and weed."

I know the ubiquitous "word search" magazines are supposed to keep you mentally sharp, but how sharp is it when the only word you can think of to reply to an internet scam is "Certainly!"?

As a bookworm and writer, I don't want to dash cold water on anyone's love of reading; but it can't be healthy to spend ALL your time indoors curled up with "The Journal of Belly Lint Shaped Like the Lesser-Known 19th-century Vice Presidents." Sometimes you simply have to feel the sunshine, breathe the fresh air and actually gather up the belly lint shaped like...

Sigh Could somebody just locate a subscriber to "Homemade Prison Shivs of the Mid-70s" and let him put Mr. Belly Lint Collector out of his misery?
