AG Fox Asks Federal Agency to Reaffirm State Authority to Regulate Net Metering

Attorney General Tim Fox joined a coalition of 16 attorneys general, the California Energy Commission, and the California Public Utilities Commission in calling on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to reject a petition seeking to end state net metering programs.

The states' protest, filed with FERC Monday, argues that a petition by the so-called "New England Ratepayers Association" (NERA) is unlawful and would improperly overturn nearly 20 years of precedent recognizing state authority to implement net metering programs, including the authority to set rates, terms, and conditions.

"Net metering allows customers who generate their own clean electricity, such as through the use of rooftop solar panels, to lower their retail electricity bill by offsetting the amount of electricity they use with the amount they produce," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "If FERC approves this petition, it could deprive states of a vital clean energy program, financially harm millions of customers, and place thousands of jobs at risk," Fox added.

NERA is a corporate trade association that keeps its members and donors a secret, with a history of opposing state environmental regulation and renewable energy projects. In the protest filing, the states argue that the petition, which asks FERC to assert federal jurisdiction over 45 state net metering programs, would harm ratepayers, disrupt millions of dollars of investment in local power generation, and undermine state clean energy initiatives necessary for achieving emissions goals, many of which are legally mandated.

For nearly 40 years, state laws have allowed net metering or the assessing of retail service charges that reflect a customer's net energy usage during a billing period. In their filing, the states argue that NERA's petition doesn't provide any credible argument or facts that would justify FERC overturning state jurisdiction of net metering programs. The states further point out that NERA's petition is procedurally improper because it asks FERC to decide an issue for which there is no live controversy or uncertainty.

The states also note the critical role that net metering plays in helping states achieve their climate goals by encouraging investment in clean energy generation by all customers including homeowners, small and large businesses, municipalities, and industrial customers. According to the states' protest, the solar industry has created more than 240,000 jobs nationwide, largely due to net metering programs.

State net metering has broad support behind it. Last month, 14 U.S. Senators sent a letter to FERC affirming their strong support of state net metering programs and urging the Commission to reject NERA's petition.

Monday's protest to FERC was led by Massachusetts Attorney General Maura Healey and joined by the attorneys general of California, Connecticut, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Washington, and Wisconsin, as well as the California Energy Commission, and the California Public Utilities Commission.

In addition to the protest, Healey also led a bipartisan coalition of attorneys general from Alaska, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Colorado, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Washington, and Wisconsin in sending a the letter to FERC, urging the commission to deny NERA's petition and to reaffirm the authority of states to regulate net metering.

Camper bitten in possible bear incident in Gallatin County

A woman was bitten by what investigators believe to be a bear while camping last week in Beehive Basin just northwest of Big Sky.

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks was notified of the incident on Friday. According to the victim, she and another person were camping on private land near the Beehive Basin trailhead when they were awakened early Thursday morning by a large animal pushing or "falling" on their tent. The two campers kicked and yelled at the animal to scare it away, and it bit one of them on the leg from outside the tent, then left the campsite. The campers did not see the animal.

Fortunately, the victim's injuries were relatively minor, and she sought prompt medical treatment.

FWP believes it was a bear that bit the woman, based on her account of the animal's behavior and the nature of the bite wound. However, no bear tracks have been found near the trailhead to confirm whether it was a grizzly or a black bear, but the bite wound indicated it was from an adult-age bear.

Initial details of the incident indicate the bear's behavior was likely investigative, not predatory, and that the bite was defensive. The victim reported that their food was stored securely in their vehicle, not in the tent, and that they were wearing clean clothes.

FWP will be monitoring the area closely with other agencies for potentially hazardous bear behavior. FWP has worked with the U.S. Forest Service to add signs warning other recreationists in the area of the recent bear activity. This incident is still under investigation.

FWP reminds recreationists to be cautious and prepared for a bear encounter when recreating in Montana. Some recommended precautions for avoiding negative encounters with bears include:

- Be aware of your surroundings and look for bear sign.
- Carry and know how to use bear spray.
- Stay away from animal carcasses.
- Travel in groups and make noise whenever possible.
- Follow U.S. Forest Service food storage regulations.
- If you encounter a bear, never approach it. Back away slowly and leave the area.
- If a bear approaches your tent, make your presence known gradually. If it attempts to enter your tent, fight back.

For more information on staying safe in bear country, visit http://fwp.mt.gov/fishAndWildlife/livingWithWildlife/beBearAware.

Fungus that causes white-nose syndrome found in eastern Montana

Samples taken from bridges in three eastern Montana counties have tested positive for the fungus that causes white-nose syndrome (WNS) in bats. The presence of the fungus – Pseudogymnoascus destructans (Pd) – was confirmed in Daniels, Richland and Fallon counties but does not necessarily confirm the presence of the disease. The samples were tested by the USGS National Wildlife Health Center in Madison, WI. National Health Center and Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks staff are closely monitoring the situation and further testing will be conducted.

"We are disappointed but not at all surprised at this finding," said FWP's Nongame Wildlife Management Bureau Chief Lauri Hanauska-Brown. "As the fungus and this deadly disease have moved across the states we knew it was only a matter of time."

Pd is a powdery white fungus that grows on the skin of hibernating bats, often on the face – hence the name "white nose." The fungus causes a number of problems, one of which is that it irritates bats, causing them to arouse early from hibernation and search for water and food. Food is obviously scarce in winter, and this early arousal can exhaust fat stores that bats need to survive the winter.

"We are hopeful that Montana bats will not be hit too badly by this disease as we know they are an incredibly important part of our ecosystem with their voracious appetite for pesky insects like mosquitoes and agricultural pests," Hanauska-Brown said.

Last month the North Dakota Game and Fish Department reported a cluster of Myotis lucifugus (known as the "little brown bat") deaths from WNS just over the Montana border. Of the 20 dead bats, six were submitted to the USGS National Wildlife Health Center in Madison, WI, for analysis. The bats all tested positive for Pd and WNS.

WNS has been in North America since at least 2006, killing an estimated 6.7 million bats. It has been confirmed in 35 states and seven Canadian provinces. It can wipe out entire colonies of bats and has caused dramatic population declines in eastern states.

FWP has temporarily prohibited the capture of all live bats due to unknown risks of COVID-19-infected humans inadvertently transferring the virus to bats. To substitute for sampling of live bats, biologists are collecting bat droppings at eastern Montana roosts.

Fun in the Sun Day Camps

These are all day camps for children entering Kindergarten through 6th grade for the 2019-20 school year. The children are engaged in fun, active, and intellectual games and activities throughout the day. Each week the children will explore a theme and towards the end of the week, they will take a field trip to further enhance that theme. Because of the pandemic, the Y was forced to limit campers and camp is full. We are sorry for any inconvenience this has caused!

Summer Swim Lessons

Summer swim lesson #2 starts June 15th.
Summer swim lesson #3 starts July 6th.
Summer swim lesson #4 starts July 20th.
Lessons fill quickly so call or stop by the YMCA for more information today.

Child Watch

YMCA Blood Drive

Your blood is needed more than you may think. Every two seconds someone in the U.S. needs blood. Make an appointment for June 30th by calling 1-800-RED-CROSS.

Summer Pool Schedule

The pools are open, please call or stop by the YMCA for lap swimming, recreational swimming, and aquatic group exercise times.

Strong Family Campaign

Exercise your heart in more ways than one, give and join!
