GUILTY OF NEGLIGENT HOMICIDE

Joseph McNamara has received a guilty verdict in a case that many of you have followed or heard about from July 7, 2019 in Hamilton, MT. A case of hit and run that left a 9 year old boy Robert Leonardi dead went before the jury that took about 6 hours to reach the decision of guilty on several charges related to the case.

The boy's father watched him leave his house on a scooter as he headed to a friend's house. Robert was attempting to cross Gold Course Road when he was hit by a van traveling at 55 mph in a 35 mph zone driven by McNamara.

McNamara did not stop. He told the jury that he had been threatened at gun point while driving by someone he didn't know and when driving up Golf Course Road "all of a sudden - bam. I had a horrible day."

McNamara said he was going to turn himself in but he went home to build a bicycle to use to get to a lawyer's office first. He told the court that he had an extensive criminal and drug history.

The blood test that was done the day of the accident was positive for methamphetamine.

The Chief Deputy Ravalli County Attorney Angela Wetzsteon crossed examined McNamara and asked one question.

"So what you're telling us today is that you had a bad day," Wetzsteon said.

"Extremely," McNamara answered.

In her closing, Wetzsteon agreed this case wasn't about whether McNamara was likable.

Instead, she said the jury needed to focus on whether he was believable. The evidence that was presented does not support his testimony, Wetzsteon said.

McNamara's choices that day led to this, she said.

"As Robert started that day playing a card game with his family, the defendant began his day drinking alcohol with breakfast," Wetzsteon said. "As Robert watched the World Cup soccer game with his family, the defendant was using methamphetamine."

"As Robert made the decision to head to his buddy's house next door ... the defendant made a choice to stop at Town Pump and buy a Coors Light," she said. "When Robert made that loop in the driveway in front of his dad, the defendant was leaving Town Pump."

"As Robert headed toward his friend's house, the defendant picked up his phone to call Andrea Golie to continue their fight."

"And while Robert lay on the ground with Phil holding him and saying 'I got you,' the defendant ran away," she said.

"Robert never had a chance," Wetzsteon said. "And I say that because that's what the evidence shows us. 'The defense expert wants to say that visibility has no bearing on this case and I'm telling you it has everything to do with this case,'" she said. "The defendant is distracted. He's angry. He had used methamphetamine. He's driving over 60 mph. He had almost 10 seconds to see Robert and he does nothing about it."

McNamara continues to be held on no bond. Sentencing is expected in six to eight weeks.

Fire, flood restrictions change at FWP's south central Montana properties

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks added fire restrictions to all of its properties in Yellowstone County last week, but lifted traffic restrictions at many of its fishing access sites along the Yellowstone River in south central Montana.

FWP posted limits on campfires and other burning at all of its properties in Yellowstone County after the county commissioners adopted Stage 1 fire restrictions.

Stage 1 restrictions ban campfires except where specifically exempted and allow smoking only in vehicles and areas three feet in diameter that are cleared of flammable materials. FWP has no exemptions for campfires in fishing access sites and wildlife management areas in south central Montana. People still may cook on an LP gas or propane stove that can be turned on and off.

The fire restrictions are in response to predictions of dry, warm weather that could increase the danger of human-caused wildfires. They will be in effect until further notice.

Earlier this month FWP restricted traffic to walk-in only at many of its fishing access sites along the Yellowstone River after flood waters crossed roads and filled camp spots, parking areas and toilets. Flood waters since have receded and vehicle traffic is allowed at fishing access sites including Indian Fort at Reed Point, Buffalo Mirage at Park City, Duck Creek west of Billings and Captain Clark near Waco.

Gritty Stone and Voyagers Rest fishing access sites near Worden and Bundy Bridge at Pompeys Pillar remain closed to all but walk-in traffic because of extremely muddy and silted conditions, damaged roads and flooded toilets. Those restrictions will remain in place until conditions improve and necessary repairs are made.

Montanans should be prepared for encounters with bears

Grizzly bear populations continue to become denser and more widespread in Montana, increasing the likelihood that residents and recreationists will encounter them in new places each year.

That means being prepared for such encounters is more important than ever, both to keep people and property safe and to cultivate healthy bear behavior.

In a recent example, Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks became aware of a video depicting a bear in the Highwood Mountains, east of Great Falls. The bear was seen near the U.S. Forest Service boundary along Thain Creek. It's possible the bear was a grizzly, which would make this an early sighting of grizzlies in this area. FWP cannot confirm the species of the bear based on the video footage, but it is investigating the sighting. Black bears are observed in this area regularly, and grizzly bears could also be present.

Grizzly bears in the lower 48 states are currently listed as threatened under the Endangered Species Act. Management authority for grizzlies rests with the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, working closely in Montana with FWP, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wildlife Services, the Forest Service and Tribal lands. This collaboration happens through the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee.

Several grizzly bear recovery areas exist in or near Montana, including the Selkirk, Cabinet-Yaak, Northern Continental Divide, Bitterroot and Greater Yellowstone ecosystems.

Grizzlies are expanding beyond these recovery zones and arriving in places where Montanans may not be used to seeing them. This signals progress in the recovery of the species, but it also creates new challenges for people who live, work and recreate in these areas. However, there are many steps people can take to reduce conflicts and negative encounters with grizzlies and black bears.

What you can do

Residents can help by removing or securing potential bear attractants around their property. Bird feeders, pet food, garbage and other attractants should be stored securely. Bear-resistant garbage containers are available to residents in many areas. Chickens and other small livestock should be properly secured with electric fencing.

Recreationists and people who work outdoors should always be prepared to handle a bear encounter. Most bear attacks on humans happen in surprise close encounters. Activities that are deliberately quiet or fast moving, such as hunting, mountain biking or trail running, put people at greater risk for surprising a bear.

For more information on avoiding negative encounters with bears, visit igbconline.org/bear-safety.
