Big Sky Region Rodeo

The University of Montana Western will be hosting a home Big Sky Region Rodeo this weekend Sept. 18-19

For the safety of our student-athletes, we will be limiting fans to only guests of UMW Rodeo student-athletes and coaches.

The rodeo Friday and Saturday nights will be live-streamed on www.umwbulldogs.com/watch

We understand that this is not an ideal situation. But we are grateful for an opportunity to compete this weekend.

We appreciate the support that we receive from the community. We are doing our best to make it through this difficult year. We know how much everyone enjoys attending the college rodeo. We will make it through this year so can hopefully come back even stronger for the rodeo next fall. Thank you again for all your support and understanding, we could not continue through all this without you.

Montana Department of Transportation Issues new load postings for MT 43 Joseph Creek Bridges in Beaverhead County

The Montana Department of Transportation (MDT) recently issued new load postings for the MT 43 Joseph Creek Bridges between Lost Trail Pass and Wisdom in Beaverhead County. Bridge 05858 is 22 miles west of Wisdom. Bridge 05859 is 21 miles west of Wisdom, and Bridge 05860, 19 miles west of Wisdom. The postings are part of a multi-year effort to update load ratings and postings on Montana bridges as mandated by the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA).

The FHWA mandate is in response to changes in the trucking industry over the last decade. Truck manufacturers are building specialized hauling vehicles (SHVs), which are capable of legally carrying heavier loads than typical vehicles have in the past. SHVs are single-unit, short-wheelbase, multiple-axle trucks commonly used in the construction, waste management, bulk cargo and commodities hauling industries. Often times one or more axles can be raised or lowered as needed to comply with statutory weight limitations.

These SHV configurations concentrate heavy loads over a short length, and they have been found to overstress bridges beyond what was previously modeled by standard commercial vehicles. To account for their increasing presence and ensure safe operation, FHWA has determined that all states must include these new, short, heavy vehicles when evaluating the safe limits of bridge capacity.

To comply with the mandate, MDT is currently updating load ratings for 4,500 public bridges across the state, including approximately 2,500 owned and maintained by MDT. This effort is expected to take about four years to complete.

Gallatin River to close temporarily near Nixon Bridge

A small section of the Gallatin River will be closed to recreationists next week during a phase of construction on Nixon Bridge, just north of Manhattan.

The closure will be in effect on Sept. 21 and 22, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day. The closure includes the section of the Gallatin River immediately surrounding Nixon Bridge, as well as Nixon Gulch Road. During this time, construction crews will lift and set the 122-foot-long concrete beams from the transport vehicles. Only beams for the south bridge span will be set during this time.

For more information about this project, contact the project engineers with Stahly Engineering, Kathy Thompson or Nate Peressini, at 406-522-8594.

Low flows trigger fishing closure on portion of Big Hole River

A full fishing closure is now in place for a portion of the Big Hole River due to low flows.

The closure extends 46 river miles from the Saginaw Bridge on Skinner Meadows Road upstream to the North Fork of the Big Hole River. Flows in this area have dropped below the 20-cubic-feet-per-second threshold for a full angling closure, as directed by the Big Hole Watershed Committee Drought Plan.

This closure will remain in place until flows remain above 40 cubic feet per second for seven consecutive days, or until Oct. 31.

Restrictions of this nature are designed to protect fish, such as Arctic grayling and trout, which become more susceptible to disease and mortality when conditions such as low flows and high temperatures combine with additional stressors. This area was previously under a hoot-owl fishing restriction until Aug. 27 due to high water temperatures.

Updates to fishing restrictions, closures and reopenings can be found at fwp.mt.gov/news/restrictions/waterClosure.html.

Letter to the Editor

Do you suffer from P.C.S.?? Political Commercial Syndrome! Don't all those commercials drive you crazy? Every other commercial is political fabrication. He said, she said, they said, somebody said, nobody said, he lied, she lied, everybody lied, he's too liberal, he's too conservative....on and on!

Crazy! Crazy! You know who you were going to vote for before any of the commercials were on television. Why don't they tell us some real facts?

From now until election day we will hear the woes, the lies, the outlandish stories from the Democrats and Republicans. try to persuade us, confuse us, bait us, make our lives down right irritable.

You already know not much will get done for progress. The good parts will be torn down by the other side, while the other side is digging up dirt that was already dirty before they started.

They will confuse us with numbers, with names, with charts, with tears in their eyes and with phony smiles.

When they get all through, (but they never do), they make you feel ashamed of being an American. They make you feel ashamed that these so called grown up people are less than adults.

I can't wait for election day..but it never comes!

Drainpipe cause of New Zealand mudsnails at FWP fish hatchery

Since New Zealand mudsnails were detected at Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks' Bluewater Fish Hatchery Tuesday, Aug. 18, the department continues to look at whether infected fish were stocked at lakes or reservoirs and what led to the infestation.

The Bluewater Fish Hatchery, located near Bridger in southcentral Montana, is a trout hatchery and is the third largest production facility in the state. This is the first time New Zealand Mudsnails (NZM) have been found at an FWP hatchery.

The likely cause of the infestation is a drainpipe from the hatchery that drains into neighboring Bluewater Creek, which is positive for NZM. The operating procedures for the hatchery call for the pipe to be elevated above the creek, but over the years, the pipe has become submerged. NZM were likely able to make their way up the pipe and into the hatchery.

New Zealand mudsnails are an aquatic invasive species. It was first discovered in Montana in 1995 in the Madison River above Hebgen Lake Reservoir. Since then, New Zealand mudsnails have been detected in multiple locations across the state. NZM can be eaten by fish and other animals, like birds, but unlike native snails, they are undigestible and can be spread by fish and wildlife into other waterbodies.

In a confined facility, like a fish hatchery, NZM can be quickly eradicated and the facility decontaminated. However, due to the detection, the fish at the hatchery – about 20,000 pounds – were euthanized and disposed of. FWP had about $85,000 into rearing the fish. FWP staff are working on a containment and mitigation strategy.

The plan is to make up the losses from Bluewater with surplus fish from FWP hatcheries.

Prior to this detection the Bluewater hatchery had contributed to relatively few releases in 2020, all of them into state/public waters. Monitoring for New Zealand mudsnails and other invasive species will continue in these waters and others.

All hatcheries in Montana are inspected annually for AIS and fish pathogens. The mudsnails at Bluewater Fish Hatchery were detected during the hatchery's annual inspection.

To help prevent the spread of AIS, people working and recreating in and around our waterways must practice clean, drain, dry. For more information on AIS, please go online to CleanDrainDryMT.com.

HANG GLIDERS

By "Swede" Troedsson

From about the mid-1970s through the 1980s, we were using the Dillon Flying Service's Cessna 206 to transport patients from Dillon to higher care facilities in Missoula, Great Falls, and Salt Lake City. Ground transport to Missoula ate up eight hours of our time, when you factor in driving (340 miles round trip), time spent in the receiving ER, refueling, and a stop at a cafe to get a bite to eat. Transport by air took only three hours.

One of our trips to Missoula was to transport a migrant worker with a broken back. He had been helping hang a gate on the Briggs Ranch in Dell, when the gate fell over on him. He had been brought in to Barrett Hospital by the Lima ambulance.

The trip was uneventful until we approached Hell Gate Canyon, just east of the Missoula Airport. Andre Morris, our pilot, asked me to look out the plane window. Ahead of us were two hang gliders. We passed BETWEEN both hang gliders! Only about 100 feet separated us from each of the hang gliders! I wonder if they felt our wake turbulence?

The hang gliders had launched from Mt. Sentinel, a popular launching area for hang gliders because of the great updraft when the prevailing wind slams into it from the west. After we landed, and transferred the patient into a waiting ambulance, Andre went up into the FAA control tower and filed an incident report.

Andre told me that this was not the first complaint about the hang gliders from private and commercial pilots. Our approach through Hell Gate canyon was on a major airway route for aircraft approaching Missoula from the east.

Andre later told me that the FAA had a serious discussion with the hang glider club.
