William Myles Else, 62

William Myles Else, 62 of Dillon, Montana passed away at his home in Dillon on September 23, 2020. He was born in Butte, Montana on May 10, 1958 to Lester and Clementina (Carpenter) Else. A full notice will follow. A guestbook is available online at www.brundagefuneralhome.com.

Forest Service personnel urge caution from 'hazard trees' falling unexpectedly

A hazard tree has structural defects that make it likely to fall without warning. Structural defects are caused by beetle kill, age, fire, disease and other factors. Falling hazard trees pose a risk to public safety, in the forest on trails and at campsites. Fallen trees may partial or totally block trails and roads.

This time of year, storm fronts include gusty winds and snow and ice increasing the risk that hazard trees will fall.

Recreation and trail crews on the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest report that many of the trails and roads have been cleared multiple times. All visitors to the National Forest should be prepared for downed trees on trails and roads. Please locate camps in safe locations away from hazard trees. Always be aware of your surroundings and look up while on trails. Avoid the timbered areas when it is windy and avoid camping in dense patches of dead trees.

30 E. Bannack 683-3548Letter to the Editor

Thank you Val Neeley for responding to my letter to the editor regarding the solar project on Ten Mile Road.

You have asked some very good questions. What do other states do to entice businesses with incentives? That, I cannot answer definitively but I would guess it varies state by state. And, yes investors invest to make money and benefit from profits. I have no quarrel with that but I believe we must look at how all of this impacts Beaverhead County.

First, Clenera is getting huge tax breaks from both depreciation and federal subsidies. At this point I have no information as to Clenera requesting tax abatement from the State of Montana directly, only requesting tax abatement incentives from Beaverhead County.

This brings us to Beaverhead County, but first of all let us look at what the definition of economic development is. Economic development is a process of targeted activities and programs that work to improve the economic wellbeing and quality of life of a community by building local wealth, diversifying the economy, creating and retaining jobs, and building the local tax base.

There will be an initial economic impact from the construction of this project during the period of it being built. Clenera generally works with their contractor to do their construction. There might be some work for subcontractors and a few local employees. There also will be a boost to the local motels, restaurants and other businesses but once the initial building of this solar facility is finished, so is the majority of the economic boost.

- The economic wellbeing and building quality of life for our community by building local wealth is gone.
- The diversity of the economy is pretty much not there.
- Creating and retaining jobs – Creating, initially, yes, retaining long term, no. Clenera will not commit as to if there will be any long term employees here, nor how many. They did state that there might be one to four employees at some point but are vague on this point. Even four employees will not justify or offset $12 million + - in lost revenue.
- Building a local tax base. Yes, it creates a local tax base, which they do not want to pay. Instead they only want to pay 25% of the taxes assessed.

There is only one economic building block, long term, to benefit Beaverhead County and that is the local tax base. They need to pay their fair share.

We, local residents, do not get tax abatements or incentives to live here. We live here because we love the area, work in the area, and are a part of this community and this is home to us. Clenera will have a presence here in large facility, but without any community loyalty or involvement. I think we must look at this very closely as to the full impact of this project and their unwillingness to pay their fair share of taxes to support Beaverhead County.

RATS

By "Swede" Troedsson

During 1954 - 1955 I was stationed in Korea with the First Marine Division. Part of my duties was manning outposts along the DMZ (38th parallel). We pulled rotating 30 day shifts, living in bunkers and tents, and serving as an early detection system should the North Koreans decide to "jump the line".

The area was heavily populated with rats. Lots of rats. BIG RATS! (Dan Pence, who served with the Army in Korea, recalls the rats being "as big as cats") With the numerous rice paddies, and decomposing bodies, they had a plentiful food base.

Some of these rats carried fleas which could transmit a hemorrhagic fever virus. This virus would damage the walls of tiny blood vessels. In fatal cases, the victim would internally hemorrhage to death. The sclera (whites of the eyes) would turn flaming red just prior to death. Capt. Black, our Company Commanding Officer (C.O.), survived this infection.

I had a pet dog and taught her to sleep on the foot of my cot so as to keep the rats off me. At night, prior to turning out the light, leftovers from food packages from home would be stored in .50 cal. ammo cans so rats would not demolish the food.

One of the men in our bunker was a "White Russian" named Issador Riggalo. One night I awoke to Issador shouting and cursing. When I shined my flashlight on Issador, he was sitting upright on his cot. Blood was trickling down the bridge of his nose. Issador explained that he awoke to something warm lying on his forehead. When he reached up to grab it, a rat bit him.

Another night, in our bunker, I awoke to a snuffling and scrabbling noise next to my cot. I shined my flashlight on the source of the noise. The noise came from a large rat caught by its nose in a rat trap. I pounded it to death with the butt end of my M-1 rifle.

One night I was returning to my company area from a patrol. On my way back to my tent, I passed by the communications bunker, which was manned 24/7. Lantern light shown through the entry way. I heard pistol shots from inside the bunker. When I peeked into the bunker, I could see the shadow of a large rat running across one of the bunker beams. The duty radioman, out of pure boredom, would track the rat with his .45 pistol, shoot, and usually miss. Sand would trickle out of the bullet hole in the sandbag.

Oh, well, at least the rats were providing entertainment for a bored radioman!

The 2020 Census deadline

The 2020 Census deadline is right around the corner on September 30 and we want to make sure you get counted!

The Census ensures that we have accurate resources for the programs Montanans depend on. Montana receives nearly $3 billion because of an accurate count to affordable housing, nutrition assistance, education, health services, and so much more. Even just a 1% undercount could cost Montana nearly $300 million for these critical services over the next decade.

Not only that, but our democracy depends on an accurate Census count. Both federal and state redistricting is determined by the Census and because of our population growth we stand to gain an additional Congressional seat.

The Census is convenient, private, and required by the constitution. 2020 is the first year that the US Census will be collected online. The Census will never ask for your bank account, social security, or credit card number and your personal information will not be shared outside of the U.S. Census Bureau.

Attorney General Fox Announces Settlement with Surgical Mesh Manufacturer

Attorney General Tim Fox today announced a multistate settlement with C.R. Bard, Inc., and its parent company Becton, Dickinson and Company requiring payment of $60 million to 48 states for the deceptive marketing of transvaginal surgical mesh devices. Montana alleged that C.R. Bard misrepresented or failed to adequately disclose serious and life-altering risks of surgical mesh devices, such as chronic pain, scarring and shrinking of bodily tissue, painful sexual relations, and recurring infections, among other complications.

Surgical mesh is a synthetic knitted or woven fabric that is permanently implanted in the pelvic floor to treat pelvic organ prolapse and stress urinary incontinence. These are common conditions faced by women due to a weakening in their pelvic floor muscles caused by childbirth, age, and other factors. Although use of surgical mesh is not proven to be more effective than traditional tissue repair, millions of women were implanted with these devices; many experienced complications like erosion of mesh through organs, pain during sexual intercourse, and voiding dysfunction.

"This settlement marks the second time my attorneys general colleagues and I have held companies accountable for placing profit before patient safety by using deceptive marketing tactics for their surgical mesh products," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "Failure to warn consumers about possible life-altering health risks related to surgical products is unacceptable, and a clear violation of our state consumer protection laws. Today's announcement is an acknowledgement of the pain thousands of American women implanted with surgical mesh have suffered as a result of these devices, and a step forward for future patients, who will now be able to make informed decisions thanks to the transparency stipulated in the settlement," Fox added.

Last fall, Fox announced a $116.9 million multistate settlement with Johnson & Johnson and Ethicon, Inc. for their deceptive marketing of transvaginal surgical mesh devices. Under that settlement, Montana received $1,460,022 to be used by the Office of Consumer Protection for education, investigations, and enforcement of Montana's consumer protection laws.

Although C.R. Bard stopped selling transvaginal mesh, the settlement provides injunctive relief, requiring both C.R. Bard and Becton, Dickinson and Company to adhere to certain injunctive terms if they reenter the transvaginal mesh market.

Under the terms of the settlement, the companies are required to:

- Provide patients with understandable descriptions of complications in marketing materials.
- Include a list of certain complications in all marketing materials that address complications.
- Disclose complications related to the use of mesh in any training provided that includes risk information.
- Disclose sponsorship in clinical studies, clinical data, or preclinical data for publication.
- Refrain from citing to any clinical study, clinical data, or preclinical data regarding mesh, for which the company has not complied with the disclosure requirements.
- Require consultants to agree to disclose in any public presentation or submission for publication Bard's sponsorship of the contracted for activity.
- Register all Bard-sponsored clinical studies regarding mesh with ClinicalTrials.gov.
- Train independent contractors, agents, and employees who sell, market, or promote mesh, regarding their obligations to report all patient complaints and adverse events to the company.
- Ensure its patient complaints reporting practices are consistent with FDA requirements.

Montana's total share of the settlement is expected to be $639,966, which will be used for ongoing consumer protection work. The money will be paid over a one-year period; the first of three payments will be made next month.
