UMW Ranked Among Top 50 Universities for Teaching and Education Degrees

Learn.org recently ranked the University of Montana Western in the top 50 universities for education and teaching degrees in the United States.

Since 2003, Learn.org has been dedicated to helping millions of students and working professionals research potential schools, degrees and careers by providing reliable and practical answers to their most critical questions.

To help potential educators find the best education/ teaching programs in the United States, the team at Learn. org gathered data and conducted research to identify some of the best schools for education and teaching degrees. Learn. org searched stats available from the U.S. Department of Education as well as looked at the details offered by the schools themselves. The result was a list of schools that all offer a range of degrees for both those looking to prepare for a teaching career as well as for those looking to add a specialty area, advance their career, or move into education administration. Besides looking at their program offerings, Learn.org also looked at things like their extracurricular activity options, school of education facilities, hands-on training options and field experiences, and partnerships with local school districts.

The University of Montana Western ranked 18 on the list and was the only university from Montana to be featured. To view the full list of schools, visit Learn.org.

"The University of Montana Western is impressively home to the oldest education program in the state, and students can take part in small classes and a fantastic Experience One block scheduling system that allows for more focus on individual courses. Many education programs are available here, including two associate's degrees, 16 bachelor's degrees, and three certificate programs, some of which include an Associate of Applied Science in Early Childhood Education, Bachelor of Science in Biology and Secondary Education, and a Certificate in Physical Education and Health K-12. This school in Dillon, MT, also sponsors a unique X-Camp, which is an educational camp for kids held every summer, and students can gain teaching experience by joining in the program," the article stated.

To learn more about Montana Western's in-person and fully online degrees in Education, call 877-683-7331.

The fields of academic study at Montana Western include Biology, Business and Technology, Environmental Sciences, Education, English, Equine Studies, Health and Human Performance, Fine Arts, Mathematics and History, Philosophy and Social Sciences.

Students at the University of Montana Western enjoy a tight-knit community atmosphere and small class sizes where they work closely with peers and professors alike. Montana

Western focuses on serving students, achieving academic excellence, and promoting experiential education. The 20-acre campus is an excellent choice for students to take advantage of the immersive learning opportunities offered by the nation's only Experience One program, where they can build on critical and creative thinking skills to prepare for real-world job and graduate school opportunities. With Experience One, students at Montana Western take one course at a time for 18 days, take a short break and then move on to their next course. By utilizing block scheduling combined with immersive learning, UMW is the only public four-year university in the country to employ this model that is focused on student success.

For more information about Experience One and the University of Montana Western, or to schedule a visit, call 877-683-7331 or visit www.umwestern.edu.

FWP seeks public comment on Montana Forest Legacy Program updates

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks is seeking public comment on updates to the Montana Forest Legacy Program's Assessment of Need document.

The Forest Legacy Program, which is administered by the U.S. Forest Service and managed by FWP, provides funding for conserving high-value working forests. Montana forest values conserved by the program include wildlife habitat, sawmill timber and other forest products, public access for recreation, watersheds for municipalities and irrigation, cultural and aesthetic values, and other social and ecological benefits.

FWP recently updated the Assessment of Need, which is the foundational document for operating Forest Legacy in Montana. This document provides an overview of the program's status and accomplishments, a summary of Montana's forests and program priorities, and a layout of program eligibility requirements, application and review processes, and ongoing program operating details. FWP staff drafted the document with input from two advisory committees and agency partners.

"We are pleased to release this Assessment of Need for public review," said FWP Director Martha Williams. "The Forest Legacy Program has been a huge contributor to conserving over 260,000 acres of forested habitats in Montana, benefiting communities, wildlife, public recreation, timber jobs, clean water, and so many other values that are important to the state and its visitors."

The program began operating in Montana in 2000 and has since supported 243,000 acres of conservation easements and 18,000 acres of fee title acquisitions, the latter managed by FWP as Wildlife Management Areas. The Forest Legacy Program is funded from offshore oil and gas lease earnings through the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

The Assessment of Need is intended to complement the Montana Forest Action Plan, which was released last week also for public review. To view the Assessment of Need, visit: http://fwp.mt.gov/fishAndWildlife/habitat/wildlife/programs/forestLegacy.html.

The draft Assessment of Need is available for 30-day public review, from Oct. 1 through Oct. 30, 2020. FWP will edit the draft assessment in response to public input that improves the document and the program's future operation. The Assessment of Need will then be submitted to the U.S. Forest Service for final approval by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture by the end of December 2020. Once approved, the document will provide general program direction for Forest Legacy in Montana for the foreseeable future, replacing the original 2000 Assessment of Need.

Comments can be submitted through the program's website or mailed to Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks, c/o Rick Northrup, P.O. Box 200701, Helena, MT 59620, or emailed to rnorthrup@mt.gov

For more information about Forest Legacy, please contact Rick Northrup, FWP's Wildlife Habitat Bureau Chief, at 406-444-5633.

RMEF Commits $300,000 to Defeat Colorado's Proposition 114

The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation committed more than $300,000 toward efforts to defeat a dangerous 2020 ballot initiative to forcibly introduce wolves into Colorado. In addition to the significant funding for multiple forms of educational outreach, RMEF also contributed in-kind donations of staffing and video production as well as member donations.

"This is not just about simply checking a box on a ballot. Proposition 114 would have significant, long-lasting, detrimental impacts on both wildlife and Coloradans," said Kyle Weaver, RMEF president and CEO. "We are doing everything in our power to help educate Colorado voters about the very real costs that a forced introduction of an apex predator would have on wildlife management, wildlife populations, the hunting industry, ranchers and the pocketbooks of taxpayers who will be left to foot the bill."

Why RMEF cares:

- Colorado is home to North America's largest elk herd.
- Since 1987, RMEF and its partners completed 790 conservation and hunting heritage outreach projects in Colorado with a combined value of more than $178.2 million. These projects protected or enhanced 469,886 acres of habitat and opened or improved public access to 122,107 acres.
- RMEF and its partners recently granted $2,571,838 in 2020 funding to benefit elk, scientific research and wildlife habitat enhancement in Colorado.
- RMEF has more members in Colorado (nearly 17,000) than any other state.

"It is also important to understand the same out-of-state environmental groups funding this forced wolf introduction also filed lawsuit after lawsuit to try to stop management of wolves in the Northern Rockies. It took an act of Congress to finally stop them," added Weaver. "One of those groups also filed a lawsuit just last summer seeking to force the government to introduce grizzly bears into Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, Arizona (including the Grand Canyon) and six other states."

Additional points:

- Wolves are already confirmed on the ground in northwest Colorado with at least one wolf pup spotted by a biologist.
- Colorado currently has a wolf management plan in place for

- naturally migrating wolves.
- Colorado's professional wildlife managers spent $1 million studying wolf introduction over the years and rejected the idea four different times.
- A forced introduction would cost $6 million in new spending during a time when COVID-19 impacts forced lawmakers to compensate for $3 billion in state budget losses that included massive cuts to education.
- Proponents are offering zero dollars in funding for actual wolf introduction/management.
- In 2018 alone, Wyoming taxpayers paid $1.5 million for wolf management while Washington taxpayers paid $1.2 million. The same would follow in Colorado.
- As they did in the Northern Rockies, wolves would spread far and wide across Colorado, into Rocky Mountain National Park and into surrounding states.
- Of the 17 Colorado elk management units already under population objective, 13 of those are in the western or southwestern part of the state.
- Of the 47 deer management units that are under objective, 41 of those are west of the Divide.
- Wolves will severely impact Colorado's fledgling moose population currently estimated at only 3,000.
- Wolves will negatively impact farming and ranching, livestock and pets.
- Proponents used more than $1 million in out-of-state funding to get the measure on the ballot. They also used an out-of-state firm (Utah) to oversee the effort.
