UMW Chancellor Beth Weatherby announces retirement after 30 years in higher ed

University of Montana Western Chancellor Beth Weatherby has announced that she will retire following the May 1 Commencement after nearly 30 years in higher education.

"I arrived when Experience One was in its 10th year. The faculty and staff had put so much hard work into creating this program to distinguish Montana Western from all others in public higher education," said Weatherby. "My role has been to tell the story more widely, muster more support and resources to ensure that we sustain this university into the future, and position the university to build upon its tremendous promise. Montana Western, with the support of its friends and admirers, is poised to be recognized as a national leader in experiential education."

The university has just completed a new strategic plan for 2020-2026 titled "Building on the Promise of Experience One."

Weatherby took the helm of UMW after 22 years at Southwest Minnesota State University in Marshall, Minnesota, where she served as an English Department faculty member and director of an acclaimed creative writing program; Dean of the College of Arts, Letters, and Sciences; and finally, as Provost and Vice President for Academic and Student Affairs. She is an award-winning writer, having received her undergraduate degree from Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism, and her doctorate in English from the University at Albany, New York.

"Chancellor Weatherby has created strong relationships and partnerships both in the community and across the state," said Commissioner of Higher Education Clayton Christian. "She has promoted the university and enhanced its reputation in Montana and nationally and has made great progress toward her goal of ensuring the university's sustainability into the future."

During Weatherby's tenure as Chancellor of UMW, the university opened new programs including Glass, Farm and Ranch Operations, Outdoor Guide and Wildlife Outfitters Management; developed teacher preparation partnerships with Blackfeet Community College and Little Big Horn College; and expanded partnerships with the Montana Center for Horsemanship, Pima Medical Institute, and the Montana Youth Challenge Academy.

"I believe that the most lasting impact from my work here will result from the Experience One Campaign," Weatherby said. "Working with Executive Director Roxanne Engellant and the Foundation Board, we are gaining momentum in support of scholarships, the Fund for Experience One, and a Sports and Activities Complex that will benefit the entire community."

Weatherby and her husband, Dr. Steve Kramer, initiated the Fund for Experience One shortly after their arrival in Dillon to support the development of creative and innovative experiential learning opportunities.

The Experience One Campaign, still in its silent phase, has generated the largest cash gifts in the history of the university.

"Montanans are grateful that UMW, which originated as the state's Normal College, has made an enormous contribution to the development of Montana, preparing excellent teachers and school leaders for nearly 130 years," said Weatherby. "Friends of the university appreciate and support our focus on innovative teaching and learning, and mutually beneficial community partnerships. Working together is always what works best."

Commissioner Christian noted that details will be provided soon regarding the process for finding UMW's next chancellor.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

As a businesswoman, a Montanan and someone who loves the outdoors, I'm proud to support the U.S. Senate candidate with the stronger stance on protecting public lands, Gov. Steve Bullock.

Bullock has a record of protecting Montana's public lands and the environment. He is an outdoorsman who rejected efforts to transfer Montana's land to private interests, created the Office of Outdoor Recreation, expanded opportunities for conservation and recreation and wrote a landmark opinion permitting public stream access.

Montana's public lands support more than 70,000 jobs and generate more than $7 billion in consumer spending each year. I urge you to vote for the Steve who will protect our shared resources.

Vote for Steve Bullock.

RMEF Strongly Supports Delisting, State Management of Wolves

The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation strongly supports the decision by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) to remove gray wolves from the list of endangered and threatened species.

"RMEF firmly supports the removal of federal protections for wolves so they can be appropriately managed by state wildlife agencies through regulated hunting and trapping," said Kyle Weaver, RMEF president and CEO. "The wolf population continues to surge in the western Great Lakes states and Northern Rockies. Montana's wolf population is 500 percent above USFWS recovery goals while Idaho's is nearly 700 percent above and Wyoming's stable population remains a testament to the success of state management."

Additionally, wolf populations are well above state management plan levels in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin while modern era numbers are the highest they have ever been in both Oregon and Washington. Active wolf packs are also confirmed on the ground in California and Colorado with confirmed sightings in other states.

RMEF remains a long-time advocate for state management of gray wolves, which is in line with RMEF's support of the North American Wildlife Conservation Model, under which state management of wildlife along with the financial contributions from hunters dramatically increased wildlife populations across the United States over the last century.

"Our state wildlife agencies have the experience and knowledge to manage wolves, just as they manage elk, bears, deer, mountain lions and all other wildlife," added Weaver.

Looking beyond the continental United States, there are 7,000 to 11,000 wolves in Alaska and approximately 60,000 in Canada.

General hunt in southwest Montana begins with mixed hunter success

Severe winter weather limited hunter participation in some areas

Montana's general hunting season for deer and elk began Saturday, with lower-than-average hunter participation in some areas of southwest Montana due to challenging weather and travel conditions, similar to 2019.

Wildlife biologists with Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks operated five check stations over the weekend, observing a total of 1,039 hunters. Biologists use check stations to collect data on hunter participation and success, as well as the species, sex and age class of the animals harvested. This supplements data collected through hunter harvest phone surveys.

In total, biologists checked 10 white-tailed deer, 17 mule deer and 72 elk over the weekend.

These figures do not account for different hunting season regulations over the years, which have varied from liberal to restrictive for elk and mule deer, depending on population status.

National Association of Attorneys General Statement Regarding 2020 Election

The National Association of Attorneys General (NAAG) released the following statement today on behalf of a bipartisan coalition of 36 attorneys general, led by Montana Attorney General and NAAG President Tim Fox and Massachusetts Attorney General Maura Healey:

"As state and territory attorneys general, our backgrounds and perspectives are as diverse as the citizens whom we serve. But we are united in our goal of protecting the rule of law and defending the laws and constitutions of our states, territories, and nation.

Fundamental to our democracy, the rule of law is built upon citizen participation in electing the leaders who make and execute our state and national laws. Therefore, we urge all eligible voters to plan now for how they will vote in this election.

Trusted sources like the National Association of Secretaries of State or the National Association of State Election Directors provide information on how to register to vote and your options for voting in-person or by mail. Eligible voters who plan to vote by mail should follow the instructions provided by state and local election officials, fill out your ballot properly, and return it to an officially designated drop-off place, by mail, or any other means permitted under your state's laws as soon as possible.

Across the country and under circumstances both familiar and uncharted, election officials are working to ensure that every eligible citizen can vote and that every vote is counted. America's attorneys general are also working to ensure a free, fair, and secure election. As part of our duty to uphold the rule of law, we will take seriously any allegations of election interference, including voter fraud, voter intimidation and suppression.

Moreover, we remind our fellow citizens that violence against persons or property is never an acceptable response to any election outcome and we condemn political violence of any kind.

Voting is a right and responsibility. We urge all Americans to ensure your voice is heard this election year by making a plan to vote now."
