WORD OF PASSING

Jay Deihl has passed away at his home in Dillon, on Saturday night, October 31.

Dorothy "Polly" Clark LaDue Todd, 92

Dorothy "Polly" Clark LaDue passed away on October 25, 2020 at the Tobacco Roots Mountains Care Center in Sheridan, Montana. She was born in Louisville, Kentucky on May 3,1928.

When she was two months old she was adopted by Charles and Dorothy Clark LaDue and was brought up as an only child. She arrived in Sheridan by train in July, 1928.

Polly married Richard (Dick) L. Todd on November 23, 1947. Dick and Polly had six children in eight years.

She is survived by sons and daughters from Sheridan. They are Ty Todd, Terry (Julie) Todd, Neil (Joanne) Todd, Julie Malesich McAlear, and Tammy Todd and Nat (Melony) Todd from New Orleans, Louisiana, and sister-in-law, Zoe Todd from Ennis, Montana, and 23 grandchildren and 27 great grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents, Charles and Dorothy LaDue, husband, Richard (Dick) Todd, grandsons Brooks Todd, Ryan Todd, and granddaughter, Sarah Todd.

A special thank you from the Todd family goes to Dr. Biehl and the entire staff at Tobacco Roots Mountains Care Center.

A celebration of life will take place tentatively in May,2021. It will depend on the weather and Covid-19. Memorials can be made to the Christ Episcopal Church window restoration fund or Tobacco Roots Mountains Care Center or a charity of your choice.

St. Rose is sorry to announce the Annual Christmas Bizarre has been cancelled this year. Hope to see you next year.

Hunter success at or above average second weekend of general hunt in southwest Montana

The second weekend of Montana's general deer and elk hunt in southwest Montana saw lower-than-average hunter participation for the same weekend in previous years, but hunter success was at or above average.

Wildlife biologists with Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks operated three check stations Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, observing a total of 709 hunters. Biologists use check stations to collect data on hunter participation and success, as well as the species, sex and age class of the animals harvested. This supplements data collected through hunter harvest phone surveys.

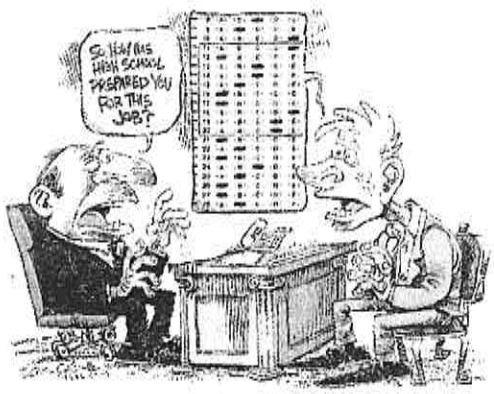
ARE COLLEGE ENTRANCE EXAMS A DYING BREED?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

My son Gideon has now finished both his ACT and SAT college entrance exams (scoring at an impressive percentile somewhere between "It's …it's…go ask my wife" and "Never you MIND what his father's score was"), but I wonder if the tests will still be relevant when HIS hypothetical kids reach college age.

Hundreds of colleges dropped mandatory test scores this year because of COVID-19 disruptions, but standardized tests were already falling out of favor with admissions officers long before the virus arrived. According to the Wall Street Journal, more than 60 percent of four-year schools in the U.S. have made test scores optional – giving more weight to GPA, extracurricular activities, teacher recommendations ("I really envy the professors who will have Jasmine in class – but not envy in the stalker-ish way…probably") and socioeconomic adversity.

This derails a nearly century-long tradition of standardized tests being the gold standard for gaining entrance to your dream school. The SAT launched in 1926, when Prohibition-era hooch was potent enough to make those raccoon-skin coats look cool. Even the late-to-the-party ACT started the year before I was born! I'm surprised that in 2020 the first multiple-choice question isn't "What is the best way to ace this test, kids? (a) get off my lawn; (b) turn down that music; (c) pull your pants up; or (d) all of the above?"



Multiple factors have chipped away at the dependence on standardized tests. Reformers point out that the modern emphasis on coaching for tests distorts two years of a student's life. Yes, we took the tests seriously when I was a student, but there was considerably less pressure – partly because we weren't inundated with today's RESOURCES. ("We have some lovely study guides for you, but first, the shop class will have to extricate Mrs. Swanson from the mimeograph machine. Dynomite!")

Nowadays, it's Stress City. Instead of just bugging the cafeteria lady, college-bound students make a concerted effort to determine the rank of mystery meat on the periodic table. No matter how short the skirts, the main emphasis of pep rallies is calculating the angles of the human pyramid. Public displays of affection are now less about tonsil hockey and more about clutching the thesaurus. ("My precious! My precious!")

Skeptics have long derided standardized tests for favoring nerds who are only good at regurgitating information. Speaking as a nerd who is only good at regurgitating information, "Here's some information: I'm rubber and you're glue…"

Level-playing-field proponents point out that affluent school districts have an unfair advantage at placing students in prestigious universities. And wealthy parents display a tendency to game the system by hiring tutors, paying someone else to take the test, bribing proctors or getting Newton's hard-to-remember laws of physics changed. ("Hey, if you've got more MONEY than God, you might as well try playing God.")

The College Board, which administers the SAT, insists standardized tests are still the best predictor of success in college. (The SECOND-BEST predictor of buckling down and succeeding in class is whether you can study the Reconstruction period and the Klan without shouting, "Toga! Toga! Toga!")

I hope mollycoddling mania doesn't cause problems if any of my hypothetical grandchildren become optometrists. "Better or worse? Better or worse? Can't you give me more time, doc? And can't you diagnose astigmatism by perusing a narrative about my life experiences???"
