WHAT DOES THE FUTURE HOLD FOR CHURCH ATTENDANCE?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

Are you a faithful Christian who is concerned about empty pews – and the steadily decreasing impact of Christianity on the social fabric?

There's good news about the Good News.

After years of procrastination, I have stretched beyond my 600-word columns and written an honest-to-goodness BOOK.

My first effort is a departure from my usual lightweight tomfoolery (although you'll find snark, pop culture references and stream-of-consciousness observations aplenty).

It's a breezy motivational book titled "Yes, Your Butt Still Belongs in Church" (and subtitled "Answering the excuses that block mankind from having life and having it more abundantly").

It is NOT an attack on devout Jews, Muslims or Hindus. It is NOT an attempt to pummel atheists into submission.

No, it is directed at three groups: (a) the aforementioned churchgoers who need words of encouragement, (b) Christians who have drifted away from church and dabbled with substitute forms of addressing life's challenges and (c) people who are not antagonistic toward Christianity but just never made a priority of checking it out.

I'll confess that I have an internet troll living rent-free in my brain. Without deigning to read my book, he has labeled me "judgmental" and declared that organized religion is just a bad "product": if it met people's needs, they would be flocking to it.

But he fails to distinguish between HAVING needs and RECOGNIZING needs.

People don't NEED to hoard and increase their wall-to-wall clutter, settle for a humdrum love life, eat an unhealthy diet or neglect saving for retirement. But sometimes they just don't recognize the problem or lack MOTIVATION to fix the situation.

Not all self-help books are created equal; but in general, I'm GLAD we have authors who can help us manage our time better, develop superior people skills, overcome addictions and make wiser money decisions.

RATIONALIZING one's avoidance of formal worship is just as self-destructive as fabricating excuses to throw temper tantrums, languish in a dead-end job or flee from committed relationships.

With humility and love, I've tried to create something that will bulldoze through the obstacles and help good people reject BAD REASONING.

I'm not going to lie and promise this book is a cure-all. Whether it's relationship issues, health advisories or political platforms, we all know people who absolutely will not listen to sound logic.

But I think the book can be ONE RESOURCE in your toolkit. And even if you fail to win someone over, you'll have a clear conscience after having tried your best.

In my lifetime, I have written job applications, book reports, a prize-winning (youth tour of Washington, D.C.) essay, 17 years' worth of hobby articles, company newsletters, a comic book, radio commercials and 1,150 weekly columns. But this is the most substantive, most life-affirming, most IMPORTANT thing I have ever written. Seriously.

Have a Happy Thanksgiving. And may God bless.

Attorney General Fox Announces Multistate Settlement with Apple Over iPhone Throttling

Attorney General Tim Fox, along with a coalition of over 30 other attorneys general, announced a $113 million settlement with Apple, Inc. regarding Apple's 2016 decision to throttle consumers' iPhone speeds in order to address unexpected shutdowns in some iPhones.

Based on the multistate investigation, the attorneys general allege that Apple discovered that battery issues were leading to unexpected shutdowns in iPhones. However, rather than disclosing these issues or replacing batteries, Apple concealed the issues from consumers. Apple's concealment ultimately led to a software update in December 2016 that reduced iPhone performance in an effort to keep the phones from unexpectedly shutting down.

The attorneys general allege that Apple's concealment of the battery issues and decision to throttle the performance of consumers' iPhones led to Apple profiting from selling additional iPhones to consumers whose phone performance Apple had slowed.

"Mobile phones have become a necessary part of life for the majority of Montanans," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "Consumers depend on the companies that build mobile phones to provide reliable devices. Apple concealed issues in their iPhones to make a profit off consumers, and that's not the kind of business practice we want to see here in Montana. This settlement is a big step forward in making things right for consumers and ensuring iPhones function in a manner that purchasers expect," Fox added.

Under the settlement, Apple will pay Montana approximately $1,160,896. In addition to the monetary payment, Apple also must provide truthful information to consumers about iPhone battery health, performance, and power management. Apple must provide this important information in various forms on its website, in update installation notes, and in the iPhone user interface itself. Apple recently also entered into a proposed settlement of class action litigation related to the same conduct, and under that proposed settlement Apple will pay out up to $500 million in consumer restitution. Consumers can find additional information here.

For information about iPhone battery replacements, visit Apple support.

FWP to capture, study mountain goats in Bridger Range

Study will provide data on goat health, movement and habitat.

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks biologists will capture mountain goats in the Bridger Range next month as part of a study that will help inform mountain goat and habitat management.

The project will entail capturing 30 mountain goats, sampling them and outfitting them with GPS collars. The captures are scheduled to happen between Dec. 10 and 18.

One of the purposes of the capture is to assess the overall health of the mountain goat population, including their infection with respiratory and other pathogens and parasites, their body condition and pregnancy rates. Another purpose is to collect mountain goat movement data to understand their seasonal ranges and movement corridors and evaluate the effects of human recreation on goat habitat use.

FWP staff conduct similar capture projects each year throughout Montana to better understand wildlife health, movement and habitat. These studies provide meaningful data that inform wildlife management and highlight opportunities for habitat enhancement in many places.

The Bridger Range has held a healthy population of mountain goats since they were introduced in 1969. The most recent mountain goat classification survey in 2019 found an all-time high of 127 goats in the Bridgers. This herd provides recreation opportunities for many wildlife enthusiasts.

People who live and recreate in the Bridgers may see a helicopter in the area during the mountain goat capture project. FWP asks people who recreate here to keep their distance from the helicopter.

Youth Connections Toy Drive

The Dillon Youth Connections Mentoring Program is proud to announce our partnering with the Giving Tree for this year's Toy Distribution. In past years, we have facilitated the Toys for Tots distribution, but organizational costs and restrictions have increased to an unsustainable level, and we wanted to utilize those funds locally.

We are very committed to our community, and excited to continue providing toys to the kids who could use a little extra this Christmas. While our original plan was to do a drive of our own, another barrier presented itself in finding a safe location in the midst of Covid. Partnering with the Giving Tree will provide a means for safe delivery, along with a lower overhead so that we can supplement additional toys with what our generous community is already contributing.

Toy donation boxes will still be placed at various locations in town for the month of December (for new & unwrapped toys). We are not changing the existing process of the Giving Tree, but rather adding to it this year. Future year plans are TBD.

Giving Tree individual tags and family applications can be picked up at Rattlesnake Creek Alpacas (201 S. Idaho St) after Thanksgiving. Items will be delivered after the 19th of December. We wish you the happiest of holidays.

The Children's Giving Tree is ready for Christmas 2020!

The Giving Tree helps families in need with Christmas gifts for their children. Children's requests are written on a tag and put on the tree for interested Santas to take and fill the request. (no names are given out). If you would like your children to be included on the Tree, pick up an application at Rattlesnake Alpacas.

The Tree will be decorated on Monday, November 23. Gift delivery will be Saturday, December 19, so gifts need to be back under the tree by December 17th (the earlier the better!)
