Art Activities during Covid 19

Wednesdays at Tendoy Fine Art in Dillon, Montana are full of laughter, comradery, and lots of "art talk". The education room at this nonprofit gallery is filled with artwork in progress, finished pieces waiting to be hung and a limited number of students and teachers encouraging the making of art. The advent of Covid 19 means that extra measures need to be taken to disinfect tables and distance students and teachers. "It isn't easy," says artist/instructor Colleen Howe Cheney, "but it is so worthwhile to give even a few students the opportunity to express themselves during this historic time."

Students of Cheney have class from 10 am to 12:30 pm and students of Jean James follow right after the classroom is cleared and disinfected at 12:45 until 3 pm. Then just to add another layer of activity, the coop artists and guests gather from 3:15 - 5 for an open studio time for critiques and discussions of the process of making art and the marketing of it. I love this opportunity to get feedback on my new work and to talk art with other artists, "Jean James, a managing member of the gallery, muses. "Sometimes we even paint. The number of artists attending must be small for safety reasons, and fortunately we haven't had to turn anyone away because of going over our limit. I suppose if that were to happen, we'd just have to do our discussion twice a week to accommodate everyone."

Even with social distancing in place, the enthusiasm and energy that permeates Tendoy Fine Art is contagious. There is a sense that the artists involved are proud of their work and see the coop gallery as a sort of home away from home where there is genuine sharing of ideas and encouragement to persevere in the effort it takes to learn and produce quality art. Gift Certificates for classes and art are available and are a gift that keeps giving through the year.

FWP to implement strategy for wildlife movement and migration

Department works with communities, landowners and conservation groups

With the understanding that private lands, particularly working landscapes, are a vital component for wildlife habitat, Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks has developed a new strategy addressing wildlife movement and migration.

The new strategy was developed over the last year out of experience working with conservation organizations, landowners and others in response to growing public interest in conserving habitat for wildlife movement and migration.

FWP will use the new strategy to further integrate efforts related to wildlife movement and migration into its existing policies and programs. The intent is to better highlight the work FWP staff already do related to wildlife movement and migration, and to strengthen that work where necessary.

"For decades wildlife conservation work in Montana has focused on preserving important wildlife movements between winter and summer range," said FWP director Martha Williams. "In fact, that was the impetus behind our very first game ranges. We know this work has to be done in partnership with private landowners whose working lands often represent important habitat for Montana's wildlife."

The strategy allows FWP and partners to continue to balance the positive aspects of wildlife movement, such as ensuring wildlife populations can access crucial seasonal habitats and remain connected, with challenges such as competition on private lands with livestock for critical winter range and disease transmission.

The strategy brings into focus how FWP will be inclusive by bringing partners and diverse values together to conserve wildlife in a way that is driven by local communities, private landowners and conservation interests.

"The viability of our ranch business and others like it is essential to maintaining an intact Montana landscape conducive to wildlife movement," said Heath Martinell, a rancher in southwest Montana. "We enjoy wildlife and consider them an indicator of land health, and at the same time they bring substantial costs and challenges to our business. That's why I appreciate that FWP and partners are seeking out landowner feedback and perspectives on managing wildlife movement and migration across the state."

Historically, wildlife movement and migration conservation has been a crucial piece of FWP's focus. However, as human development increases across the West, public interest in the work is increasing. Recently, a group of hunting, conservation and private landowner organizations recommended that FWP formally address big game migration in policies and programs with suggestions such as selecting an agency lead for big game migration, updating prioritization criteria for big game in existing programs like Habitat Montana and requesting the Private Lands/Public Wildlife Council to facilitate public discourse around difficult issues related to wildlife movement and migration like disease transmission. Some of these recommendations were incorporated into the strategy.

"Like many of the conservation challenges here in Montana, safeguarding our big game migration corridors depends on strong collaboration and cooperative efforts between private landowners and Fish, Wildlife & Parks," said Scott Laird, Montana field representative for the Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership. "This strategy provides a blueprint for the continued success of these partnerships, which provide tremendous benefits to working lands and families, sportsmen and women, our wildlife and Montana's economy."

Attorney General Fox, Montana Lottery Warn of Lottery Scams

Attorney General Tim Fox and Montana Lottery Director Angela Wong cautioned Montanans today about lottery-related scams that have become increasingly prevalent and urged them to be vigilant.

"These scams can really impact your finances and cost you tens of thousands of dollars," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "Scammers prey upon people who live alone, and since the pandemic has led to more isolation, bad actors see this current situation as an opportunity to target people, often senior citizens. Fortunately, by knowing the red flags and exercising caution, consumers can almost totally shield themselves from the lottery scam."

While they differ on specifics, most lottery scam attempts follow the same formula: A person receives an unsolicited letter, e-mail, or phone call from an organization claiming to be a legitimate lottery in a foreign country, a private sweepstakes firm, or a lottery "commission." They all bear the same message: "You're a winner!" There's a catch, of course: To redeem the "winnings," a person must first send or wire money to lottery or sweepstakes officials. The scammers often request that the money be wired; money sent in this manner is much harder to trace.

Montana Lottery Director Angela Wong issued this reminder to consumers: "You'll never win a legitimate lottery you didn't enter. You'll never be asked to pay upfront for a legitimate lottery prize, and you'll never be contacted out of the blue by a legitimate lottery."

In order to prevent Montanans from falling victim to lottery scams, Fox and Wong offered a few reminders from the Montana Lottery:

- Legitimate lottery officials never contact the winner; they do not even know who the winner is. A real lottery knows only the winning numbers on a ticket and where the ticket was sold. The winner must keep the ticket and confirm the numbers with lottery officials. If you're contacted by someone claiming you've won the Montana Lottery, it's a scam.
- In a real lottery, winners pay for nothing other than their ticket. All federal and state taxes are paid before the Montana Lottery releases money to the winner. A winner is never asked to pay such taxes out-of-pocket before receiving his/her prize.
- Lotteries of foreign countries are illegal in the United States. No legitimate foreign lottery sells tickets in America. If you've been contacted by a lottery claiming to be affiliated with a foreign government, it's a scam.

To report an unsolicited letter, e-mail, or phone call that appears to be part of a lottery scam scheme, call the Montana Office of Consumer Protection at (800) 481-6896 or (406) 444-4500.

Southwest Montana Veteran's Home. Update #79

By Mike Lawson

Greetings once again to the Veterans/Countries/ Communities of SW MT who are the organizers and supporters of the SW MT Veteran's Home.

Of course, the story this week is it was Thanksgiving week, and it was also, the last week of our Hunting Season. This week was only a three day week, with many of the working crew, in all the trades, leaving early for the holiday. Those from out of town, especially, wanted to get home at a decent hour, while others were wanting to get home, to plan for Thanksgiving and for getting out to hunt for Elk/Deer, those last four days. It's part of our Montana Hunting Culture, for many of us. When Monday comes, everyone will have hunting, out of their system until next year, and will be ready to get back to the construction of our Veteran's Home. In spite of having a basically two and half day week, some neat things got accomplished, in moving our Veteran's Home, on the forward march of getting completed. In talking to my go-to guys, Mike Ascherman and John Kotka, the expectation of the Community Center and Cottage #1, being turned over to the state, in the latter part of December, is in fact going to happen. Liaison Mark Gollinger and I did our walk-through on Wednesday, accompanied by Carpenter General Forman John Kotka. We continued to see the puzzle pieces of construction, coming together. The final finishing pieces of construction, are well scrutinized and have to be right. The change orders, are part of this, as some things on the drawings won't work, adjustments have to be made, quality of material might not be acceptable and has to be changed, etc., etc.. These are all minor things, but quality control/inspections are in place, to demand things are top notch and correct. I as a veteran and a strong advocate for this, our Southwest Montana Veteran's Home, am beyond thankful, to see these "Quality Control" measures taking place. We as Veterans deserve nothing but the best, in all aspects, concerning the building of our Vet Home.

Construction Updates:

Community Center—Interior: Walking into this building was like walking into a completely finished building. One reason was that, all the Acoustical Ceiling Tiles were installed. We were used to looking up and seeing the different duct work/conduit/piping/etc.. We now see a completed ceiling that hides all that. There are some minor punch-list things that need to be finished up, but it is to the point now, that the Cleaning Contractor is doing some major finish cleaning, throughout this building. This building is just a week or so, from being complete. This will then allow, getting some of the permanent equipment/furniture brought in.

Cottage #1—Interior: The Floor Lay guys, are making good progress on this building and will probably move into Cottage #3 next week. The carpet in the corridors of the Resident Wings will be one of the last things done before turning this Cottage over to the State. This will keep it clean, from the construction activity. The Tapers/Painters are doing punch-list finish work. The carpenters installed their FF&E package in the rooms and bathrooms. These consisted of things like soap dispensers, paper towel holders, sanitary glove dispensers, etc.. The Acoustical Ceiling tiles have been installed, throughout this building. The cleaning contractor is scheduled to come in on Friday, to do an initial cleaning. The start-up Contractor McKinstry, was doing some programing on the Monday before Thanksgiving. Another couple of weeks will see this Cottage pretty well complete.

Exterior: Handrail left too install as well as the back patio finish work to be done.

Cottage #2—Interior: JA& Sons Construction are now doing the Sheetrock Hanging/Taping. They're doing a good job and should be done in this Cottage, by the end of this week or before. They'll then move right into Cottage #4. The Carpenters are right behind these guys and are doing the door/window trim work. The Plumbers have the gas-lines, completed/tested and are hooking the copper lines to the boiler hot-water heating units. The Electricians are continuing to pull wire, from throughout the building, to the electrical breaker panels. Yellowstone Acoustical is getting the T-Bar Seismograph metal grid framework, installed, in the Resident Corridors and the Office.

Exterior: Nothing at this time.

Cottage #3—Interior: The Plumbers are busy in the Mechanical Room, hooking up copper hot-water lines to the boiler heating units/zone valves. Lots of work, doing this. The tile and grout work is complete, with these tile guys, now moving into Cottage #2. The Electricians are trimming out switches/plug-in receptacles/etc. and are installing light fixtures. their systems. The Carpenters did some work on the front door hardware but are pretty well caught-up for now.

Exterior: Nothing at this time.

Cottage #4—Interior: Plumbers were working on some of their rough-in. The Electricians were setting can lights and wiring in the seismograph ceiling T-Bar Seismograph grid framework. The sheet rockers will follow them and sheetrock this ceiling framework grid, this week.

Exterior: Nothing at this time.

Cottage #5—Interior: The Carpenters installed all the outside door hardware which now allows this building to be locked up..

Exterior: The Siding Crew, have most of this building sided and are doing the caulking, which is considerable. They have the fascia to do and then will start putting rain-gutters up, on all the buildings.

Zemljak Excavating continues graveling in front of the cement finishers and is working on the final grading around Cottage #4 & #5 as well as the East edge of the overall site, along Continental Drive.

R&K didn't pour any concrete, even though Markovich had some ground heated/thawed, due to being pulled off to work on another job, across town. Hopefully this week will see some concrete poured, as again Markovich will have some ground thawed and ready for them.

This week, that this article comes out, will be a full week and the hunting season will be over. The push is on to get the Community Center and Cottage#1, completed/furnished and turned over to the state, no later than December 22nd. I believe that's a reality and am excited.

On another note, one of our older Marine Corps League Veterans, called me and said one of his adult sons, who was living with he and his wife, had died. He went on to say he died of the Covid-19, which they did not know he had. He and his wife, both got checked and both tested positive, They are now in quarantine. There's too many people that I know, who have Covid-19 or have had it. Again, this terrible virus is among us, so I ask again, that you all to be safe, care about each other and follow the health guidelines of masking/distancing and avoid large groups. Until next time, take care.
