Susan M. (Susy) McCall

The love of my life, Susy, died at home on Monday afternoon January 18. Our children, Dave and Julie, came to visit early enough to enjoy her company for a couple of days. Three of our granddaughters also came, along with four great grandchildren (out of six).

Susy grew up in La Canada California, the daughter of a Guatemalan born mother, Rosario, and her dad Alex. When she was 15 her mother took her on a Sabbatical for seven months to Madrid, Spain, and then toured Europe by automobile. Susy already knew Spanish because she spent a couple of summers in Guatemala with relatives, but her trip inspired her to learn more languages. So she took a French class at Muir High School in Pasadena. The teacher seated people alphabetically. Her last name was McPherson. The boy sitting behind her was a kid by the name of Freeman McCall (I was that lucky kid) who had also been to Europe the previous summer on a bicycle trip. Naturally, we talked a lot in class about our trips, but were often interrupted by the teacher saying, "Mademoiselle McPherson, ne molestez pas Monsieur McCall."

Two years later I told a gossip who was a mutual friend "if Susy McPherson invited me to her Senior prom, I would go with her." It worked. I also took her to a Dodger baseball game and she became a life-long baseball enthusiast. Our tombstone will have this inscription on the back "GO DODGERS, BRUINS AND LAKERS," along with the number "42" the number on the back of the great Dodger, Jackie Robinson. She admired him greatly for breaking the color barrier in major league baseball.

She attended UCLA during the years John Wooden coached basketball there. Needless to say, she became a basketball fanatic as well. Whenever UCLA played Stanford (my school), one of us would always remain silent after the game was over.

Susy graduated with a masters in education and taught Spanish and social studies for two years, putting me through Seminary along with my rich grandmother. Isn't it nice to have wealthy relatives?

We married on August 27, 1965. We rejoiced in each other, body, soul, spirit, and mind for more than 55 years. She followed me wherever my job opportunities took me. There's nothing in the world after a hard day's work like coming home to a good woman who is glad you are there.

Susy owned three businesses in her lifetime: the knitting nook in Corvallis Oregon, the Crafty Quilter in Cody Wyoming and the Crafty Quilter in Dillon. She loved to quilt and loved her quilting friends. She gave away dozens of quilts to charities, usually quilts with bright colors in simple patterns. Several times people went with her to Quilt Markets for a week Houston, Texas. Julie, our daughter said "oh yeah, I remember that. That was really fun."

Her friends at Kennel Club meant a lot to her. They would get together once a week to sew things to sell at farmer's market and then give the money to the animal shelter.

We loved traveling, sometimes alone, sometimes groups. Her favorite trip was sponsored by Stanford University to South Africa. The lecturer on that trip had helped Nelson Mandela and Bishop Tutu put together the "Truth and Reconciliation" courts after the end of the Apartheid regime.

We also stayed three weeks in Penzance, Cornwall because she loved the television series called "Poldark." Every day we would walk to a different nearby town like Mousehole, or St. Ives and then take the bus home.

Our whole family loved to go to Cabo San Lucas, Mexico.

In 2012 our grandson, Shilo, was drafted to play baseball by the San Francisco Giants, much to Susy's dismay (we would have preferred the Dodgers). Lots of laughter, eating, and conversation with the children and the grandchildren. What a joy!

Susy knew ahead of time that being a minister's wife was not going to be easy. Some churches (but none that I served) expect minister's wives to teach Sunday School and either sing in the choir or play an instrument. She didn't want to do any of that (although she did serve the Lord faithfully), so she decided to work. She did teach a through-the-Bible adult class for two years in California.

Great wife, great mother, fun person to be around, now rejoicing in the presence of her Lord Jesus Christ.

Dillon man shares his story after court appearance for D.C. riot role

Hank Muntzer is telling his side of the story after facing federal charges for his role in a riot at the Capitol in Washington, D.C. Prosecutors say cellphone video Muntzer posted to Facebook is among the evidence against him in this case. (Photo: NBC Montana) Hank Muntzer says doesn't have a political affiliation, but he supports President Donald Trump, which is why he went to the Capitol.

Hank Muntzer is telling his side of the story after facing federal charges for his role in a riot at the Capitol in Washington, D.C.

Hank Muntzer appeared in federal court in Missoula on Thursday and posted bail. The U.S. attorney's case against him hinges on social media posts, YouTube and an MSNBC video.

In the documents, attorneys claim Muntzer posted a video from inside the U.S. Capitol and stated, "Stormed the capitol in Washington, D.C."

Prosecutors say cellphone video Muntzer posted to Facebook is among the evidence against him in this case.

At Muntzer's appliance shop in Dillon, his concerns about the government are literally written the walls.

"I don't care what party you're a part of, if an election isn't free we all live in slavery," Muntzer told us.

Muntzer is one of many who made their way into the Capitol two weeks ago in an effort to stop the certification of the presidential election results in favor of Joe Biden.

"Everyone is shouting, 'Our house, our house,' because it's the people's house; it belongs to all of us," he said.

State courts and former Attorney General William Barr say they found no evidence of widespread voter fraud that would have overturned the election.

We asked if he ever thought he would be detained for the events that happened that day.

"No idea. Didn't even know what I was walking into," he said.

What happened at the Capitol followed him back to Montana.

On Monday, police arrested him at a Dillon restaurant.

"I was actually sitting in a restaurant," he said. "We were talking about events like this here at the Capitol when they came in and arrested me."

Now, faces a federal misdemeanor charge for unlawful entry of a restricted building or grounds.

On the ground in D.C., he claims it was a different story.

"At the time I didn't know what was going on, but looking back it almost seemed like it was a trap -- they opened the doors," he said. Muntzer says he was quickly swept into the crowd that headed through the open doors and stepped foot inside the building.

"They opened the doors and let us in. We were in there for maybe 15 minutes or so before the Capitol police hit us with pepper spray. No one ever asked us to leave or exit the building; it's like we were just turned on suddenly," he said.

Muntzer says he doesn't have a political party -- he's neither Republican nor Democrat, but he is in favor of President Donald Trump, and that's what he says prompted him to go to the Capitol.

"I just highly support Trump and what he's done. He didn't rescind his presidency, he just stepped out of the way," Muntzer said. Overall, he doesn't regret being there, and he says he acted without malice.

"I went in there with a good conscience -- just to meet with the president and that was it. I didn't even know we'd be going to the Capitol," he said.

Muntzer noted that he was not the only Dillon resident to go to the Capitol that day. In fact, he tells us nine other people also traveled with him. But so far, Muntzer is the only one facing charges. Now he waits for his next day in court. He's due to appear Jan. 28 in Washington, D.C but said he isn't sure if it will be in person or over a video chat.

Prosecutors claim Muntzer posted on Facebook that he did not see anyone injured in the riot but added he witnessed the use of tear gas and said he was pepper-sprayed.

Officials say Muntzer went on to say they sent a message, "We are not going to take it, we want our country back."

TORPEDOES

By "Swede" Troedsson

During 1954 - 1956 I served with the First Marine Division in Korea. A good buddy of mine, Silvio Sante Solare (I'll never forget that name) would receive food packages from home. (Silvio's family owned a winery in Napa, CA). The packages would quite often contain spaghetti and the makings for spaghetti sauce.

We would obtain hamburger and tomato sauce from a buddy who worked as a cook in the mess hall kitchen, and make a huge spaghetti feast. Among those invited was the cook, and a medical corpsman who would bring 200 proof medicinal alcohol.

We would mix the alcohol with grapefruit juice. We called the drink torpedoes. We'd pig out on spaghetti and get sloshed on torpedoes!

After our division returned to Camp Pendleton, California, Silvio took me to his home in Napa on a weekend liberty. We visited his family's wine tasting room, and had a great week end.

In 2001 I was visiting some first cousins in California. During my visit they took me on a tour of the wineries in Napa. During the course of our tour, I happened to mention my Marine Corps buddy Silvio Solare, and that his family owned a winery in Napa. My cousins stated that the Solare winery was close by, so we stopped in to visit.

I approached the receptionist at the visitor center, and explained that I had served with Silvio in Korea. The receptionist stated that Silvio was her Uncle, and was living in Albuquerque, NM. She gave me his telephone number.

When I arrived back home I was able to contact Silvio. We had a great visit. Unfortunately, Silvio was suffering from prostate cancer. This is the last I heard from him. I suspect the cancer finally took him.
