Beaverhead Search and Rescue News

Submitted by Mel Rice

The Beaverhead Search and Rescue held its monthly meeting on Wednesday, March 3. The meeting was called to order at 7:00 PM by commander Lawrence Morrisroe. There were 24 members in personal attendance and 8 members in attendance via zoom. Social distancing is still being recognized although most of the membership has had both Covid19 vaccinations. The general meeting was very short.

One item of business was the introduction of the unit's newest probationary member, Alex Dunn. Alex is a co-founder of the PMEF and an employee of the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest who teaches avalanche safety. He holds a Pro 1 Level Avalanche certification and is a member of the American Avalanche Association. He has been a winter back-country skier, ski mountaineer, and snowmobiler for 20 years around the western U.S. We are very fortunate to have someone of his caliber as a member of the BVHS S&R. Please congratulate Alex and welcome him as the newest member of your Search and Rescue.

About the only other business were some housekeeping items and an explanation of upcoming training opportunities by the group's training officer, Nathan Freeman. There will be trainings with the Ruby Valley Search and Rescue as well as training sponsored by the BVHD unit. We are trying to work and train more closely with neighboring SAR units.

The meeting was adjourned at 7:30. At that time the unit moved right into a training presentation by Alex Dunn. The presentation explained the triangle of avalanche awareness. The triangle represents the three components to be aware of in order to keep yourself and your party safe while enjoying the back country during the winter. The three elements of the triangle are: snow pack, weather, and terrain. Understanding the snow pack is critical. Determine how safe the snow is on the mountain by understanding its makeup. What do the layers of snow look like? Is there a good hard base or are the underlying layers crystalized or sugar like? Second, know what the weather is going to be doing while you are out playing. If it is going to be snowing hard or putting an additional load on the snow, this can increase the chance of avalanche. And last is the terrain. Be able to recognize the steepness of the mountain you are playing on. Slopes of 30 degrees or greater should normally be avoided.

If you head to the back country to play there are some essentials that you should have: an avalanche beacon, a probe pole, a shovel, helmet, an inflatable floatation pack, and common sense. Other things to be aware of:

- Choose partners that have the proper gear and training
- Discuss snow pack, weather conditions, and the terrain that you will head into
- Do beacon checks and other equipment checks before leaving the trail head
- Stick to your plan for the day but always be ready for change according to conditions

So, before going into the great Montana outdoors, be prepared. There are a lot of opportunities to enjoy and we want everyone to return home safely to your friends and families after each outing. This comes from your Beaverhead Search and Rescue, "In the Business of Saving Lives".

Attorney General Knudsen Announces Settlement Benefitting Montana Veterans

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen today announced three veterans' organizations in the state will receive $25,000 as part of a settlement agreement involving an illegal raffle enterprise and the Montana Department of Justice's Gambling Control Division.

A series of online nationwide and international raffles were held by South Carolina non-profit Providing Hope VA from September 5, 2020 through December 31, 2020; it was found that the organization was selling raffle tickets in other states where such sales were illegal. Additionally, it applied a substantial portion of raffle proceeds to administrative costs rather than maximizing monies donated to veterans' charities. Providing Hope VA's voluntarily entered into the settlement agreement, agreeing to pay $35,000.

"The Montana Department of Justice is dedicated to protecting consumers and ensuring Montanans' donations to charitable organizations are used for their intended purpose. This settlement holds the respondent accountable and ensures proceeds help our veterans, which was the original intent of those who participated in these raffles," Attorney General Knudsen said. Knudsen also noted, "This settlement was a creative solution to put raffle 'administrative expenses' back to work for veterans here in Montana."

Three Montana charities that serve veterans in our state will benefit from the settlement:

- Montana Warriors on the Water
- Montana Wounded Warriors
- Montana Veterans Foundation

Invasive mussels found in aquarium moss balls sold in Montana

Customers asked to dispose of moss balls properly

Invasive zebra mussels found another avenue for potential infestation of Montana waters. Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks was notified Wednesday that zebra mussels were detected in aquarium moss balls sold at a pet store in Washington state. FWP immediately checked pet stores around Montana and found invasive mussels in moss balls at multiple locations.

It appears these moss balls were imported from Ukraine to a distributor in California and were shipped to pet stores nationwide. The facility that imports the moss balls has been quarantined and all shipments of moss balls have been stopped.

A moss ball is a species of green algae that is formed into a ball and is 2 to 5 inches in diameter. Moss balls are purchased for home aquariums to help absorb harmful nutrients in the water and limit the growth of undesirable algae.

All of the mussels detected in Montana so far have been dead shells. However, live mussels were found on moss balls in Oregon and Idaho.

FWP is working closely with other states and Federal agencies to address this nation-wide issue.

If you have recently purchased moss balls, remove them from the water, place them in a plastic bag and put them in the freezer overnight. Additional guidance for addressing potential mussels in aquariums and how to treat tank water will be available soon. Please don't dispose of your aquarium tank water in your household drain.

This is another reminder to never dump aquarium tank pets, plants, or water into Montana's waterways.

It is illegal to release fish and other aquarium pets into natural waterways. If you can't keep your pet, find someone else who can adopt it, turn it in to a pet store or humane society, or euthanize it.

Aquarium plants can impact native aquatic plant and animal species. Let unwanted plants dry and then dispose in the garbage.

Aquarium water can harbor pathogens and diseases. Dispose of tank water on the ground away from waterways.

York's Islands Fishing Access Site reopens

The York's Islands Fishing Access Site has reopened.

This site is 4 miles south of Townsend along the Missouri River. It was closed for about two weeks due to flooding.

Ice blocks on the Missouri River and in other places continue to present safety hazards for recreationists. Conditions can change and create new safety hazards suddenly. Please use caution when visiting these areas.

Two other sites in southwest Montana — the Ennis and Valley Garden fishing access sites on the upper Madison River — remain closed due to flooding until conditions improve and FWP staff can make the necessary repairs to roads and other infrastructure.
