Letter to the Editor

April 4, 2021

Mayor Klakken and City Council,

I would like to take this opportunity to inform the Mayor and City Council of a call I received regarding Officer Eric Pedersen. I often receive calls from the public thanking our department and officers for the job they do. Due to recent events in our country regarding law enforcement, I want to assure you of the type of officers we have serving our community. This is not an isolated incident, as all of our officers perform this way. I felt compelled to advise you all of this call so you can see first-hand the quality of our officers.

A domestic situation occurred between two juveniles, which was violent enough to result in neighbors calling the police. Officers responded and were there within two minutes. According to the caller, Officer Pedersen was able to separate the juveniles professionally and calmly. A parent then became involved and was displeased with the officer, and he also began yelling and being irrational. The citizen said that Officer Pedersen deescalated the situation once again, professionally and calmly, and the citizen could not have been more impressed with Officer Pedersen's reasoning. The citizen stated she is "proud, and feels safe" because of the professional actions of Officer Pedersen. She stated that the situation could have easily gotten out of control if not for Officer Pedersen. A deputy also assisted, which is a testament to our department's cooperation.

I am proud of Officer Pedersen, but not a bit surprised. I have full faith in all my officers to handle situations professionally, and calmly. I am proud to say they very rarely ever disappoint.

Montana Western Performing Arts Series Presents "Mythfest"

The University of Montana Western and The Bank of Commerce is pleased to announce its spring virtual performance festival, Mythfest. This online presentation is a collection of performances of new work featuring the stories and songs of homesteaders, ancestors, troubadours, and mystics. The festival features performances by UMW students and faculty under the direction of guest artist Miranda Zent.

Although theaters closed this year, our collective need for human connection became more urgent. UMW Theater staged its series of virtual performances throughout the year acknowledging that creating brings us together in powerful ways.

"Mythfest" performers are students who have had the heroic spirit and energy to create in spite of the challenges of the past year. Working with tools on hand, students filmed themselves with computers and phones, lit scenes with ring lights and desk lamps, found their own costumes and converted their living spaces into virtual stages for weeks of rehearsals and filming for this event. Their performances celebrate the creative and innovative spirit of UMW students.

The performances feature new work by UMW faculty and students, and a story by guest playwright Oscar Giner (Arizona State University).

Watch "Mythfest" free-of-charge April 14-28 at <https://www.umwestern.edu/section/montana-western-bank-of-commerce-performing-arts-series/>.

Performers

- The Troubadour: Jeshua Stradley performs original music for a metal version of Shakespeare's Macbeth and a folk singer waxing nostalgic in an Arizona bordello
- The Dreamer, The Horse Rider: Tatum Higginbotham performs new work about the death of Billy the Kid and her original poetry celebrating her powerful bond with horses
- The Mystic: Annmarie Downey performs a poetic vision inspired by the life of a Victorian medium, Cora Hatch
- The Homesteader: Samantha Gregg performs as a homesteader waiting out a plains blizzard in 1856
- The Archivist: Judy Ulrich writes and performs stories about her

WORLD RECORD

By "Swede" Troedsson

A short time ago I was dating a woman in Red Lodge, MT.

One evening we decided to attend a movie in Red Lodge. While waiting for the movie to start, I mentioned to my date that we had an opportunity to be listed in the Guinness Book of World Records.

She inquired as to what I meant. I replied that we might be listed as the oldest couple to have necked in the Red Lodge movie theater.

It didn't work.

Building Improvement Project

The City of Dillon would like to let everyone know that there will be construction work taking place on the old DI building on Center Street between Idaho and Washington Streets over the next couple of weeks. The parking spaces will be closed as well as the sidewalk. Please be cautious when driving and walking in this area.

If you have any questions please contact Todd Hazelbaker, Director of Operations, at 683-4245.

Access Greatly Improved to Remote Idaho Elk Habitat

It is a ways off the beaten path, but a 1,300-acre slice of western Idaho elk country is now much more accessible and greatly improves public access to surrounding federal and state lands as well.

Originally donated to the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, it is now known as the Joseph Plains Wildlife Habitat Area (JPWA) and lies high above the Salmon River near the small town of White Bird, not far from the Oregon border.

"We appreciate our partners at the Idaho Fish and Game Department (IDFG) and Idaho Fish and Wildlife Foundation (IFWF) for working with us," said Kyle Weaver, RMEF president and CEO. "As snow in high country melts, hunters and others will now find it much easier to access this scenic landscape that's teaming with wildlife."

IDFG, IFWF and RMEF provided funding for the recent access work including fencing, gravel and installation of improved signage and kiosks leading to the property's main entry point.

"It's kind of a hidden gem—both secluded and gorgeous," said Brandi Felts, IDFG Clearwater regional habitat biologist. "You definitely need hiking boots and strong legs to take full advantage of it, but I challenge anyone to come here. It reaches into your soul and grabs a hold of you, and instantly becomes a part of you."

Lying at the head of the Sotin, Howard and Gregory Creek drainages, which flow into the Salmon River, JPWA features steep canyons, sharp ridges and forestland that provide prime habitat for elk, deer, black bears, mountain lions and other wildlife.

RMEF holds a conservation easement that forever protects the property's wildlife values. IFWF oversees management of the area by IDFG for both habitat and access with the agency's help but if it ever seeks to dispose of the property, ownership automatically reverts to RMEF to ensure it stays intact and open to the public. Since the parcel is not officially state land, it appears as private land on ownership maps.
