Comments sought on non-native trout removal from Cottonwood Creek near Dillon

Project would further westslope cutthroat trout restoration in Beaverhead watershed

Staff at Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks are seeking comments from the public on a proposal to remove non-native trout from a portion of Cottonwood Creek near Dillon.

The proposal includes removing hybrids of cutthroat trout and brook trout from a 2.7-mile section of the creek and replacing them with westslope cutthroat trout.

Westslope cutthroat trout presently occupy less than 4 percent of their historic habitat within the Beaverhead watershed. Cottonwood Creek is one of eight streams within the watershed that still support an unaltered westslope cutthroat trout population. But in Cottonwood Creek, this is limited to an estimated 520 fish that occupy less than a mile of stream above a natural waterfall.

Westslope cutthroat trout have been petitioned for listing under the Endangered Species Act, and FWP staff in southwest Montana have a goal of restoring westslope cutthroat trout to 20 percent of their historic range in order to prevent the need for listing under the act.

In 2020, a wooden fish barrier was installed on the lower end of Cottonwood Creek in preparation for this project. Biologists would use rotenone to remove the non-native fish in the 2.7-mile section of stream between the barrier and the waterfall.

Rotenone is a naturally derived substance commonly used in fish restoration efforts that is toxic to gill-breathing animals and breaks down quickly in the aquatic environment. Rotenone does not pose a significant risk to recreationists or other water users. FWP staff would sign and close the project area during the treatment, and a detoxification station would operate below the treatment area.

Removing non-native trout and restoring native westslope cutthroats would increase the likelihood of long-term survival for this population of westslope cutthroat trout.

The proposal is described in detail in an environmental assessment, which can be viewed online at <https://go.usa.gov/x6NkN>. Comments can be emailed to rkreiner@mt.gov or mailed to:

30 E. Bannack 683-3548To Call Him FriendBryce Angell*

I hear a fellar say it often, "Have a good one, friend." Or, "Thanks my friend," to total strangers. What message does this send? The dictionary says a friend is someone who you know.

Or maybe an acquaintance who deserves more than, "Hello." So, is it wrong to call 'em friend, not knowing who they are?

I'd have to say be careful 'cuz no friend can leave a scar. When we were back in junior high, no more than seventh grade.

I was wrestling Jackson Tolman when we bumped the coach's aide. The aide was full of ornery. Said he'd like to kick our $$$.

When Jackson piped right up and said, "Hey friend, it's time for class!" I swear the aide was 'bout to cry. He said, "You called me friend."

We shook our heads like two scared sheep. Then said, "Right to the end!"

Well, Jackson made a lifelong pal. A goal I'd recommend.

And saved us from a beating all because we called him friend. I wonder 'bout an old-time friend who locked me in his barn.

He claimed it calmed his Belgians. Only he could spin that yarn. I squeezed out through the feeder. Took a breath of clean fresh air. And wondered why a friend would wanna keep me locked in there?

And then I think of my good friend who checks in every day. We only talk a minute with a few kind words to say.

I know that I can count on him as good friends surely do.

I call him friend. I know that he will call me good friend too.

True friends are always loyal, and they've surely got your back.

A friend won't try to steer you wrong. They'll keep you right on track.

So, when you call em friend you've used a powerful resource.

'Cuz a friend is someone special, kinda like your saddle horse.

UMW Student Awarded Sigma Tau Delta Scholarship

Emily Engen, a UMW senior and English major, recently received a Sigma Tau Delta scholarship for the upcoming fall semester. The $1,000 "Regents: High Plains" scholarship was awarded to Engen based on her excellence in academics. The Sigma Tau Delta International English Honor Society awards its scholarships to members based on the quality of their writing, academics, and community service.

Emily Engen is from Fort Benton, Montana, and graduated from Fort Benton High School. She came to Montana Western because of the small class sizes and the block schedule. Engen says the block system allows her to "make the most of my education by diving deeply into each class and engaging myself fully in it."

When asked about her chosen major, Engen said, "I chose to major in English because effective communication is integral to our success as humans, and our words have power. By studying literature, I've been able to examine and analyze the words of others, but also build my own voice. There is so much potential for growth and knowledge between the covers of a book, and I believe that through the study of literature we are able to foster empathy, encourage curiosity, and bridge gaps in understanding."

Engen is excited and thankful for this scholarship and says that it will go towards tuition costs for the fall semester. "This scholarship will make such a difference! I am almost finished at Montana Western, and this scholarship will help me move closer to my goal of graduating college debt-free."

According to Engen, Montana Western's Experience One program was key to her success in academics. "I think UMW's Experience One program is a remarkable and unique framework that more people need to take advantage of! I have learned so much by being able to devote my energy to one course at a time, and I have had educational experiences within my classes that have shaped my goals and future aspirations."

After graduation, Engen hopes to teach English abroad so she can see more of the world and learn about other cultures.

Caverns Friday Summer Speakers Series: 'Alpine Wildlife and Shifting Climates'

Adaptations in American pikas and marmots

Lewis & Clark Caverns State Park will host a free talk entitled "Alpine Wildlife and Shifting Climates" on Friday, June 18, at 8 p.m. in the park's campground amphitheater.

Come explore the varied ways in which wildlife can respond to changes in regional weather and climatic conditions. You will learn about how alpine animals react to these shifts by following American pikas and marmots, two of Montana's small yet charismatic mammals. This talk will help you step into the animals' shoes and imagine how they experience the environment around them.

This is the fourth presentation in Lewis & Clark Caverns State Park's annual Friday Summer Speakers Series, which introduces a new speaker each Friday at 8 p.m. throughout the summer.

About the speaker

Peter Billman grew up exploring the forests of northern Minnesota. He moved to Montana in 2013 to pursue his bachelor's degree in fish and wildlife ecology and then went on to complete his master's degree in earth sciences. Since 2016, he has studied the effects of changing climates on populations of American pikas throughout the Northern Rocky Mountains. Like many others, he has fallen in love with the mountains and dedicated his research career toward understanding how alpine species are responding to shifting environmental conditions.
