CELEBRATE the wonderful life of ELDON VOSS

September 5, 1938 - June 28, 2021

Join us Friday September 3, 2021 from

Clinton Lee Howery

Clinton Lee Howery, 77, of Dillon, MT died June 4 at home with his longtime companion, Sue Keough, by his side.

A Granddaughter's Tribute

His faded tan cowboy hat hides the hair I have never seen and his callused hands might portray him as a rough man, yet inside him there are mine shafts you may stumble upon that lead to depths unknown. He reminds me of the mountains outside of his window. You can fancy yourself to take just a few steps from his house until you are in the midst of the Rockies. From the outside, they seem cold, hard, impassive, yet there is life and mystery inside: fields of wildflowers growing without any help, birds swooping low to feed their babies, forest fires raging, newborn deer standing for the first time. It's lively. And beautiful. Even harsh, but never less than the sum of its parts.

There are cats as far as the eye can see. As we bump down the driveway kicking dirt up behind us, they scatter like marbles dropped onto an uneven concrete floor. Black, grey, white, and orange flashes zip around in seemingly mindless patterns. One particularly bold tabby winds himself around my feet as I walk toward the door, purring as he makes his way in a figure eight.

When I was younger, I couldn't wait to play with the kittens at Grandpa Clint's place. No matter when we came, there was sure to be at least a few, ranging from newborns on the beds he leaves out in his covered porch to the old tabbies who would purr and rub against you with tufts of fur missing, pieces of ears, toes, and tails frozen off long ago or taken in a fight.

One of the last times I visited his house before college,
I once again looked for the kittens I knew would be waiting for me. This time, as I wove my way through the purring, furry mass, what I saw stopped me in my tracks. In the entryway to the covered porch lay a grey and white kitten, perhaps just a few weeks old. At first glance, I thought it was dead. Flies swarmed its eyes, nose, and mouth- and as I watched it moved, just barely.
Still alive... just barely. Not being accustomed to the ranch life,
I couldn't hide my horror or grief. As my grandfather opened the door he saw my reaction and ushered me inside, explaining how the little one had been fairly sick since birth and no, we just couldn't save it. The next time I came to the house, the sick kitten was nowhere to be found, gently put out of its misery by a compassionate and callused hand.

My mother has always had the maiden name Howery, even though her mom and Clint divorced when she was in college. One day, curious, I asked her why it hadn't changed to her biological father's or her mother's maiden name. Unbeknownst to me, my grandfather had gone to great expense to legally adopt the children he raised with my grandmother. Although only one of the four is his by blood, all of them have always been his in heart and now on paper. His divorce with my grandmother spurred him to make absolutely certain none of his kids would ever question whom they belonged to.

What I know of my grandfather is this: he once introduced me to a cow called Oreo who, as he put it, would "meet me again on my dinner plate." He has taught me to call a spade a spade without preamble or apologies. He showed me how to let baby cows think you're their mom so they nuzzle up to you and suck on your fingers. He taught me to find the joy in even the small things: a newborn kitten, working with your hands, end tables with legs made of "legs" wearing jeans and cowboy boots. He once put a small, dying kitten out of its misery quietly, with gentle love. He has taught me to be like nature: tough but fair, and compassionate.

My grandfather is like the mountains: ineffable and grounded, rustic and majestic. From his blue jeans to the faded hat he must have had since before I was born, he is a cowboy through and through. And a father. Partner. Grandfather. Saddle maker. Full of stories. Thrill seeker. Lover of cats. Direct and honest. Tall drink of water. Nurturer of cows. Enemy of coyotes. Family. But to call him just one robs him, he is much more than that. He is none of these things without the others. He is as I have described him and more, much more.

My grandfather is the mountains.

Mussel boat number 50 intercepted

On Thursday, Aug. 26, watercraft inspectors at the Nashua station inspected an outboard motorboat with mussels on the transducer, gimbal and other areas of the transom. The motorboat was traveling from Lake Erie to Kalispell. This is the 50th mussel-fouled boat intercepted this year, surpassing the total number of 35 mussel-fouled boats intercepted in 2020.

The Nashua watercraft inspection station, located on Highway 2, is operated by the McCone Conservation District under a contract with Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks.

Statewide, 94,800 watercraft inspections have been conducted this year, slightly down from the 112,300 number of inspections conducted at this time last year.

Letter to the Editor

Have you ever wondered what is going on locally in the expanding field of information gathering technology, better known as data? Do you even have a right to know how data is collected about you in your town? Are things getting out of control in that area, or could they, and just how might such data possibly be used for nefarious purposes at present or in the future?

Currently neither your county nor city governments appear to have any policy or limits with regards to data collection. With the revelation in January 2020 by the New York times that Safeway's parent company, Albertsons, has partnered with an Artificial Intelligence company to gather facial recognition data from its stores, many questions have arisen. While private businesses do, and probably should be able to on some level, gather data for security and marketing purposes they also should have an ultimate duty to protect the public interest by securing that personal information from prying eyes. These days it seems reasonable to suspect that some local businesses, with merely a request and without any oversight, may give up the public's data to the government and others willingly. Besides being incredibly creepy, the obvious problem with this, if true, is that it would bypass the checks and balances of proving your data is crucial in an investigation to a judge before being acquired by law enforcement and override the safeguards that were designed to protect citizens from tyranny and abuse. Given this areas history, and putting that spin on things, a person could think of our current information situation as the wild west with the road agents in charge, and it's long past being time to bring some civilization and law and order to the place.

It doesn't have to be this way. The public should know how data about them is collected, used, stored and shared. We can make a difference, albeit a small one, to slow this runaway train in our community. I propose to introduce "An Act to Promote Transparency and Protect Civil Rights and Civil Liberties With Respect to Surveillance Technology" at the next Dillon City Council meeting. This model legislation drafted by the ACLU has already been adopted by 21 other cities in the USA and would bring a measure of transparency as to how the data about us is gathered, give the public input on the implementation of any new technologies as well as bring some clarity to the data sharing situation and create some degree of supervision, of which we currently have none.

If you believe that privacy is core to a free society, are concerned about the future direction of things, or just want to know more about what is going on in your town, please attend the next city council meeting scheduled for September 1st at 7 pm.

Montana Highway Patrol Offers Safety Back to School Traffic Safety Tips to Keep Kids Safe

As students across our state return to the classroom, Attorney General Austin Knudsen and the Montana Highway Patrol (MHP) are reminding motorists to follow all school bus and school zone traffic laws, including new laws in effect this year.

By simply following the law and taking necessary precautions, motorists can help ensure Montana students get to and from school safely.

"If one child gets injured on their way to or from school this year, it will be one too many," Attorney General Knudsen said. "Everyone can do their part to make sure Montana school kids get home safely each day."

"As school begins across the state, it's imperative that every driver know his or her responsibilities when approaching a stopped school bus," MHP Colonel Steve Lavin said. "The simple acts of paying attention, remaining patient, and understanding the law can help stop preventable tragedies."

Keep these traffic laws in mind when approaching a school bus:

- Prepare to slow down when you see the amber/yellow flashing lights. Stop 30 feet from a stopped school bus when it is flashing red lights.
- When a school bus is stopped at a four-way intersection, vehicles can't turn left, turn right, or pass the school bus.
- When the stop arm is out on a school bus and there is a raised median, all traffic traveling in the same direction as the bus must stop.
- When the stop arm is out on a school bus on a non-divided highway or two-lane road, traffic traveling all directions must stop within 30 feet of the bus.
- MHP also reminds Montanans to slow down and pay attention to the changing speed limits in school zones, look for children crossing the street near schools, and not to pass a school bus that is stopped.

Following this year's legislative session, new school bus safety laws are going into effect. First, House Bill 207, allows school buses to add additional red lights, amending the previous law that only four red lights could be installed. Beginning October 1, House Bill 267 will also increase the reckless driving penalties for drivers who pass, in either direction, a stopped school bus that is displaying the visual flashing red signal from $500 to up to $1,000 or possible jail time, punishable upon conviction.

In 2020, the Montana Highway Patrol investigated 99 school bus violations statewide.

Fish and Wildlife Commission adopts 2021/2022 wolf hunting and trapping regulations

After a public comment period that drew more than 26,000 comments, the Fish and Wildlife Commission adopted several changes to the 2021/2022 wolf hunting and trapping regulations at its meeting on Aug. 20.

Changes include eliminating quotas, increasing the number of wolf trapping and hunting licenses allowed for individual hunters, extending wolf trapping seasons and the allowance of snares for trapping wolves.

Wolf regulations were adopted as follows:

A harvest of 450 wolves shall initiate a commission review with potential for rapid in-season adjustments to hunting and trapping regulations. Thereafter, the commission shall be similarly re-engaged at intervals of additional 50 wolves harvested, if season adjustments allow for additional wolf harvest. Additionally, the following harvests by any region alone shall initiate a commission review with potential for rapid in-season adjustments to hunting and trapping regulations:

- Region 1 – 195 wolves
- Region 2 – 116 wolves
- Region 3 – 82 wolves
- Region 4 – 39 wolves
- Region 5 – 11 wolves
- Region 6 – 3 wolves
- Region 7 – 4 wolves

Blacktail Dental to open soon

Blacktail Dental, a new dental practice owned and operated by the Southwest Montana Community Health Center, is slated to open in mid-September at 122 E. Glendale St. "It is our mission to provide access and quality care to the people of Southwest Montana," said Dr. Shawna Yates, executive director for the SWMTCHC. "We have been working diligently to remodel our building and hire staff, including two new dentists, in order to meet the dental needs of the area." The health center was forced to close its dental services in 2020 due to the Covid pandemic. The remodeled building was the site of a former law office and is located across the street from the Blacktail Pharmacy at 125 E. Glendale. The clinic plans to remodel that building in the next year in order to relocate its primary medical and behavioral health services there. "We are making significant investments in the Dillon community in order to meet community needs," Yates added. "We are thrilled to be creating a new home for medical, dental, pharmacy and behavioral health services for everyone who needs us." The new dental clinic will accept all insurances, including Medicaid, and offers a sliding fee scale to eligible patients.
