ARE YOU BATHING TOO FREQUENTLY?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

When I worked at my late uncle's junkyard during junior high school, one of the regular customers (a crusty coot who resembled a cantankerous Roy Rogers sidekick wannabe) assured us that he luxuriated in a steaming bathtub each and every night.

We were skeptical, but it still burned in my brain an image of grimy tumbling tumbleweeds popping through the suds. Brrrrr.

Anyhow, for the past several decades I've taken the uprightness of a daily shower for granted.

But a recent social media kerfuffle over celebrity couples with lax personal hygiene standards for themselves and their children started me researching the topic of showering and bathing frequency.

Times change. When I was working up a sweat at the junkyard, "Dueling Banjos" was on the AM radio. Now the internet is full of dueling dermatologists.

Some dermatologists tell us that the polite-society-approved daily cleanup is the safest bet. Others warn that it can be wasteful or even harmful to bathe more than three or four times a week (with exceptions for sponge baths for armpits, feet and private parts).

Emboldened by the second group of skin doctors, myriad rebels are only too happy to rain on the parade of people who actually enjoy the physical and emotional aspects of the bathing ritual. ("I demand a retraction! We don't rain on anyone. They might feel compelled to rub themselves dry with a towel! Oh, the humanity!")

The passion of these zealots catches me off-guard. With all the geese and swans to worry about, who would have imagined that Rubber Duckie would be atop 2021's endangered waterfowl list? Who imagined that singing in the shower would be reduced to "Well, I'm a-runnin' down the road/Tryin' to loosen my…To be continued"?

Proponents of infrequent bathing have mastered both positive and negative reinforcement to achieve their goals. My Google research for this column uncovered websites that promised my skin would be "vibrant and radiant" if I just cut back on washing. I think that ship has already sailed – and brushed its starboard hull against both cheeks, if my mirror is any indication.

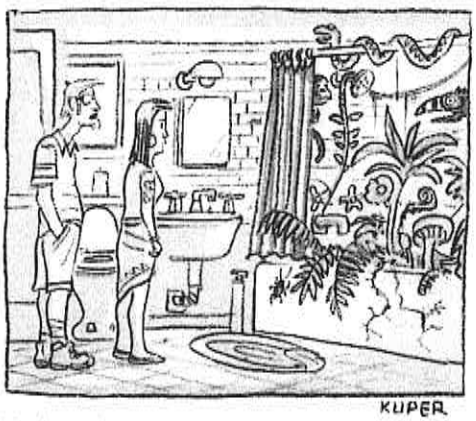
Some websites warned me that too-frequent bathing could disrupt my skin's microbiome. Seriously, if a little soap and water causes my good bacteria that much anguish, I'm not too confident about how they would handle a cage match with my BAD bacteria. Maybe the good bacteria should just quit while they're ahead and accept a "participation" ribbon.

Several experts touted cutting back on the amount of water used as a means of saving the planet I can just picture Jack Bauer of "24" racing against the clock to thwart such water-wasting villains. ("He showered for five minutes and one second! Noooooooooo!")

Millions of people are on edge after being browbeaten for the unintended consequences of their daily baths/showers. They keep waiting for the other shoe to drop. ("No, don't drop the other shoe yet. That little piggie isn't due for a bath until the day after tomorrow!")

Seriously, what other intricate systems are we messing up? If you trim your nose hair, will it blow out your Achilles tendon? Inquiring minds want to know.



"It's better for the environment not to shower everyday."

Do what's best for you. Consider your skin type, the season and your level of exertion. Get a professional opinion. Get a second opinion.

"I'll even give you a third opinion. Your B.O. killed my canary. I hated that canary. You're welcome."

Application deadline extended for northwest Montana mountain lion committee

The deadline to submit applications to serve on the Northwest Lion Ecoregional Population Committee has been extended to Sept. 28. The committee will advise the Fish and Wildlife Commission on management of mountain lions in northwest Montana.

The committee will be asked to develop a target that maximizes public satisfaction related to mountain lion hunting opportunity, mountain lion conflict and ungulate population trends. The committee will provide a recommendation on what the mountain lion population should look like five years from now.

In 2019, the Fish and Wildlife Commission adopted the new Mountain Lion Monitoring and Management Strategy. This strategy outlines the scientific basis for conserving, monitoring and managing harvest of mountain lions in Montana. An integral part of implementing this new strategy is the formulation of a committee in each of the three western ecoregions, beginning with the northwest ecoregion. The northwest ecoregion committee will consist of 12 citizens representing a broad spectrum of mountain lion stakeholders who reside within or close to the ecoregion. The committee will meet two or three times this fall to deliberate and make recommendations that Fish, Wildlife & Parks can carry forward to the commission.

Those interested in applying for the committee can download an application from FWP's website by clicking here. Applications must be submitted by 5 p.m. on Sept. 28.

A Summons to My Dillonites

Those of you who journey to downtown Dillon have surely notices the window art done by our lady, Jocelyn. These works of art are very appealing and very well done.

So now, my appeal. Jocelyn is in the process of doing 13 windows to honor and tribute the 13 service men and women who were killed by a terrorist strike at the Kabul, Afghanistan airport. A very solemn and beautiful tribute. Jocelyn is doing these 13 windows free-of-charge.

I am asking you to join me in making a contribution, either in cash or courtesy card at one of our cities dining facilities. Contributions will be collected at Womack's Printing.

24-hour waiting period no longer required after black bear hunting license purchase

The 2021 Black Bear Regulations booklets contain language about a requirement for hunters to wait 24 hours after the bear license is issued to hunt bears. This is no longer accurate.

The 2021 Montana Legislature eliminated the requirement. Because the regulations were printed before the Montana Legislature changed the statute, the information is outdated.

The regulations posted on the FWP website are current.

Low water levels will limit waterfowl hunting opportunities at Canyon Ferry WMA

Waterfowl hunting opportunities will be limited on the Canyon Ferry Wildlife Management Area this year during both the youth and general waterfowl seasons due to ongoing extreme drought.

Pond 2 at the WMA is dry, Pond 4 is expected to be completely dry in about a week, and water levels in Ponds 1 and 3 are also down significantly. There has not been any water going into Ponds 2 or 4 for more than two months, according to Adam Grove, wildlife biologist for Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks in Townsend.

"There simply has not been enough waterflow in the Missouri River for most of the summer to provide adequate water to the canals that supply water to Ponds 2, 3 and 4 to keep the water levels up," Grove said.

Water from the ponds also drains below the surface into Canyon Ferry Reservoir when the reservoir's water levels are lower than the ponds, which has been the case all summer. Canyon Ferry Reservoir did not come close to reaching full pool this year due to drought conditions, according to Grove.

Waterfowl hunting opportunities on the WMA will likely be limited this fall. However, low water levels this season may provide some habitat benefits for next season by aerating the soil. If next year is a normal water year, it's likely the ponds will see positive responses in aquatic vegetation and invertebrates, enhancing habitat for waterfowl.

Fish and Wildlife Commission to meet Sept. 24

The Montana Fish and Wildlife Commission will meet Friday, Sept. 24, at 7:30 a.m. via Zoom to approve several Contractual Public Elk Hunting Access Agreements, also known as House Bill 454 agreements.

Under these contracts, a landowner works with the Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks to define areas open to public elk hunting, the number of elk hunting days that will be allowed on the property, and other relevant details.

The agreements up for final approval on Friday are for the IX Ranch, the Pinwheel Ranch and the Wilks Ranch.

Public comment will be taken at this meeting prior to the final decision. Interested members of the public may comment during the meeting via Zoom. Details for connecting with the Zoom platform will be placed on the commission's webpage prior to the meeting start time. To listen to the meeting, click on the link provided on the commission webpage https://fwp.mt.gov/aboutfwp/commission.

Blacktail Dental to open soon

Blacktail Dental, a new dental practice owned and operated by the Southwest Montana Community Health Center, is slated to open in mid-September at 122 E. Glendale St."It is our mission to provide access and quality care to the people of Southwest Montana," said Dr. Shawna Yates, executive director for the SWMTCHC. "We have been working diligently to remodel our building and hire staff, including two new dentists, in order to meet the dental needs of the area."The health center was forced to close its dental services in 2020 due to the Covid pandemic. The remodeled building was the site of a former law office and is located across the street from the Blacktail Pharmacy at 125 E. Glendale. The clinic plans to remodel that building in the next year in order to relocate its primary medical and behavioral health services there."We are making significant investments in the Dillon community in order to meet community needs," Yates added. "We are thrilled to be creating a new home for medical, dental, pharmacy and behavioral health services for everyone who needs us."The new dental clinic will accept all insurances, including Medicaid, and offers a sliding fee scale to eligible patients.
