Attorney General Knudsen Launches New Online Missing Persons Database

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen launched a new tool To help law enforcement agencies and the public find missing persons and bring them home. The enhanced Montana Missing Persons Database is easier to use, increases accessibility for cell phones and tablets, and includes other features to provide accurate and timely information.

Making up-to-date information available to law enforcement officials and community members throughout our state will help increase the likelihood that someone will identify a missing person and contact the Montana Department of Justice or other law enforcement agency.

"Far too many children, women, and men go missing in our state each year, and the Montana Department of Justice is committed to doing its part to find them and bring them home," Attorney General Knudsen said. "This new easier-to-use tool that provides up-to-date information for law enforcement and the public is a part of that ongoing effort. We're continuing to improve collaboration with other law enforcement agencies and tribes around Montana to help end the crisis of missing persons."

Weekly reports of missing school-aged children that were generated manually by Department staff are now replaced with the ability for users to create the same up-to-the-minute reports with just two clicks. A report of missing indigenous persons can be created the same way. Users can also develop their own custom reports based on age, race, gender, investigating agency, date missing and other attributes. All

The Department of Justice's Information Technology Services Division developed the new database, which the Division of Criminal Investigation maintains. Individual law enforcement agencies enter the necessary information into the database.

As of October 27, there are currently 217 Montana missing persons, including 81 children and 56 indigenous persons. Most individuals reported missing are under the age of 18. The vast majority of people who are reported missing 'nearly 98 percent' are found or return on their own.

The new database tool for the public and law enforcement agencies is part of Attorney General Knudsen's ongoing efforts to reduce the number of missing Montanans.

During the 2021 legislative session, the Department of Justice supported the passage of House Bill 35, which established the Missing Indigenous Persons Review Commission, and House Bill 98, which extended the Montana Missing Indigenous Persons Task Force. In February, Attorney General Knudsen announced a new public-private partnership called the Sentinel Project to fight human trafficking in the state.

Pickleball: Dillon has one of the nation's fastest-growing sports at the YMCA

Balls are bouncing in the new gym at the Dillon YMCA. But instead of basketballs or volleyballs, players are sporting wiffle balls and wooden ping-pong (table tennis) like paddles. The game is called Pickleball. It has over 3 million players nationwide, according to the United States of America Pickleball Association (USAPA), and was labeled the "fastest growing sport" in the United States in 2015 by the Sports & Fitness Industry Association.

A Pickleball court is the size of badminton court (44' by 20') with a 36 inch high net. Paddles are generally made of wood, fiberglass, or graphite material and the perforated plastic balls are made of a thicker plastic than a regular wiffle ball. There are balls for indoor and outdoor play. The rules are unique to the game but are said to be a mixture of badminton, table tennis, and tennis.

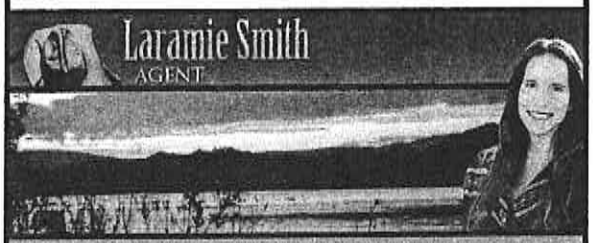

The game was designed to be fun for all ages. The game was founded in the summer of 1965 when Joel Pritchard, a Washington state congressman and Bill Bell, a successful businessman after returning from playing golf found their families sitting around and complaining that they had nothing to do. Looking at damaged badminton equipment at Pritchard's home they decided to improvise with home made like table tennis paddles and a wiffle ball. The following week a friend Barney McCallum came to play the game and fell in love with the sport. He and Bell would formalize the rules and make it a completive game for the whole family

There is some disagreement over where the sport got its name. According to the USAPA website, McCallum said it was named after the Pritchard's cocker spaniel, "Pickles," with the ball belonging to the dog. Another popular theory is that the name originates from the sport of rowing because of the term "pickle boat crew," a crew thrown together with leftover rowers from the other boats.

There are no outdoor courts yet in Dillon, but who knows what the future holds. At least 16 Montana communities including Dillon have some very impressive outdoor and well as indoor facilities. There is even talk of the game becoming an Olympic sport. The game is just a lot of fun and many would argue it's easier to play than the three sports that make its foundation.

Available at the "Y" are paddles, balls, and nets along with three indoor courts. To learn to play contact the "Y" for lessons and playing times.

Fish and Wildlife Commission adopts clarification to muzzleloader heritage season regulations

The Fish and Wildlife Commission adopted a clarification to the muzzleloader heritage hunting season for deer and elk. The commission approved the regulations for the season at its meeting on Aug. 20.

The clarification states that any unused license-permit valid on the last day of the general season (i.e., Nov. 28, 2021) would be valid during the muzzleloader heritage season (Dec. 11 to 19, 2021).

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks is seeking public comment on an herbicide treatment project on Nilan Reservoir

FWP is proposes treat a 1.15-acre area within a small bay of Nilan Reservoir with the aquatic herbicide fluridone to eradicate Eurasian watermilfoil (EWM). The proposed treatment would occur Nov. 9.

EWM is a highly invasive aquatic plant; this is the first detection of EWM in this basin. Montana has limited populations of EWM so management of it is important to prevent further spread into other nearby waters. The one-time treatment will not cause any major impacts to the physical environment or human environment. The reservoir is at historic low levels so the amount of water that will need to be treated is very limited.

To view the environmental assessment and to comment, visit fwp.mt.gov/news/public-notices. Public comments will be accepted through Nov. 8, at 5 p.m.
