Hunter success varies but remains within long-term averages in southwest Montana General hunting season reaches midpoint

Hunter success in southwest Montana has varied but remains close to long-term averages as the general hunting season reaches the half-way mark.

Wildlife biologists with Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks have operated several check stations on weekends during the general hunting season. Biologists use check stations to collect data on hunter participation and success, as well as the species, sex and age class of the animals harvested. This supplements data collected through hunter harvest phone surveys each year.

During Nov. 7 and 8, the Cameron check station saw 393 hunters, 10.2 percent of whom were successful in harvesting an animal. This number of hunters was above average, and their success rate was the second-highest recorded in the past decade.

Over the same weekend, biologists also operated check stations in Divide and Alder. The Divide check station saw 216 hunters, with a success rate of 6.9 percent, which is close to the long-term average. The Alder check station saw 232 hunters, 16.8 percent of whom had harvested an animal.

Biologists have noted unseasonably warm temperatures in some areas with only light snow in upper elevations. Many areas remain snow free, making it difficult to find and track game.

So far this season, biologists in southwest Montana have operated check stations in Alder, Blacktail Deer Creek Watershed, Cameron, Divide, Gallatin, Townsend and York. In total so far, they've met with 3,417 hunters who have harvested 32 white-tailed deer, 64 mule deer and 273 elk, among other species.

These figures do not account for different hunting season regulations over the years, which have varied from liberal to restrictive for elk and mule deer, depending on population status.

Public Service Announcement

The City of Dillon has placed two additional stop signs at the intersection of Southside Blvd and State Street. This intersection is now a four way stop. After several discussions with the City of Dillon Police it was felt that the best way to get traffic to slow down was to establish a four way stop.

If you have any questions please contact Todd Hazelbaker, Director of Operations, at 683-4245.

They started over with Baldy, which they climbed this fall, the week Wade turned 72 years old. Baldy was the first one they climbed 16 years ago when Kyle was 8 years old.

Caid Honored with Prestigious Conservation Award

The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation bestowed its highest honor, the Wallace Fennell Pate Wildlife Conservation Award, to John Caid. The Arizona native and RMEF life member is a 36-year volunteer who also served a decade on the organization's board of directors, with two years as board chair during a time of proficient growth and success for RMEF.

"The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation has meant the world to me," said Caid. "I was extremely honored to even be considered for the board. And to get elected chairman of the board is crazy. And now this. It's been really home to me and I truly appreciate everything that's happened. That's one of the highlights of my life obviously."

Caid joined RMEF in 1985, nine months after its establishment. He served as a committee member and helped create the RMEF Pinetop Lakeside Chapter before eventually entering his service on the board.

Professionally, Caid spent 34 years as a biologist and eventual director of the White Mountain Apache Game and Fish Department, where he transformed the agency's elk hunting program by instigating a series of habitat enhancement and research projects that bolstered elk numbers and genetics.

He continues to collaborate with RMEF where he now works as general manager of the UU Bar Ranch in New Mexico, a landscape he helped transform into one of the world's premiere elk hunting destinations.

"We heartily congratulate John on behalf of the board, our entire organization and membership. We appreciate everything he's done for the organization," said Mark Baker, RMEF board chair. "John's service has been invaluable to where we've been as a conservation group and where we're at today."

Surrounded by family and friends, Caid received the award in front of hundreds of onlookers during a RMEF gathering at the PBR World Finals on November 6, 2021, in Las Vegas.

"I never expected anything like this. It's just an honor I never expected ever in my life to receive. To me, the Elk Foundation became the best conservation organization in the world," added Caid.

Montana Western Presents "It's a Wonderful Life: A Live Radio Play"

The University of Montana Western's Theatre students are pleased to announce "It's a Wonderful Life: A Live Radio Play" to be held November 18-21 as part of the Bank of Commerce Performing Arts Series. The performances will begin at 7:30 p.m. each night in the Small Auditorium (room 314) in Main Hall on the University of Montana Western campus.

"It's A Wonderful Life," the American holiday film classic, has been creatively transposed into a stage adaptation, as if the story is being told as a 1948 live radio broadcast direct from the imaginary studio of WBFR Radio New York City. A team of student actors from Montana Western stand before retro microphones, creating the voices of dozens of characters. A sound effect "foley" artist shakes a hand-crafted thunder tube and cranks a wind machine to mimic a winter storm. Advertising gals and guys strut in glitzy outfits touting "marvelous soap" and "miraculous hair tonic." And all of this occurs in front of a live audience! The show provides just the kind of fun and warmth welcomed at this time of year.

A tear-jerker of a story, idealistic everyman George Bailey considers ending his life one snowy Christmas Eve, but, with the intervention of his guardian angel, he sees the sad lives of his family, friends, and beloved little town if he would have never been born. Recognizing that "no man is a failure who has friends," he finds strength with his wife and children secure in his arms, good friends by his side, and learns how wonderful life truly is.

According to Director Bethany Mason, "This is a play showing how much of an impact we can have on those around us and how important each one of us really are. I hope everyone leaves the theatre feeling uplifted and grateful to all those who have affected our lives in even the smallest way. After the difficult times we have all been through, it is important to take a moment and remember it really is a wonderful life."

Tickets for "It's a Wonderful Life: A Live Radio Play" are $10 general, $5 youth, and free for UMW students. The play is the third in the 2021-22 Bank of Commerce Performing Arts Series.
