Upper Madison River fishing closure to be lifted Friday Flows in Madison River returning to normal

A full fishing closure that was implemented in the upper Madison River will be lifted on Friday now that a gate at Hebgen Dam has been repaired and river flows are returning to normal.

The closure was enacted on Tuesday after a malfunction at Hebgen Dam caused flows on the Madison River to drop, stranding fish on riffles and concentrating fish in deep water. Crews from NorthWestern Energy repaired the dam late Wednesday, and flows are gradually rising again throughout the upper Madison River.

The impacts to the fishery from this period of reduced flows are still unclear.

The fishing closure, which extended from Ennis Lake upstream to Hebgen Dam, will no longer be in effect starting Friday, Dec. 3.

Phase I of Landscape-Scale Oregon Project Complete

More than 4,600 acres of prime elk habitat in northeast Oregon are now protected and open to the public thanks to a collaborative effort by the Manulife Investment Management's timberland business (formerly Hancock Natural Resource Group), Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW), Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation and other supporters.

The Minam River Acquisition is a two-phase effort comprised of 15,573 acres that serve as a gateway to the Wallowa Mountains and link the Minam River Wildlife Area and Minam State Recreational Area to the 361,000-acre Eagle Cap Wilderness. It also improves public access for hunting, fishing and other recreational activity to an additional 6,000 acres of U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management lands.

The Minam River Wildlife Area is easily accessible off Highway 82 and the Hells Canyon Scenic Byway. A proposed trailhead near the highway will flow south through the project area and connect with the Eagle Cap Wilderness.

"We appreciate the opportunity to partner with RMEF and ODFW to ensure this important wildlife habitat is preserved into perpetuity," said Tom Sarno, global head of Timberland Investments, Manulife Investment Management. "In addition to the lands directly involved in this sale, Manulife Investment Management is pleased to continue to work with RMEF and ODFW on the larger landscape level strategy focused on connecting the Minam State Recreation Area to the Wallowa-Whitman National Forest bringing further critical habitat under conservation status."

The new acreage is now part of the Minam River Wildlife Area. ODFW plans to manage it as a working landscape, utilizing grazing to improve forage condition for wildlife and to enhance habitat through active forest management in partnership with the Oregon Department of Forestry.

Significant funding partners include ODFW, Bass Pro Shops and Cabela's Outdoor Fund, Oregon Hunters Association, RMEF and hunters, thanks to dollars generated by the Pittman-Robertson Act.

Fundraising continues for the remaining 10,963 acres with a tentative closing date of December 2023. Once completed, the overall project will protect vital winter range for an elk herd numbering 1,400 as well as 114 miles of streams and rivers.
