JOSEPHINE CLARK 12/24/2021

Jo left the world quietly in her sleep, while in the company of her entire family. Even to her last few days, she spoke, smiled and listened to family-members stories. Finally, she joined her husband of 70 years, Ray, who passed 4 months earlier. Jo was born in Lander, Wyoming, on October 5th, 1930, to Joseph J. Schroeder & Florence May Schroeder. She was the last survivor of 2 siblings, Jerry & Ina.

Jo spent her school years in Hudson, Wyoming, moving to Denver for business school. She then moved to Riverton where she met the love of her life, Ray Clark, who was in Riverton after leaving the Navy. They married, and, after 20 years, moved to Dillon, Montana in 1967. After Ray's retirement in 1987, he and Jo wintered in Yuma, Arizona. Back home they camped, visited family, and, enjoyed nearly every one of Dillon's sporting events.

Jo is survived by her daughters Janice (Jon) Springer, & Diane (Bob) Vezina, son Kerry (Butch) (Leighanne) Clark, eight grandchildren, fourteen great grandchildren, & four great, great grandchildren.

No services are planned. A celebration of life will be held at a later date. Condolences can be sent to the Clark family, 270 Ten Peaks Drive, Dillon, MT 59725. Memorials should be made to Jo's health care providers, and Barrett Healthcare in Dillon

Wolf trapping open in all Wolf Management Units

Wolf trapping is now open in all Montana Wolf Management Units. After monitoring grizzly bear activity across much of the state, Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks biologists have determined the potential risk for trapping conflicts in grizzly bear areas is low.

FWP biologists have been monitoring grizzly bear activity with a variety of methods since early November. This includes monitoring collared grizzly bears, sightings of bears in the field, weather assessments and reports from the public.

The Montana Fish and Wildlife Commission adopted final changes to the 2021 wolf trapping regulations at its Oct. 28 meeting. The adoption included a "floating" start date for wolf trapping in areas with grizzly bears to be no earlier than the Monday after Thanksgiving, and no later than Dec. 31.

Commission passes rule changes on Madison, regulations on stretch of Big Hole

The Montana Fish and Wildlife Commission approved two rule changes on Monday concerning recreational and commercial use on the Madison River. In addition, commissioners approved an adjustment to brown trout regulations on a section the Big Hole River.

In a relatively short meeting, the commission dealt with two recommendations from the current Madison River Work Group, which has met several times during the past six months.

The work group recommended administrative rule changes that would keep the walk/wade sections in place, as they have been for decades: Quake Lake to Lyons Bridge and Ennis Bridge to Ennis Lake. In 2020, the previous commission approved a rule that would have adjusted the long-standing walk/wade sections starting Jan. 1. Today's commission action reverses the previous 2020 commission decision and keeps the walk/wade sections on the Madison River as they are described in the 2021 fishing regulations.

The work group also recommended repealing the rule passed by the 2020 commission that established a rest/rotation system for commercial use on the upper Madison River. On Monday, the commission followed the work group recommendation and repealed that rule as well.

On the Big Hole River, the commission adjusted 2022 fishing dates for the stretch of river from the Bureau of Land Management Maiden Rock fishing access site to the Browne's Bridge FAS. That section will be open for fishing April 1 through Sept. 30.

New Year's Eve Challenge

Bryce Angell

My wife gave me a challenge, one night on New Year's Eve, to welcome in another year. I must have been naïve. I'm usually in the sack same time as chickens hit their light. So, for me to stay up extra late was really going to bite. I hoped to stay awake by drinking Coconut Red Bull and munching down on smokie links. I could eat a belly full. My wife bought cheese and crackers and she made her onion dip. Was I ready for the evening? This one I'd like to skip. The kitchen clock chimed 8 pm with four more hours to go. My eyes were getting sleepy. Staying awake was touch and go. At nine o'clock I ate the smokies, crackers and the cheese. Then tanked down all my Red Bull. Sleep was putting on the squeeze. This time of night I usually watched the back of my eyelids. I realized this challenge was for crazy, younger kids. At eleven sharp I closed my eyes to get a wink or two. It seems those winks turned out to be a little more than few. I thought I heard my wife say, "Hon it's almost twelve o'clock." By then I didn't give a hoot. I was sleeping like a rock. When I woke and looked around the room, I'd somehow climbed in bed. And then I heard my wife exclaim, "Good morning sleepy head." How does a husband live it down? A wife just seems to know. She'd warned me not to close my eyes. Now she's saying, "Told you so." Will I ever stop accepting a challenge from my wife? I know I should resist. It seems to always cause me strife. So next year when it's New Year's Eve, sleep won't be such a shock. I won't be celebrating. I'll be in bed at eight o'clock.

HOW IS YOUR SELF-IMAGE THIS CHRISTMAS?
Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

I distinctly remember what I ate for supper on Christmas Eve 50 years ago.
Not the entrée perhaps, but certainly the vegetable.
My mother served stewed potatoes ("potato slopters," as she dubbed them).
I remember the potatoes because I was passionately reading my newly purchased 25-cent comic book ("Justice League of America" Vol. 1 #96, featuring the JLA versus Starbreaker the Cosmic Vampire) at the dining room table and splashed the food all over it.
That damaged comic book still has a place of honor in my old bedroom. And it serves as a metaphor for the extreme ways some people regard themselves in relation to the one who is the Reason for the Season.
Back in 1971 I could've had a perfectionist meltdown and discarded the comic book as a soiled, worthless piece of garbage.
I recognized that I had defaced the periodical, but I nonetheless saw the enduring non-monetary worth of it. It remained perfectly readable. It retains sentimental value. And its continued existence means it can be passed on to future generations.
What does that have to do with self-image? Well, many people feel particularly useless, helpless and unloved at this time of year.
Whether it's because of family reputation, poverty, chronic illness, an ugly divorce, substance abuse or some other calamity, some folks view themselves as irredeemable – permanently stained and hopeless. They see their only alternatives as either more self-pity or a “George Bailey” suicide attempt.

Christians have an obligation to remind these people that God has always utilized flawed individuals to accomplish great tasks and that Jesus felt compassion for the poor, afflicted and outcast. He dined with tax collectors and sinners. Instead of memorizing sad songs, those with low self-esteem should restore their dignity by memorizing John 3:16.

On the other hand, for the past five decades I could have lied to myself about my comic book. I could try to bluff and bully a collector into accepting it as in “mint” condition, but my delusions would not change reality.

That’s my way of leading into this indisputable truth: some people have an inflated view of their value to God and man. “Humility” and “reverence” are not in their lexicon. They consider themselves to be self-sufficient, entitled and answerable to no man or deity.

If they stumble upon Jesus amidst the snowmen and candy canes, they pigeonhole Him as (a) a myth, (b) a good teacher but nothing else or (c) “okay, maybe the Son of God, but I’ve got a lot of wild oats to sow before I’ll have time to settle down and follow Him.”

I don’t find the phrase “Cruisin’ for a bruise” in the Bible, but the sentiment fits such people.

Certainly, I pray for world peace this Christmas. I pray for health and happiness for friends and family. But I also pray that those on the extremes of self-image will learn some moderation.

Neither arrogance nor despair are in the best interests of mankind.

Life is a balancing act. I take it by faith that humans are made in the image of God. But imperfections, interdependence and responsibility must all be considered.

Surprisingly few of life’s problems can be solved with a “POW!,” “BAM!” or “ZAP!”

Ah, but by developing a realistic assessment of your potential and your obligations, you can move mountains.

Go tell it on the mountain
