Book Signing at The Bookstore

Montana author and MSU Professor, Gretchen Minton will be signing copies of her award winning book "Shakespeare in Montana - Big Sky Country's Love Affair with the World's most Famous Writer from 12:30-1:30 at The Bookstore on Saturday, January 8th. This book is a fascinating and comprehensive survey of Shakespeare's role in the Big Sky Country's social history.

Tracing more than two centuries of history Minton uncovers a vast array of different voices that capture the state's love affair with the world's most famous writer. From mountain men, pioneers, and itinerant acting companies in mining camps to women's clubs at the turn of the twentieth century and the contemporary popularity of Shakespeare in the Parks throughout Montana. The book chronicles the stories of residents across this incredible western state who have been attracted to the words and works of Shakespeare.

"Shakespeare in Montana" is Minton's sixth book. The project initially began with her husband's reading about mountain man Jim Bridger, who was illiterate and routinely hired someone to read Shakespeare to him by the campfire light. Additionally, she was also inspired by her work as the dramaturg, or literary adviser, with Montana Shakespeare in the Parks, a theater troupe based at MSU that travels thousands of miles each summer with a portable stage taking Shakespeare's plays to scores of small communities in Montana and surrounding states.

By revealing what Shakespeare has meant to the people of Montana, Minton offers us a better understanding of the state's citizens and history while providing a key perspective on Shakespeare's enduring global influence.

The author will also be the guest of the Shakespeare Book club following the signing at The Bookstore. Please call 683-6807 if you have any questions or would like to reserve a copy of Shakespeare in Montana.

FWP completes 2nd phase of conifer removal project on Mt. Haggin WMA

The second phase of a conifer removal project on Mt. Haggin Wildlife Management Area was completed in 2021, improving hundreds of acres of habitat for many wildlife species.

In the second phase of the project, crews removed small-diameter lodgepole and Douglas fir trees from 208 acres of elk summer range. Many of these removed trees were gathered into burn piles to reduce their impact on grass and shrub growth. Juniper, five-needle pines, ponderosa pine and deciduous tree species were left standing to maintain adequate cover and diversity.

The first phase of the project was completed in 2020 and included treating more than 800 acres of winter range. Additional phases are being planned to continue this project in other areas of the WMA, with the goal of treating approximately 2,500 acres.

Photo analyses over the past 40 years revealed significant conifer tree expansion into sagebrush shrublands, grasslands, aspen stands and riparian areas on the WMA. Left unchecked, this expansion could negatively impact the big game populations that depend on these plant communities for calving and fawning, summer weight gain, and winter survival, along with other wildlife species such as mountain grouse, songbirds and small mammals.

The treatment is expected to increase year-round forage and browse available to elk, mule deer, moose, pronghorn and ruffed grouse. It is also expected to increase the amount of habitat available to numerous sagebrush- and grassland-dependent avian and small mammal species for the coming decades. These improvements are especially important for wildlife following 2021, a significant drought year.

Phase 2 of the project was funded by contributions from FWP, the Montana Dept. of Justice's Natural Resource Damage Program, the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation and the Mule Deer Foundation.

Attorney General Knudsen, Gov. Gianforte encourage Montanans to fight to eliminate human trafficking

Attorney General Austin Knudsen joined Governor Greg Gianforte in declaring January Slavery and Human Trafficking Prevention Month in Montana and encouraging Montanans to be part of the solution to end human trafficking. The Attorney General and Governor were joined by Montana Highway Patrol Colonel Steve Lavin and representatives from the HER Campaign and The LifeGuard Group – two non-profit organizations combatting human trafficking in Montana.

Human trafficking is a form of modern-day slavery whereby traffickers, which are often organized criminal enterprises, profit at the expense of adults or children by compelling them to perform labor or engage in commercial sex. It has been on the rise in Montana in recent years. The number of cases tracked by the Montana Department of Justice has increased by 485 percent since 2015. It is also estimated that human trafficking generates $150 billion worldwide per year.

Attorney General Knudsen will continue to raise awareness of human trafficking during January by visiting communities across the state to address the issue with local law enforcement and encourage prevention efforts.

"Human trafficking and sexual slavery are happening in Montana and we can't ignore it. That's why fighting human trafficking is one of my top priorities as Attorney General," Attorney General Knudsen said. "These are not victimless crimes and ignoring the problem will not make them go away. I urge every Montanan to join us in our fight to eliminate human trafficking – educate yourself about the problem, learn the signs, and report suspected human traffickers."

"It was a pleasure to join the Governor and the Attorney General at the State Capitol as they signed the proclamation against human trafficking in Montana. I'm thankful that we have leaders in our state who are working with non-profits, like the HER Campaign, and task forces to combat this problem and end human trafficking," Sammy Higgs, co-founder of the HER Campaign, said.

"It was great to join the Governor and the Attorney General this morning to shine a light on human trafficking. It's so valuable to have our elected officials come along side us and other non-profits and task forces here in Montana," Lowell Hochhalter, founder and executive director of The LifeGuard Group, said. "It's also important that the community comes together to help us fight this. It will take all of us working together to bring human trafficking to an end."

To do your part in eliminating human trafficking, know the signs.

Potential indicators of human trafficking include:

- Being hesitant to engage in conversation. Eyes may be downcast, and victims may avoid eye contact.
- A poor physical state – tired, malnourished, or show signs of physical abuse or torture.
- Trouble responding to what their name is or where they are. Victims' whereabouts and names change frequently.
- Wearing clothes that do not fit the climate or situation they are in.
- Lack of control over money and personal possessions. May also carry very few possessions in a plastic bag.
- Accompanied by a dominating person or someone they seem fearful of. The controlling person may be someone who does not seem to "fit" such as a much older individual or an individual with behavior seemingly inappropriate with the suspected victim.

• A young girl or boy hanging around outside a convenience store, truck stop, casino, or other location. The individual may be approaching different vehicles or people they do not seem to know.

If you suspect human trafficking, call 911 in an emergency. In non-emergency situations call 1-833-406-STOP (1-833-406-7867) or reach an advocate via 406stop.com. If you see suspected traffickers, do not intervene, and remain at a safe distance. Take pictures of the trafficker, victim, and vehicle license plate if possible.

Attorney General Knudsen is committed to eliminating human trafficking and helping survivors by working with local law enforcement agencies and non-profit organizations. During his first year in office, Attorney General Knudsen implemented several efforts to eliminate human trafficking which include:

- Provided human trafficking awareness training for county attorneys to help them recognize trafficking cases that come across their desk.
- Expanded human trafficking training at the Montana Law Enforcement Academy so that all local, state, and tribal law enforcement officers entering the field can spot human trafficking.
- Required human trafficking training for all uniformed Montana Highway Patrol troopers to give them the tools to spot human trafficking in the field.
- Brought together anti-human trafficking organizations and regional task forces to improve resource coordination, identify gaps in services, and explore policy ideas that can be implemented by the legislature and state agencies to fight trafficking.
