Attorney General Knudsen leading fight to block CMS mandate before new deadline

Attorney General Austin Knudsen continues to lead the fight to protect Montana healthcare workers and their patients and employers from the Biden administration's COVID-19 vaccination mandate. In a new filing today, Attorney General Knudsen and 15 other attorneys general ask a federal judge to once again block the federal government from enforcing the mandate in their respective states.

The unlawful mandate for facilities that receive Medicare or Medicaid funding from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is "causing havoc in the healthcare labor market" across the nation – especially in rural communities – and does not account for the pandemic's changing circumstances.

"President Biden's scheme to federalize COVID-19 vaccination policy and force it on Americans who have chosen not to get the vaccine has hit the skids. Four separate mandates have either been struck down or are currently blocked by federal courts," Attorney General Knudsen said. "All that remains is the mandate for healthcare workers, and the emergence of the Omicron variant that is milder and resistant to vaccines has weakened the federal government's position even more. Healthcare systems in rural states like Montana can't afford to lose more workers, or patients will suffer."

The filing is the latest in the ongoing case against President Biden's vaccine mandate for health care workers. It seeks to stop the federal government from enforcing the mandate in Montana before the February 14 deadline by which workers at covered facilities must have received a first dose of a COVID-19 vaccine or have a pending or approved application for an exemption.

According to data published by the AARP Public Policy Institute, 41 percent of nursing home and long-term care facilities in Montana are already facing a shortage of nurses and/or aides. Current numbers around the nation represent the worst staffing shortages since the government began collecting data from nursing homes in May 2020. Low staffing levels in nursing homes—particularly among registered nurses—are associated with worse outcomes for residents, including more COVID-19 cases, deaths, and a higher likelihood of outbreaks. The mandate will undoubtedly make these problems worse.

"By forcing healthcare workers to choose between their jobs or an experimental vaccine they do not want, CMS is affirmatively pinching an already strained work-force—and particularly so in rural areas within [Montana]," the lawsuit reads.

Recognizing this workforce shortage and the untenable position in which it places covered healthcare facilities, federal guidance permits vaccinated employees who are testing positive for COVID-19 to return to work while prohibiting unvaccinated healthcare employees from working unless they obtain an exemption.

As the milder Omicron variant now accounts for 99.9 percent of COVID-19 cases in the country, the Biden administration's rationale for rushing the mandate without the legally required opportunity for the public to comment no longer exists. Additionally, emerging research shows that standard COVID-19 vaccinations provide little protection against transmission of the Omicron variant, and federal authorities have begun to walk back prior claims about the efficacy of the vaccines against this now-dominant variant.

Meanwhile, new guidance from the federal government issued after the U.S. Supreme Court decision imposes a brand-new vaccine mandate on state employees who survey and report whether Medicare and Medicaid facilities are complying with applicable regulations, including the mandate itself. This constitutes an "independent, substantive rule, and yet CMS failed utterly to comply with the procedures required by [federal law]" yet again.

The CMS COVID-19 vaccine mandate also violates the Tenth Amendment, the Spending Clause, the Anti-Commandeering Doctrine, and the Nondelegation Doctrine.

The case number is 3:21-cv-03970 in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Louisiana. It is being led by Montana, Arizona, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, and West Virginia.

LEARN HOW TO RELAX WHEN FACED WITH STRESS.

You can't always walk away from a stressful situation. Instead, get in the habit of taking 5-10 seconds to scan your body for tension from the top of your head to your toes. Relax all your muscles along the way. Do that throughout the day so it becomes second nature. Be kind to yourself.

Wolf harvest in Region 3 currently at 80 of 82 wolf threshold

The wolf harvest in FWP Region 3 is approaching the threshold of 82 wolves, which will trigger the end of the wolf trapping and hunting season in Region 3. The harvest as of today is 80 wolves.

Last month, the Fish and Wildlife Commission voted to close wolf hunting and trapping in Region 3 upon meeting the threshold of 82 wolves in the region. The closure will go into effect immediately after FWP announces the harvest of the 82nd wolf in Region 3. At that time trappers in the region must remove their equipment from the field as quickly as possible.

The commission established harvest thresholds in each of FWP's administrative regions, which total 450 statewide. If harvest meets any of these thresholds, the commission convenes to revisit the regulations and potentially adjust the season structure.

Those interested in up-to-date information on the status of Montana's wolf harvest can view FWP's wolf dashboard, which shows the number of wolves harvested by region and wolf management unit (WMU). The dashboard is updated multiple times per day.

For all wolf hunting and trapping regulations and information, visit FWP's wolf webpage

Chief Plenty Coups State Park receives grant from National Park Service

Funds will be used to restore Crow leader's home and store

The house and store of Crow leader, Chief Plenty Coups, located within Chief Plenty Coups State Park in Pryor, Montana, was recently awarded a $140,537 Save America's Treasures (SAT) grant from the Historic Preservation Fund administered by the National Park Service, Department of Interior. The grant provides a 50 percent match for funding previously allocated to Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks, who manages the state park.

The log home of Chief Plenty Coups, which is referred to by the Crow as "Alek-Chea-Ahoosh," and the adjacent store are nationally significant historic resources and the park is a designated National Historic Landmark.

Preservation and repair of Chief Plenty Coups home and store will include roof replacement and work on the home's foundation, re-chinking and re-daubing logs, window rebuilding and re-glazing, roof replacement and the replacement of any rotted logs. The preservation construction work will begin this summer and likely will extend into 2023.

For more information about the project, please contact Chief Plenty Coups State Park Manager Aaron Kind at akind@mt.gov.
