Montana Western Celebrates National Athletic Training Month

Behind the scenes of every athletic event, practice, and athlete is an athletic trainer (AT). In the month of March, we celebrate National Athletic Training month—"Providing Health Care Everywhere."

Montana Western's athletic trainers serve over 200 athletes—between just three of them. Russ Richardson, Zach McCarthy, and Nate Schieffert cover seven sports, attending every practice and event, ranging all hours of the day. They provide preventative care, treatment, rehabilitation, exercises, and professional advice for athletes as they work through the pain and injuries of their sports seasons.

Russ Richardson

Head AT Richardson is a nationally-recognized AT; he was inducted into the National Athletic Training Association's (NATA) Hall of Fame in 2015. In addition, he was inducted into the Washington State Athletic Trainer's Association and Northwest Athletic Trainer's Association Halls of Fame. With 40 years of experience, Richardson has been involved at many levels of athletic competition ranging from educational consulting to being a medical director for Olympic events.

"I knew as a kid that I wanted to care for people," Richardson said. "I started packing bloody noses in wrestlers in the eighth grade. This year marks my 40th year of patient care and it has been the best in my entire career! I have loved everything (well almost) about being an AT at Montana Western. The opportunity to influence young people has been an amazing, rewarding experience."

Zach McCarthy

McCarthy has been a member of Montana Western's program since fall of 2017. He graduated from the University of Montana, where he was an athletic training student and he provided care for their women's basketball, football, softball, and track & field teams. McCarthy was a member of the 2017-18 women's basketball team that made it to the Fab Four, and a member of the National Championship team in 2018-19.

"I have a love for athletics, always have," McCarthy said. "I was an athlete growing up and knew that if I could stay in athletics for my career, I would be happy. I went through my fair share of injuries my junior year of high school and really bonded with my athletic trainer. I also wanted to work in medicine to help people. So, combining the two was the best of both worlds for me."

"The profession means basically one thing—the care for the athletes is top priority. If I can help one athlete/coach/staff member a day, I can sleep at night. Being able to help these kids has been the best thing for me, because I feel like I have purpose in my life."

Nate Schieffert

Schieffert joined Montana Western's athletic training program in 2021. He attended the University of Montana's graduate program in athletic training before moving to South Dakota to provide care for the Dakota State University's football, men's basketball, and track & field teams. Schieffert provided care for Montana Western's first football team to reach postseason play since 2002.

"I discovered athletic training after my college football career was cut short due to multiple concussions," Schieffert said. "Athletic training became my calling as it has allowed me to give back to what has defined a large part of my life. There is no profession that is more rewarding, in my opinion, because I can be a key component in helping our athletes return to competition and reach their goals."

On behalf of the Montana Western Athletic Department, we would like to thank our athletic trainers for supporting our athletes, coaches, and staff, and promoting well-being in our department.

FRENCHY

By "Swede" Troedsson

In early September, 1959, as fire activity wound down, smokejumpers would be assigned to ranger districts to clear trails, roll up telephone wire, and assist in other duties. The smokejumper project would continue to pay jumpers' wages, and districts would receive labor for the price of room and board. It was a win-win arrangement.

Four of us jumpers were assigned to the Ford Work Center on the Flathead National Forest. Ford is located on the North Fork of the Flathead River, about ten miles north of Polebridge, MT. Polebridge and Ford are located across the river from Glacier National Park (GNP). Our assignment was to assist an engineering survey crew.

The work center had a cook named Frenchy. Frenchy was a fantastic cook, but had an addiction to alcohol. Frenchy was aware that if he went to town on the weekend, chance was he would not return to Ford in time to prepare breakfast Monday morning.

In order for Frenchy to be on pay status at Ford over the weekend, he was required to cook for at least six men at Ford.

At dinner Friday evening, Frenchy would post the weekend menu. Steaks, prime rib roast, ham, pies, homemade rolls, and all kinds of goodies. The temptation usually worked!

We were presented with a terrible dilemma. Here we were, four jumpers with enormous appetites for home cooking and a high level of testosterone. Do we stay to partake of Frenchy's fantastic cuisine, or do we attend the Saturday night dance at the Glacier Hotel in Glacier National Park? Among the employees GNP hired for the summer were gorgeous females from Germany, France, and Scandinavia. They would be at the dance!

One of our crew met a beautiful German woman at one of the Saturday night dances. Her first name was Hergart. The jumper nicknamed her Huggy, and he eventually married her!

Attorney General Knudsen launches investigation into TikTok

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen today announced an investigation into Chinese-owned social media company TikTok for possible violations of the Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act. The civil investigative demand includes substantial evidence of dozens of past and current potential violations of Montana law including TikTok intentionally distributing a dangerous product without adequate warning and by publicly misrepresenting the dangers its product poses to Montana consumers.

Attorney General Knudsen's investigation demands TikTok answer questions and provide documents surrounding the social media platform's safety features; algorithms; content; whether the company has researched the platform's impact on children under 18 including mental health issues, eating disorders, self-harm, and pornography problems; advertising and data procedures regarding children under 18; and whether the platform is used by border cartels for human trafficking.

"This is a critical investigation to protect Montana children and assist Montana parents. The media reports about TikTok potentially aiding Mexican drug cartels, turning a blind eye to sexual predators, and enabling its recommendation engine to promote pornographic materials, drug use, eating disorders, violent 'challenges,' and suicidal ideation among teens and preteens are beyond troubling," Attorney General Knudsen said. "Montana is happy to take the lead at looking into potential violations of state law by this Chinese social media goliath to help parents keep their children safe online and crack down on platforms which potentially misrepresent their safety features for financial gain."

TikTok's potential consumer harm is magnified by the platform's exponential growth. Over the past year, TikTok has become the number one app in the world, despite the fact it has been banned in India and other countries. While American teens and pre-teens spend an average of 105 minutes per day on the platform, TikTok's home nation, China, limits its youth to 40 minutes per day on the platform.

Attorney General Knudsen's investigation of TikTok was predicated by numerous public examples of the company potentially misleading Montanans about the safety of the product for children. The company has said it "has taken industry-first steps to promote a safe and age-appropriate experience for teens" and has rated itself on app stores as age appropriate for children as young as 12.

However, while communicating to the public that its platform is safe for children, it allows those who state their age to be as young as 13 to create profiles but does not differentiate between these children and adults when promoting content through its algorithm.

As a result, TikTok has served dangerous content to children, including "endless spools of content about sex and drugs," videos recommending paid pornography, and posts that encourage eating disorders. It has also allowed adults to solicit nude images from minors. Alarming, because of the way TikTok's algorithm works, users who seek one type of content can easily and quickly be pushed toward more dangerous content.

Dangerous trends and threats on TikTok have caused vandalism in schools and have forced Montana schools to increase security and even close to avoid the risk of harm to students. Students at a Billings school vandalized bathrooms and stole school property as a part of a TikTok "challenge" last fall. In December, some Montana schools closed due to threats posted on TikTok.

Attorney General Knudsen's investigation is also seeking information on TikTok's third party data tracking; corporate policies and procedures surrounding how the company's US entity shares data with its Chinese corporate family; and censorship of political viewpoints.
