Dillon Jaycees Easter Egg Hunt

Jeremy Crawford

Southwestern Montana News

The Dillon Jaycees held their annual Easter Egg hunt at Vigilante Park on Saturday, April 9th. Having different areas of the park separated for age groups to make it fair for all who attended.

With the whirl of the fire engines siren kids came off the starting line in a frenzy and cleaned up all the eggs in just a few minutes. After the egg hunt parents could get pictures with the Easter Bunny and enjoy some light snacks.

Ribbon Cutting Ceremonies

Beaverhead Chamber of Commerce & Agriculture will be hosting couple of Ribbon Cutting Ceremonies, this coming Tuesday, April 12th:

Berry Pie
Bryce Angell
 We started our tradition, homemade berry pie, each night.
 While camping on the trail, they were a pure perfection bite.
 The trail boss and the cook would always pass the pies around.
 The cowboys filled their mouths so full they couldn't make a sound.
 But we soon found out that homemade pies were not the way to go.
 'Cuz when we got a brand-new cook our tastebuds told us so.
 That fateful year the cowboys stood there waiting by the fire.
 One cowboy said, "My belly says we're 'bout to plumb expire."
 The novice cook was Wyatt, and he baked the berry pies.
 He used no recipe and might as well had closed his eyes.
 The cowboys took a bite and crunched down like a bag of rocks.
 The taste was like the house cat used 'em for his litter box.
 Wyatt guesstimated 'bout the filling in the pie.
 And when he offered seconds, 'twas enough to terrify.
 One cowboy said, "I think he cooked the pie deliberately.
 And every time I gag a bite it's certain agony."
 Wyatt learned to make the crust. Said, "Grandma taught me well."
 But I don't believe he listened 'cuz the crust was tough as @#%!
 So, we gathered up his pies and promptly threw 'em in the trash.
 I heard one fellow tell him, "We'd been better off with hash!"
 If there's a cowboy code, you don't call one of yours a fool.
 I guess we'll ask forgiveness 'cuz we up and broke that rule.
 Our cowboys cooking skills don't mean a whole lot more than fodder.
 'Cuz most the cowboys that I know could possibly burn water.
 So, we turned to desperate measures. Would we vote for pies from town? The only nay was Wyatt.
 Trail Boss slammed the gavel down!
 And now we're eating berry pie straight from the bakery.
 We'll keep this fond tradition 'cuz homemade was misery.
 But someone said that Wyatt wants to give it one more try.
 The Trail Boss offered his advice. "You make 'em, say goodbye!"

Attorney General Knudsen opposes Biden's latest attack on gun rights

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen issued the following statement in response to President Biden's rewrite of federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) regulations to ban so-called "ghost guns":

Assembling firearms for their own use is a tradition and right that Americans have exercised since the founding of our nation. This new rule will not make Montanans safer as criminals will continue to ignore the law. It will shut down firearm companies, allow the government to end online sales of parts, and expand federal access to gun owner data – all by executive decree. I will continue to stand with my fellow Montana gun owners and fight against President Biden's attacks on our rights.

The ATF itself estimated its regulation would shutdown 35 businesses at a cost of $1.1 million, however, the economic costs and burden will likely be much greater. Additionally, the rule will make it more difficult and expensive for Montanans to repair their own firearms, while also requiring them to undergo a background check to buy parts to do so.

Attorney General Knudsen submitted formal comments to the ATF opposing the proposed rulemaking in August 2021.

He also led an effort to stop the confirmation of President Biden's anti-gun nominee to lead the ATF, has been actively working against other federal infringements of Montanans' firearm rights, and is fighting attempts to overturn a new state law that expands the ability of Montanans to protect themselves.

BOXING IN DILLON

Jeremy Crawford

Southwestern Montana News

This Saturday night boxing came back to Dillon in a highly attended charged event called The Last Frontier. Hosted by NXT Gem Entertainment and the Frontier Events Center, it did not disappoint. The ring was professionally set up in less than an hour.

Ron Johnson, owner of the Frontier Events Center said he had 450 seats and not one was empty and there were over 50 people standing. Tickets ranged from $20 in advance to a table of eight for $400, and the price to entertainment ratio was well worth one's money. The event featured eight fights along with intermissions and an after party.

The main fight of the night was hometown favorite Erik Lopez VS C.J. Morris from Kalispell, MT. The fight did not disappoint as they went five well fought rounds. The crowd chanting light's out Lopez, to help the local favorite win the match.

We have the list of fighters below but have yet to get the official results of each match. We will update the article as they become available.

Frontier Event Center Holds Boxing

The boxers were here, the crowd was here, the promoters were here and they came from Idaho, Utah, Wyoming and across the state from Whitefish to Miles City.

The boxers checked out their opponents, the crowd check their favorite boxers and the promoters checked on the venue. The promoters discussed bringing other events like boxing, and music to Dillon with the air conditioning being a big draw for summer events.

Thank you to the special assistants to the ring girl.
