A Bumpy Ride

Bryce Angell

The day was turning into night and all the stock was fed.
Four cowboys hopped into the truck, drooling of fun ahead.
The hour was right for young cowhands. The night was theirs to grab.
Two boys rode in the pickup bed, two others in the cab.
A stop was made at Merkle's store for cans of Orange Crush. If they'd known what lay ahead would they have been in such a rush?
Bryce was driving, Kerry shotgun, Thane and Ross in back, the time had come for those up front to get some fun on track.
Kerry grabbed the extra Orange Crush from off the seat.
He popped the lid and said, "Let's cool 'em off from all the heat!"
He opened up the window, poured the Crush out in the air.
The two in back were promptly soaked from head to derriere.
Ross didn't see the humor, thought the two in front should pay.
He reached to throw his soda pop and stretched too far one way.
The rig was doing 55 when Ross fell off the truck. His head and neck bounced off the wheels. I guess you'd call that luck.
Thane was yelling, "Stop the truck. I think we've just killed Ross!"
He was bouncing down the pavement like a baseball being tossed.
Bryce was laughing right until he glanced up in the mirror.
His face turned whiter than a sheet. He shifted down the gears.
The truck came screeching to a stop, three cowboys on their feet.
They figured they were running to a pulp of blood and meat.
To their surprise, Ross stood right up, as proof he wasn't dead.
Just scratched and scraped and traumatized from foot to top of head.
Ross was known throughout the town as one who liked to brawl.
Would Bryce and Kerry take the heat for Ross's nasty fall?
But Ross was glad to be alive and said he held no ire.
The situation turned out well. Things could have been more dire.
The years went by, and all four cowboys grew up into men.
I've heard it said that no one saw us ride in back again.
Our younger days were full of pranks and most involved our truck.
And the reason that we stayed alive was providence, not luck.

Beaverhead County Search & Rescue News

Submitted by: Mel Rice-Public Relations

This past week the Beaverhead Search and Rescue held its monthly meeting under the direction of commander, Lawrence Morrisroe. Roll call was completed and the introduction of guests, Dan Wyatt and James Matthews. Both are very interested in becoming members. James has already submitted an application. Once both applications have been received and approved, they will become probationary members for a period of one year.

Nathan Freeman, training officer, explained the training opportunities coming up in the following months. Swift water training will take place in May and is in conjunction with Madison County S&R. Search manager training is still on the agenda for the next month or so. During our next meeting training will be provided by Dillon Martial Arts, in order for members to be trained in self-defense. We will be holding our summer training camp out in June. Gayle Rawson, Lawrence, and Nathan will be coordinating that event. Each member of the organization is required to have 15 hours of training per year. Since the meeting, Nathan Freeman has asked to be relieved of his training officer duties due to changes in his very active life. Nathan has done an outstanding job in this position. Thank you Nate for all your hard work and efforts in keeping the membership trained and active. Nate will remain as an active member of the unit.

Once again there have been no searches or rescues during the last month. It is nice to have this continued reprieve but at the same time we cannot become complaisant. With the number of individuals using Beaverhead County as their recreation grounds, it is only a matter of time before we are activated. It is also with regret that we have to postpone the annual S&R auction for another year.

For the good of the order, Dan Cahill, Alex Dunn, and Tyler Grover have all been voted to permanent membership status after completing their probationary year. Congratulations to these three fine new members. They have already been very active and an integral part of BVHD S&R unit. Brian DeMars has turned in his letter of resignation. Brian has been a very active member and a past commander along with other positions. He has been an active member since January 1990. Brian was one individual no one ever wanted to ground search with, especially in deep snow, because of his long legs. He could go forever, maybe he still can... Thank you Brian for 32 years of service to the group.

It is quite apparent that spring is not here yet. Please be careful out there and make sure you are prepared for the worst whenever venturing out in the great outdoors. Whether hiking, 4 wheeling, fishing or any other number of activities, be safe. I'm sure there are lots of drifts out there, avalanches are still a great concern, and thin ice is very scary. Take Care, "In the Business of Saving Lives" your Beaverhead Search and Rescue.

FWP fixing error in drawing process for elk permits

After deer and elk permits were drawn Thursday, Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks uncovered an error in the drawing process affecting less than three percent of applications across the state in 10 hunting districts.

This year the Fish and Wildlife Commission changed several elk hunting districts to "first and only choice" for applications, meaning if hunters want to hunt any of these districts, they forfeit the option to list a second or third choice on their application.

Due to an error in the current licensing system regarding "first and only choice" hunting districts, hunters who applied for these districts were able to submit second and third choices. Hunters who did submit second and third choices on their applications for a "first and only choice" district were removed during the draw. The mistake affected 10 hunting districts and 2,482 applications out of the 83,017 total statewide. FWP is moving away from the current licensing system as part of the administration's effort to modernize state government.

"As soon as FWP became aware of the technical glitch, our licensing staff worked around-the-clock to fix it and make it right with hunters who were inadvertently removed from the draw," said FWP Director Hank Worsech.

Impacted applicants initially didn't see results for the elk draw in their MyFWP account. Until the situation is resolved, those individuals will see temporarily that they were unsuccessful in the draw. Any hunter who drew a permit in the draw will not lose it.

Here's what FWP is doing to address the problem:

- Hunters who submitted applications and are eligible for districts 411-21, 447-21, and 595-21 and entered second and third choices will receive a permit because the number of permits unallocated after the draw is greater than the number of applicants who were removed from the draw. Similarly, the 270-45 permit is unlimited, so applicants will all receive a permit.
- Hunters who submitted applications for districts 411-20, 417-20, 417-21, 426-20, 799-20, and 799-21 and were removed from the draw will be entered into a random drawing next week. Those who are unsuccessful in this second drawing will receive bonus points.
- Under administrative rule, Director Worsech has the discretion to issue permits up to 10 percent above the quota. This 10 percent will be allocated in these second drawings.

"The fairest solution to this error is to use my discretion to give all impacted hunters the shot at a permit they're owed."
