WHEELS OFF

By "Swede" Troedsson (MSO-59)

I noticed Rondey Lay's (MSO-67) name on p.23 of the January, 2022 issue of the National Smokejumper Association magazine. It brought back a fond memory of Rondey.

In 1996 I attended Rondey's retirement party held on his ranch near Florence, MT. His party was combined with the jump season termination party. Rondey had jumped for 15 seasons. Prior to retiring he was working in the warehouse at the Aerial Fire Depot in Missoula servicing chainsaws and pumps. To say he was a legend would be an understatement.

I was impressed with one of Rondey's use of his mules and wagon. His favorite elk hunting area was at the head of a drainage on the east side of the Bitterroot Valley. It was a haven for elk. Motorized access into the area was blocked by a locked Forest Service gate.

During the start of hunting season, Rondey would hitch up his mules to his wagon, and proceed to the gate. Upon arriving at the gate, he would unhitch the mules and remove the wagon wheels. Then he would walk the mules around the gate, and have them drag the wagon bed UNDER the gate. After replacing the wheels, he would load his camp, grub and various nectars onto the wagon. Then he and his bros would proceed to the head of the drainage, set up camp, cook steaks, drink beer and whiskey, tell jump stories, and kill elk.

Currently (1/22), Rondey is alive and well. He sold his ranch in Florence, and lives on his brother's ranch in Ryegate, MT. He can be reached at (406) 369-5960.

A Little History remembered from Bette Hull

Dillon Tribune Friday, July 6, 1900

The man who is raising a big crop realizes that the harvest time is ahead. Ideal farming consists not only in the raising of the tallest grain and the most tons to the acre of hay—the best farming—the farming that pays, must contemplate something more than this for there is a harvest time and just in proportion as a crop is saved successfully, speedily and economically, in just that proportion may be measured the season's profit or loss.

Mandatory trapper education course now available online
More field days to be scheduled this summer and fall

An online education course is now available for people looking to get into trapping. The mandatory course is free and can be accessed on Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks website.

The education program will include online course work and a mandatory field day where new trappers can learn from experienced trappers about trapping ethics, humane techniques, avoidance of non-target species, fur management, and safety. This course also includes the mandatory wolf trapper certification for anyone looking to also trap wolves.

Two field days are already scheduled for July:

- July 9, Missoula, FWP Office, 3201 Spurgin Road, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.
- July 16, Helena, Montana WILD, 2668 Broadwater Avenue, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

More field days will be scheduled and advertised in the coming weeks.

During the 2021 legislative session, Senate Bill 60 passed, which requires trapper education for all trappers who have not been a licensed trapper for at least three previous seasons.

Trappers who have been licensed trappers for three previous seasons will be asked to list that experience when purchasing a license. All other trappers age 12 and older will need to take the trapper education course before purchasing a license. Wolf trappers who have taken the wolf trapper education course, but haven't been a licensed trapper for three years, will need to complete the trapper education course to be able to trap wolves in 2022 and beyond.

For people who are interested in going through the course curriculum in hard-copy format, please call or email Wayde Cooperider, 406-444-9947 or wacooperider@mt.gov.

For more information, on upcoming field days, please go to https://fwp.mt.gov/hunt/education/trapping.

FWP reopens Yellowstone River, advises caution around high water

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks, in close consultation with Park and Stillwater county officials, is re-opening the closed sections of the Yellowstone River to recreation on Thursday.

However, river levels continue to be high and at potentially dangerous levels. Several FWP sites along the river are closed or have restricted access while crews assess and repair these sites. FWP is actively assessing local impacts at sites along the Yellowstone River and its tributaries and will re-open or remove restrictions as soon as conditions are safe. Visitors can find the latest information on closures and restrictions on the FWP website.

"The conditions continue to be hazardous, and so we encourage people to exercise an abundance of caution when around the river," said FWP Director Hank Worsech. "Our staff is working hard to get sites back open for the public."

Though the Yellowstone River opens tomorrow, in Stillwater County closures are still in place for the Stillwater River, West Rosebud Creek from Rosebud Isle Fishing Access Site to the confluence of Rosebud Creek, and Rosebud Creek to the confluence with the Stillwater.

Even though FWP sites in these areas may be opening soon, visitors should be prepared to encounter impacts from the flooding, including soft or rough roads, flooding debris, and flood-impacted latrines.

The Montana Department of Environmental Quality, Montana Department of Health and Human Services, and FWP are advising recreationists to use extreme caution around floodwaters due to the potential exposure to bacteria such as E. coli. The recommendations are to avoid contact with floodwaters for two weeks after the flood. (See press release.)

Waters continue to be high elsewhere in the state as well, including areas of western and northwest Montana. For the latest restrictions and closures, please go to the FWP website.
