DOES YOUR BODY HATE YOU?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

Trust me when I declare that I am not competing for sympathy against folks suffering from cancer, blocked arteries, diabetes or other serious ailments.

I do nonetheless think that my body is out to get me.

And not just with the chronic aches, pains and wrinkles that accompany normal aging. No, my body perpetrates fiendishly clever assaults on my comfort and dignity. (Misery loves company, so you may be yelling, "Too much information!" as this essay assaults your own comfort and dignity.)

I am most keenly aware of the wee-wee complications. I can sleep through the night (thank you very much), but during my waking hours, I hear from my urinary tract more often than I hear from the extended-warranty pitchman. I wish I could be the bladder whisperer, but I'm more the bladder "will you shut the heck up and stop harassing me?????" type.

Seriously, even if I've gotten preoccupied and skimped on hydration, I apparently start absorbing moisture from house plants, puddles, horse troughs and the like. On a really bad day, the technicians at Hoover Dam have learned to mutter, "No, it's not a leak. Tyree's at it again."

Alas, my gastrointestinal system gets in on the act, too. Regardless of how well I've handled my diet, in the back of my mind I can hear Chubby Checker on heavy rotation. ("Let's go again like we did last hour/Let's go again, like you trained your rear...")

Dressing in a hurry always brings surprises. Hangnails that were nonexistent 30 seconds ago suddenly snag delicate fabrics. Instead of being recognized as a sharp-dressed man, I am dismissed as someone who lost a tussle with Zorro.

The more I need to meet a project deadline, the more my nose spontaneously conjures up distracting postnasal drip. Granted, I am in good company. The full Archimedes quote was "Give me a lever long enough and a fulcrum on which to place it and a big honkin' box of Kleenex, and I shall move the world."

On a related note, I dread jostling anyone in a crowd. As a super-polite citizen, I want to issue a robust "Excuse me, please." But I invariably have just enough phlegm in my throat to turn it into a wimpy guttural response. Countless strangers have inched away from me while conjecturing, "Maybe if the poor schmuck discovers fire, he can roast himself a mastodon."

I truly despise being double-teamed. Sometimes my inner child colludes with my body. I can't drive within 25 miles of a cemetery without my body demanding to know, "Are we there yet? Are we there yet?"

Why is my body so relentless in bombarding me with missteps, coughs and eye boogers??? After all I've done for it!

I exercise... my option for choicest spot on the sofa, but exercise, nonetheless. I get at least six-ish hours of sleep per night on my good-as-new mattress. That's more than the previous owners got, with all that squawking about, "The British are coming! The British are coming!"

Finally, I am careful about what foods I put into my bodily temple. I don't exactly adhere to the Food Pyramid, but I have discovered the rival Food Sphinx. I've even come close to solving the Food Sphinx's riddle: "What goes on four legs in the morning, two legs at noon and deep-fries everything that is arguably edible in the evening?"

Montana state, local election officials participate in tabletop exercise

The Montana Secretary of State's Office joined county election administrators and officials in a Montana Elections virtual tabletop exercise last week in coordination with the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA). Representatives from the SOS Office and all 56 Montana counties were invited to participate in the exercise, which is part of an ongoing effort to advance election security preparedness in Montana and across the country.

State and local election officials discussed best practices in response to hypothetical scenarios involving cybersecurity and other election-related occurrences. Attendees ran through the scenarios in various stages, including planning, preparation, identification, response, and recovery.

Secretary of State Christi Jacobsen praised state and local election officials for their continued dedication to conducting safe and secure elections in Montana.

"Thank you to our election officials for participating in important events like this tabletop exercise," said Secretary Jacobsen. "Their participation is essential in developing awareness and preparedness regarding election security. Montana's election officials are committed to providing safe, secure, and transparent elections for our Montana voters."

"Fair and free elections are a hallmark of American democracy. CISA is committed to working collaboratively with those on the front lines of elections – state and local governments, election officials, federal partners, and vendors – to manage risks to the nation's election infrastructure," said Shawn Graff, CISA Regional Director for Region 8, which includes Montana. "Tabletop exercises are an important part of maintaining the security of our national infrastructure, as they help our partners build muscle memory and review their incident response plans against a wide range of potential scenarios, including physical security and cybersecurity incidents."

The tabletop collaboration brought together county election officials, local law enforcement, emergency management, county IT, Montana Secretary of State, Montana Disaster and Emergency Services, Montana Association of Counties, Montana Department of Administration, Montana Department of Justice – Investigation Bureau's Montana Analysis and Technical Information Center and Election Systems and Software in addition to CISA.

We would like to thank the hardworking Dillon Jaycees for the wonderful tribute to our loved one, Mike Marsh. Mike loved being part of the Jaycees and most especially the demo derby. We know he was there in spirit riding along with his best friend, "Red" Morast, on their final escapade together.

The plaques presented to us were so special. Words cannot express our gratitude in honoring Mike.

The tour begins in Thessaloniki (Thessalonica), Makedonia (Macedonia), second largest city in Greece and a UNESCO World Heritage site. Founded in 315 BC, it is the country's cultural capital with ancient buildings, top museums, festivals, cultural events and a key political, economic, military, and transportation hub throughout its twenty-three centuries of history.

Classical Greek antiquity (8th century BC and the 6th century AD) King Phillip of Macedonia, and his son Alexander the Great ruled the area from the city.

The Roman Empire (27 B.C. to 476) Thessaloniki was a co-capital with Rome in the later years of the empire and the Edict of Thessalonica made Christianity the state religion of the Roman Empire was signed here.

Early Jewish and Christian History, the city housed a major Jewish community until the middle of WWII, and it was one of the first places where Christianity was preached when Apostle Paul visited the city in 50/51 AD.
