Secretary Christi Jacobsen given tour of Black Butte Copper Project

Montana Secretary of State Christi Jacobsen visited Meagher County this week, touring the Black Butte Copper Project.

Nancy Schlepp, VP Communications and Corporate Secretary, provided Secretary Jacobsen with an update on the project which is currently approved for Phase 1.

"It's been really exciting from my perspective for the community," said Schlepp, who grew up in nearby Ringling and attended White Sulphur Springs Schools. "We have a lot of support here that we've built over the years, I would say probably 90 percent plus."

Schlepp discussed the history of the land and explained the project's "best practice modern mining" techniques, describing how the highly engineered underground mine will operate with a "small footprint and low environmental impact."

The Black Butte Copper Project has been touted as one of the highest-grade copper developments in the world. Schlepp says the project is estimated to bring 240 top-paying jobs to the area, creating unique opportunities for White Sulphur Springs, Meagher County, and the surrounding areas.

"We spent a lot of time trying to answer the questions of the community. I would say that we didn't start at a point of this much support of 90 percent, but we definitely got here over time," explained Schlepp. "Everyone is excited for good jobs to come here, everyone is excited about the economic opportunities, and really the opportunity of greater infrastructure and diversifying our economy so that we aren't going to be a dying rural community like a lot of areas in the United States."

Secretary Jacobsen thanked Schlepp and the local Black Butte Copper Project team – a staff of Montanans – for the opportunity to visit the project site.

The corridors were quiet, and the lights were dimly lit. The old cowboy woke up and said, "I'll sit here for a bit."

From his bed he looked up to me. Then said, "Take a load off son. I'm having trouble sleeping." It was barely half past one.

I found a chair and sat down by this tough and weathered man. I had some time. I'd have to say that's where my night began.

The children sold the ranch and placed him in a nursing home. Their father was pure cowboy. 'Twas the only life he'd known.

He said, "I've been here long enough. I'm tired and all alone. My Emma's coming for me and tonight I'll be back home."

He'd been with Emma sixty years. His good and faithful wife. She rarely left his side and was the purpose of his life.

I recollected Emma passed away a year ago. Since then, he hadn't been himself; just couldn't let her go.

I told him his sweet Emma wasn't with us anymore. He said it didn't matter they would meet at Heaven's door.

I'd witnessed older patients who had passed away at night. But never had one tell me that tonight he'd see the light.

I told him, "It's the doggone morphine muddling up your head." "My mind has never been so clear." Is what the old man said.

He then proceeded telling me, "I see you don't believe. But seeing is believing so tonight I'll take my leave."

I offered him some water and he pushed my hand away. Did the old cowboy see Emma? Would this be his final day?

His smile was meant for heaven. Then he said, "I'll see you son." I saw him take his final breath. His life was finally done.

Did Emma come and take him home? I guess I'll never know. But if dying was that easy, then I'd choose that way to go.

Though death's a part of living and I've seen too many die, I won't forget the old cowboy who knew his time was nigh.

Secretary Jacobsen joins 14 Secretaries of State in calling on President Biden to rescind executive order

Montana Secretary of State Christi Jacobsen joined 14 other Secretaries of State in signing a letter urging President Biden to rescind Executive Order No. 14019.

The letter explained how the Executive Order (EO) was issued without Constitutional authority and Congressional approval. The EO inserts federal agencies into the states' electoral processes, producing duplicate registrations, complicating the jobs of state and local election officials, and creating confusion.

The letter also stated the EO "would also erode the responsibility and duties of the state legislatures."

"As the supreme law of the land, the Constitution clearly says the state legislatures shall (emphasis added) prescribe the way elections are run, and that if any adjustments need to be made, such adjustments are the province of Congress, not the Executive branch," wrote the secretaries, who serve as chief election officials for their respective states.

Secretary Jacobsen sent the letter to President Biden with West Virginia Secretary Mac Warner, Alabama Secretary John Merrill, Arkansas Secretary John Thurston, Florida Secretary Cord Byrd, Georgia Secretary Brad Raffensperger, Idaho Secretary Lawrence Denney, Indiana Secretary Holli Sullivan, Louisiana Secretary Kyle Ardoin, Mississippi Secretary Michael Watson, Nebraska Secretary Bob Evnen, Ohio Secretary Frank LaRose, South Dakota Secretary Steve Barnett, Tennessee Secretary Tre Hargett, and Wyoming Secretary Ed Buchanan.
