Montana Secretary of State's Office presents at 2022 Montana Association of Clerks & Recorders Convention

The Montana Secretary of State's Office presented at the 2022 Montana Association of Clerks & Records and Election Administrators (MACR) Convention this week.

Elections and Voter Services Manager Stuart Fuller discussed security best practices, including cybersecurity training and election security assessments. He also provided continuing education resources that state and local election officials may utilize.

Fuller also spoke about election procedure, including the Postelection Audit Act and preparation for the upcoming General Election on Tuesday, November 8.

Business Analyst Kyler Baker provided an update on the state's future election management system, electMT. Twelve counties conducted successful parallel tests with electMT and the state's current system, Montana Votes, during the June Primary Election. Another parallel test will be conducted during November's General Election.

The Secretary of State Office's Election Division was represented by Stuart Fuller, Kyler Baker, Mark Carpenter, Ray Dagnall, Conner Gagnon, and Josh Klein.

"Thank you to our elections team for the continued hard work during the busy midterm election year," said Secretary of State Christi Jacobsen. "It's important to continue providing updates and resources to our county election administrators."

"Thank you to the Montana Association of Clerks & Records and Election Administrators for the opportunity to present at their conference."

Three International Award Recipients

The Montana Center for Horsemanship announces three international award recipients, each of whom has dedicated their lives to advancing our understanding of horses, the horse-human relationship and promoting natural horsemanship. Two of the awards are annual awards given by the Montana Center for Horsemanship and first established by the EQUUS International Film Festival. Today, EIFF is part of the annual international equine conference – The Natural Horsemanship Revolution. The three awards recipients will be publicly recognized during the upcoming conference & film festival in Dillon, Montana September 8-10.

Buck Brannaman, an internationally renowned horseman and proponent of natural horsemanship, will receive the Lifetime Achievement Award on September 9th at the Montana Center for Horsemanship. Brannaman, who recently launched his own channel, will be the keynote speaker during The Natural Horsemanship Revolution, Conference & Film Festival at 10am September 9th. Individual tickets solely for the keynote at the Center are available as well as all-inclusive daylong passes.

In addition, Natural Horsemanship ambassador and rodeo icon Ty Murray, will receive the annual EQUINE ICON award, given to an individual whose life and life's work has had a far reaching and significant impact on the horse-human relationship; whose life has been devoted to improving and advancing our understanding of horses. Murray will receive the special award at the Awards Dinner Saturday, September 10th hosted by the University of Montana Western, in collaboration with the Montana Center for Horsemanship. MCH and Montana Western have a unique education partnership. Several award-winning films, in which Ty Murray is featured, produced by filmmaker Luke Linderman, will also receive special recognition awards at the Awards Dinner that same evening.

The third award this year, a special recognition award, for dedication to advancing our understanding of the young horse will be Dr. Robert Miller. Dr. Miller who will be part of several group presentations during the Natural Horsemanship Revolution Conference, is an equine behaviorist and veterinarian, best recognized for his system of training newborn foals known as imprint training. Miller is also one of the early adopters and promoters of Natural Horsemanship.

The Natural Horsemanship Revolution Conference & EQUUS International Film Festival, presented in partnership with UM Western, will be held at the international equine education center in Dillon, Sept. 8-10. A pre-conference day of workshops with E3A, screenings of award-winning films, and a horse brain presentation with equine neuro-scientist, Dr. Stephen Peters, will be Wednesday, September 7th, open to all pre-registered attendees. LOUIE SOMDAY

By "Swede" Troedsson

In 1961-1963 I was stationed on the Curlew Ranger District on the Colville National Forest, WA. Curlew is located about 25 miles north of the Colville Indian Reservation.

The Colville Indians, like most Indians, love their horses. Near Curlew was an elderly Colville Indian, Louie Somday, who owned a small ranch. Louie had numerous horses. He would often walk out into his horse pasture and stand among his horses just to admire them.

One day a rancher, who was Louie's neighbor, came into the ranger station to complain that Louie's horses were trespassing onto his ranch. The Ranger informed the rancher that we could not do anything about Louie's horses unless they were on the National Forest.

As the rancher was leaving our office, he was heard muttering "I think the horses are headed that way".

A week later the rancher returned to our ranger station and informed us that Louie's horses were now on the National Forest. After confirming the location of Louie's horses, he was ordered to remove his horses from the National Forest. He made no effort to remove his horses, so eventually we rounded up and impounded his horses.

After reimbursing the government for the roundup and impoundment costs, Louie's horses were returned to him.
