Speridian Technologies Renews New Wave Accelerator Program for UMW Graduates

Speridian Technologies, parent of Helix Business Solutions, is renewing its paid accelerator program, New Wave. The program is designed for current students and recent graduates from the University of Montana Western interested in pursuing a career in technology. After a successful pilot program in 2022, Speridian is renewing New Wave for another cohort slated to start in January 2023.

As a global business and technology solutions provider, Speridian Technologies and its 1,500+ business and technology experts help clients modernize their businesses through digital transformation. The New Wave program was founded to provide technology-focused career opportunities in southwest Montana.

Designed to give participants an immersive experience in several technology and business-related disciplines, including Project Management, Business Analysis, and Account Management, participants learn these disciplines through assignment-based learning, job shadowing, client-facing projects, and certifications.

Cory Creighton, UMW alumnus and Director of the New Wave program said, "The University of Montana Western is a great place to recruit talent because the university is producing high-quality graduates just a few blocks away from our Dillon office. We're excited to continue the strong partnership we have with Montana Western by offering this innovative program."

New Wave participants work closely with members of the Speridian leadership team from functions across the company. This allows Speridian's leaders to meet and observe the participants through shadowing or other training activities. Upon successful completion of the program, New Wave participants may be offered job opportunities.

UMW student participant, Tori Anderson, reflected on her time in the program. "I liked the opportunity to grow quickly within Speridian. There is a lot of potential to build a career while doing the things I love to do."

"UMW is grateful to partner with Speridian to offer experiential learning opportunities that give our students real-world insight into business and technology that they can carry forward into their future careers," said Kevin Engellant, Professor of Business at Montana Western.

Kate Ferris was raised in Dillon, Montana, and graduated from the University of Montana Western with a degree in Business Administration and a minor in Web and Digital Media.

"Joining the New Wave program completely changed the trajectory of my future. The learning opportunities have given me experience that I would not have received anywhere else. I have learned new skills in business processes, software, collaboration, and so much more. I feel this program has greatly elevated my future career potential."

For many graduates, New Wave is an opportunity to enter a completely new domain of work. UMW student, Coy Sands, heard about the New Wave program from a friend on the football team and had this advice for those thinking of applying.

"People interested in a program like New Wave should not be afraid to try something new. I had no experience in the tech industry but at Speridian, the people were always willing to help and provide guidance."

Montana Western students interested in applying for the 2023 New Wave program are invited to send a resume to Program Director, Cory Creighton: cory.creighton@speridian.com.

REMINDER: Some clarifications on new mountain lion seasons, licenses

Montana mountain lion hunters will find some significant changes to the mountain lion regulations this year, including changes to season structure and licensing types.

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks offers three types of lion licenses for sale this season: a general mountain lion license, a limited special mountain lion license (must have applied by July 22), and an unlimited special mountain lion license. Hunters may only purchase or apply for one license. The exception is those who do not draw a limited special license may then purchase a general license.

The changes to the mountain lion license structures were approved by the Montana Fish and Wildlife Commission earlier this year. Lion hunters are urged to review the regulations before purchasing a license.

The mountain lion seasons are broken up into three:

- Archery season is Sept. 3 – Oct. 16
- Fall season is Oct. 22 – Nov. 27
- Winter season is Dec. 1 – April 14

Here's a rundown of what mountain lion licenses are available and what they can be used for:

- General mountain lion license. Available to purchase over the counter. Allows hunters without dogs to harvest a lion in any open lion management unit (LMU) during the archery and fall seasons. In the winter season, this license allows a hunter to harvest a mountain lion in LMUs 170, 299, 305 or 309.
- Limited special mountain lion license. Hunters must have applied for this license by July 22. (Unsuccessful applicants can purchase a general mountain lion license.) In archery and fall seasons, hunters without dogs can harvest a lion in any open LMU. In the winter season, hunters with dogs can only harvest a lion in the specific LMU for which their license is valid. Holders may harvest a mountain lion in LMUs 170, 299, 305 or 309 during the winter season. The limited special mountain lion license is not subject to quotas within the LMUs for which they are valid. The license also allows hunters to chase mountain lions during the training season, but only harvest in the unit designated on the license.

- Unlimited special mountain lion license. Hunters can purchase these over the counter before Feb. 28. At the time of purchase, hunters must designate the LMU, group of LMUs or the region they intend to hunt. In archery and fall seasons, a hunter without dogs can harvest a lion in any open LMU. In the winter season, hunters with dogs can hunt lions in the LMU, group of LMUs or the region designated at the time of purchase or until the quota for the LMU is met. This license allows a hunter to chase lions in any unit during the training season, but only harvest a lion in the unit designated on the license.

Hunters are responsible for knowing the regulations, which can be found online, or at any license retailer.

Given the significant changes in the lion seasons structures this season, hunters who purchased the wrong license can contact FWP's license office for a refund to purchase the right license.
