Abigail Eason Wins County Spelling Bee

Jeremy Crawford Southwestern Montana News

The University of Montana Western played host to elementary and middle school spellers from around the county on Thursday, February 2nd at 1:30 P.M. in the

After it was all said and done. It came down to two correctly then follow it up with one more final spelling, after a little back and forth Abigail Eason

Home Health Challenges
 By: MJ

To survive in owning and operating businesses you will be required to address many obstacles and excuses. Today's excuses are a dime a dozen like hiring and keeping employees, inflation, racism, to many hands stirring the pot like elected officials, administrators & CEO's lining their pockets with gold... All at the expense of paying higher wages to the person on the ground floor working to keep the business alive.

Example: In the early 70's there was a gas shortage. The gas stations that stayed in business went out on the market and found the gas they needed. Did it cost them more? Yes, however it was worth it to them to serve their customers. They found many different solutions to stay in business by leaving more operating money on the table, taking less wages or income for themselves, storing less products and the list goes on.

Barrett's wrote an article for the paper giving the reason or excuse they were not going to continue Health Care because they were not able to get qualified help. Question: Is there alternatives that could be done instead of depriving the taxpayers of the county of Home Health support? Ideas: Less hand tying laws may be a start, help and believe in people and family care... Knowledge is necessary and powerful but does not always require Bachelor, Master, or Doctorate degree from college. However that person working on the ground floor is entitled to a wage compatible to the job they do. On the job training is underrated.

Home Health is extremely significant and meaningful for the people. A warm touch, a hello and smile often is the most powerful medicine we can receive. Getting old is not a celebration nor a fun filled party. Being able to remain in your home with your loved ones, your people, takes away much of the emotional stress and may or may not be cheaper than transition care facilities. Remember those facilities are businesses owned by entrepreneurs that are not in business to go broke, and are often unaffordable for someone that does not have specific insurance, receives government support... How would you feel having to sleep in a room with someone you don't know... Probably it would be ok for the young, however different story for older person that may not be able to defend themselves, can't hear or see very well, let alone walk... Help people to stay home, don't treat them like an animal. I grew up hearing the words; 'if there is a Wil, there is a Way.'

The article I read was about the help issues, however nothing about concerns for the hardships this is going to impose on the people, the tax payers. Note: To be able to become a Health Care Provider for an area there are hoops to jump through, that can take months with the State government, Medicare...

Excuses run rampant, get rid of them, be honest with the people, give them directions on what they will be required to do if another entity brings Health Care back into the county.

Elk captured in Pioneer Mountains test negative for brucellosis

As part of a multi-year Targeted Elk Brucellosis Surveillance Project, Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks (FWP) staff recently captured elk in the Pioneer Mountains northwest of Dillon.

All 149 blood samples collected from captured elk tested negative for brucellosis.

Capture operations were conducted in January along the eastern front of the Pioneer Mountains. A few elk were also captured south of Montana Highway 278 east of Bannack. Thirty elk were outfitted with GPS collars that will be active for one year to help wildlife managers better understand their seasonal ranges, migration routes and potential mixing with other elk herds.

The goal of these operations is to evaluate the presence and understand the movement of brucellosis in Montana's elk populations.

More information about brucellosis and the surveillance project can be found online at fwp.mt.gov/conservation/wildlife-management/elk.
