State agencies issue mountain whitefish consumption advisory on Yellowstone River near train derailment

The Fish Consumption Advisory Board, consisting of representatives from Montana Department of Public Health & Human Services (DPHHS), Montana Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ), and Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks (FWP), has issued an initial consumption advisory on all mountain whitefish caught in the Yellowstone River from Twin Bridges Road railroad bridge to Laurel. Further testing is needed to determine the contamination source and long-term guidance. The board may update the initial consumption advisory as more information is gathered.

As part of a follow-up to the train derailment that occurred on June 24, FWP staff collected five mountain whitefish and five rainbow trout of various lengths below the derailment site for contaminant testing. Results from the mountain whitefish tests showed levels of a chemical called phenanthrene high enough to warrant an advisory to avoid all consumption of mountain whitefish. It is not yet known if the impacts to mountain whitefish are a result of the train derailment. Rainbow trout collected in this area did not show any levels of contamination. No other species of fish, including brown trout, were collected for testing.

Additional fisheries testing will be conducted in the area later this week. FWP plans to target additional mountain whitefish and rainbow trout, brown trout, shorthead redhorse, longnose suckers, and white suckers as available. Fish will be collected above and below the derailment site. Those with specific concerns may want to avoid consuming any species of fish from the Yellowstone River in the area until more is known on the severity and prevalence of this contamination. The agencies will alert the public as soon as this information is available.

Phenanthrene is within a group of chemicals called polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons, or PAHs. The specific source of this chemical present in the mountain whitefish is currently unknown, as some PAHs occur naturally in the environment, especially in the shale rock common in the Yellowstone River Basin. PAHs are also found in products such as oil, gas, plastics, and pesticides—and are produced through combustion of these products. Laboratory tests on animals have shown exposure to PAHs can cause birth defects, reproductive problems, and damages to skin, body fluids, and immune systems. These effects from eating fish with high levels of PAHs have not been recorded in humans.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the International Agency for Research on Cancer have not classified phenanthrene as a cancer-causing substance because there is not enough information on this specific chemical. However, exposure to other PAHs has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals and in people who work for many years around mixtures of PAHs.

CREDIBILITY

By "Swede" Troedsson

During 1961-1963, I was stationed as a Forester on the Curlew Ranger District, which is part of the Colville National Forest, located north of Spokane, Washington.

One day I was assigned to scale (estimate the volume of logs) at the local sawmill. The logs had been harvested on national forest land. Scaling was part of the process of determining the value of the harvested logs. I was standing in for the regular scaler who was on sick leave.

During the course of my estimating the volume of those logs for payment, I was approached by the sawmill owner.
He pointed to a LARGE log with rot located in the center.
He asked me what I estimated to be the net volume of the wood in that log. (The US brand stamped on the ends of the log indicated to me that the log had already been scaled.
I suspected he was testing me.) I asked him to write down what he thought was the net volume in that log.

I measured the log length, averaged the end diameters, looked up the gross volume on the log measurement scale stick, deducted the squared defect, and wrote down my estimate.

When I handed my answer to the mill owner, he exclaimed "That's exactly what the scaler got!" as he showed me the regular scaler's estimate.

I grinned, knowing that I'd established my credibility with the sawmill owner.

Astronomy event at Pictograph Cave State Park August 19

Yellowstone Valley Astronomy Association to share knowledge and equipment

Pictograph Cave State Park, in partnership with the Yellowstone Valley Astronomy Association (YVAA), is hosting a night sky viewing event at the park this Saturday, Aug. 19, from 8:30 to around 11 p.m. The event is open to the public and free to attend, but the regular $8 state park entrance fee will apply for nonresident vehicles. There is no entrance fee for Montana residents at state parks. This is the final astronomy event of the summer at Pictograph Cave State Park.

YVAA club members will share their knowledge of the south-central Montana sky and provide telescopes and other viewing instruments to observe stars, planets and celestial bodies.

This event will be held in the park's parking area. Broader access to the park will not be available during the event, including trails. Reservations are not required. This event will be outside, so please dress appropriately.

Pictograph Cave State Park is located just outside of Billings at 3401 Coburn Road.

Did the City and County follow the laws?

By: MJ

The library is owned by the city. Questions: Is the County taking administrative fees out of the 2002 mill levy? Do the statutes allow the county to take the money? When a mill levy is assessed for a specific entity, like library, the statute says all monies collected explicitly go to the library? Do the statutes allow the county to pass mill levy for city without city resolution or contract?

The council is representing the city personnel, will they make sure the laws are followed? NOTE: The county put this mill levy on the ballot to be voted on without any contract or working directly with the city government or the council. Question: does the county have authority over the county? If that was true, why are Lima and Dillon Incorporated or Separate Legal Entities?

The city must complete their budget and present it to the county treasurer by September ± to get the tax dollars they will need for expenditures. To comply with laws for the city to receive tax dollars they must solve the mill levy issue.

Year 2002 there was a 2-mill levy passed, in the amount of $36,000± to fund the library. Question: Did the county hold out administrative fees and if so, how much? Was it lawful according to regulations for them to hold those fees from the library?

Year 2023 mill levy that was just passed by the people. This will give the library 4 mills at $36,000 each. $36,000 X 4 equals $144,000± for library operational expenses.

Representatives of the library maintain that the library is used equally by the county and city. They stated at the meeting that the city and county should pay equally. It appears that the city residents will be paying more to support the library then county. If the library is a city-county library then should the supporting payments be equal?

That's not what will be happening. I will give more detailed information with figures in the next article.

Question: Why did the county not work with the city before they put the mill levy on the ballot? Did a contract or a resolution exist by the city? If these documents exist, will they be presented to the Judiciary Committee?

All the above information discussed at the Special Judiciary meeting was brought to the committee by concerned citizens. It is important that the laws are followed, hopefully bringing fairness to the table.
