Banned Books Week Activities

Jeremy Crawford

Southwestern Montana News

The Bookstore is participating in Banned Books Week a little differently this year than they have in the past. Banned Book Week is October 1-7. With book bans and restrictions on the rise in classrooms and libraries across the country. The shelves are draped in black cloth and other displays have police caution tape across them. These are representative of what things would look like if we removed books from the shelves every time someone questioned the book or didn't want to make it available.

Debbie shared this year's theme is Let Freedom Read. "We celebrate reading, celebrate our differences, and rejoice in you choosing books for yourself and your family and respect your choices. We love books and readers and will always defend your right to access."

"The displays today are meant to bring awareness to the realities of book banning and challenges. We encourage you to exercise your reading rights." Said Debbie.

Customers can look under the cloth and caution tape to find the books they are looking for and the display will be up the next couple of days.

The Dillon Public Library will also be taking part in banned book week with these activities as well.

Events:

Starting Monday throughout the week:

Where's Waldo? Scavenger Hunt

Pick up a geocache list at the library. Spread throughout Dillon, most will need to drive.

Tuesday only:

Jail Cell Bail - stop by each hour to see who's been caught reading a Banned Book! They are all needing bail money! Whoever raises the most will win a prize!

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday:

Harry Potter Escape Room - who can use the clues to Escape in time. $10 a person, must call to reserve your group's spot. Thursday is full. Friday has morning spots left, Saturday has a few spots left in morning and afternoon.

SOLDSelling My Saddle

Bryce Angell

While sitting at my desk one night, I yawned and stretched a bit.

The clock said half past midnight. Still my room was dimly lit.
I closed my eyes, against sleep's will. The Sandman passed me by.

Or was his aim a smidgen off? No sand in either eye.

I climbed out of my easy chair. Sure, easy getting in.

But climbing out past midnight, chalk yourself up for the win.

I shuffled all around the room, a tired and worn-out gait.

And hoped the Sandman would return to cure my sleepless fate.

I'd shuffled to a corner, where I reached out with my hand.

I felt the leather of a saddle cinched down on its stand.

I recognized the saddle. It was older than four score.

And hadn't sat a cowboy for some fifty years or more.

In my sleepless, groggy state I heard my saddle say,

"I'd like it if I'm put to use. Please set me free today."

Next morning, right at breakfast, gobbling down a cheese omelet.

I asked my wife to sell the saddle on the internet.

My wife is trained tech savvy, where I've never had a clue.

And she knows for me to sell the saddle might be stressful too.

It only took a minute, got a buyer on the line.

She asked me if I Venmo. I told her that was fine.

She claimed to send the money, but to upgrade my account, she would need to send more money, mine took only large amounts.

She said she sent two hundred more. And just to make it right,

I'd need to pay her back when she picked the saddle up that night.

My Venmo showed no money, promptly told her to get lost.

She was trying to scam my cash and didn't care about my cost.

My cell phone finally made a beep. One more offer for the night.

She offered me two fifty. Said she'd get here by daylight.

So, she purchased my old saddle and was honest as they came.

Compared to the first buyer, the two were not the same.

I never had been scammed but still I trust more than a few.

'Cuz the silent and the honest always seem to pull it through.

My old time saddle found a home and would work a daily task.

But did it talk to its new owner. Don't believe I'll ever ask.

Martin Breaks UMW Block Record, Bulldogs Fall in Five-Set Thriller
 The Montana Western volleyball team (15-2, 2-1) lost in a five-set matchup (20-25, 25-23, 25-27, 27-25, 7-15) to (RV) Rocky Mountain College (13-6, 2-0). Danyel Martin logged two blocks in the matchup, good enough to take the top spot in the UMW volleyball record books (since the rally points change in 2008). She took the top spot over Bulldog alumni Charelle Minor who recorded 233 career blocks from 2010-13. How it Happened
 The two teams matched each other step for step for much of the first set. UMW took a two-point lead following a kill from Jazi Smith. Up 19-17, Rocky Mountain went on a 5-0 run, taking the edge at 22-19. Jaiden Perez provided the lone kill for the remainder of the set for UMW. The Battlin' Bears took the lead behind a 25-20 victory.
 Following suit from the first set, the two teams continued to battle for each point. Kills from Martin and Kaitlyn Van Well boosted the Bulldogs to a 16-14 lead mid-set. A kill from Jordan Olson and a block from Martin and Olson closed out the set with the Bulldogs up 25-23.
 Smith provided a kill that put UMW up 9-7 early in third frame. Rocky Mountain answered with a 6-1 scoring run, taking back the lead at 13-10. Rocky would continue to hang on to the edge and take the set 27-25.
 Despite hitting .186 as a team in the fourth frame, the Bulldogs put together a set-high of 19 kills as a team on their way to a 27-25 win, forcing a fifth and deciding set.
 The final frame was all Battlin' Bears, quickly defeating the Bulldogs 15-7 behind a .286 team hitting percentage. The Bulldogs struggled behind five errors and hit just -.214.
