If Nautical Nonsense Is Something You Wish Come See SpongeBob Square Pants At The Beier Auditorium

By Hailey Briggs for SWMT News

Need a break from the holidays, stress, or adulthood in general? A great option to check out is The SpongeBob Musical, from The Bank of Commerce Performing Arts Series. This quirky, fun performance is sure to sweep you on a journey away from all you have ever known. Whether you're familiar with SpongeBob and his friends at Bikini Bottom or a new visitor, you will be treated to music, dance, and an array of whimsical colors to let the inner child free for a few hours.

From the youngest performer to the oldest, each cast member brought their A game and entertained the crowd. The singing was a delight, with some breakout performances by our hero SpongeBob SquarePants played by Jaymes Broughton, a charming Sandy Cheeks performed by Amanda Burgstrom, and a, dare I say likeable villain, Sheldon J. Plankton brought to you by Sara Stevenson. These three, along with their castmates, shined on the stage and magnetized the crowd.

Both kids and adults alike seemed to find this Musical entertaining from start to finish. The nuances of the characters portrayed really shown through and helped transform the stage into the cartoon world we all know and love. This attention to detail helped illuminate the storyline and made the time fly by. Before you knew it, it was intermission time. One of the highlights of the performance was the hilariously fun Patchy the Pirate singing and dancing us back into our seats after the intermission.

The themes of this story weren't too in your face to ignore the performance, but made for an innocent, enduring backdrop of the performance. The value of friendship highlighted by Patrick and SpongeBob to the daunting challenge of likeability shown through Squidward and his gloomy outlook is relatable to all audiences.

Whether you're looking for new earworms to delight your December in lieu of holiday tunes or a fresh new take on a familiar character, this performance is sure to stick with you. The cast and crew should be proud of what they have accomplished and presented to the community. We thank them for bringing us yet another outstanding performance to delight the senses.

Be sure to check out the remaining performances, showing Thursday-Saturday, December 8-17 at the UMW Beier Auditorium.

Speech/drama this weekend

Our Three Forks meet was pretty darn competitive. Amelia and Cayenne placed 1st in dramatic theatre and Emily, Lexie, Brooke and Ellamay placed 3rd in the same event. Our humorous theater group missed the finals round by a couple of points.

For our solo competitors:

Amelia Pflieger-Currey 4th dramatic solo

Alexy Navarrette 5th dramatic solo

Cayenne McCabe 2nd humorous solo

Kaycee Pilon 8th spontaneous oral interpretation

We took 1st place in Class A Drama AND Speech! But only because there were no other Class A schools.....STILL A WIN IN MY BOOK!

Southwest Montana Retired Educators

Tantrum

Bryce Angell

One thing I'll never do is tell you how to raise your kid. Lord knows that raising children was the toughest thing I did.

Each parent shares a technique on how to raise up their own child. Till their routine's interrupted by a young one screaming wild.

While walking down the candy aisle at the WalMart local store, I witnessed one long tantrum from a little boy 'bout four.

The young boy bellowed out just like a gut shot buffalo. Then jumped down from the shopping cart right on my left big toe.

I'm sure I cursed out loud which didn't stop the boy a bit. He started kicking on my knee and throwing one big fit.

By now his crying changed to screams, a tantrum at its best. His mother looked at me. Said, "He has put us to the test!"

But then her words surprised me. "We don't want to stifle growth or change his personality. Chastising might ruin both."

I wondered, was she kidding? Were my old ears failing me? The little guy had got away with murder I could see.

We'd learned it very early. Show respect to mom and dad. "Cuz disrespect had consequences that always turned out bad.

You seldom saw a temper from a disrespectful soul. Was it fear that kept us kids in check? Well, more than likely so.

I'd never thrown a fit or threw a tantrum in my life. But it sounded so intriguing. Would it cause me certain strife?

I couldn't help imagining for me to toss a fit. Would they throw me in the hoosegow, call me derelict nit wit.

So I thought I'd give it just one try, a tantrum on the floor. But my trick knee stopped about half bend which pained me to the core.

I was yelling out for anyone to straighten up my knee. But all I heard was, "He's inebriated can't you see?"

Finally the young mother came to save me from myself. And her little boy apologized. Didn't sound like his old self.

I'd judged them both too early. Yes, a lesson learned and more. A tantrum and a fit belongs to younger ones for sure.

UMW Announces Senior Director of Enrollment Management and Director of Admissions

The University of Montana Western is pleased to announce Jaime

Ochoa as Registrar & Senior Director of Enrollment Management and Chrissy Stokes as Director of Admissions.

Originally from Aberdeen, Washington, Jaime served as Assistant Registrar at Whitworth University from 2017-22 before coming to Montana

Western. In this role, she was the academic evaluator for graduate and continuing studies, VA certifying official, and oversaw the academic catalog publishing process.

In 2022, she started at UMW in the role of Registrar where she oversees catalog production, certifies student-athletes with the NAIA/NIRA, builds the course schedule, and helps to ensure that policies and procedures are followed. Over the summer, she began serving as both the Registrar & Interim Senior Director of Enrollment Management.

"With Jaime's unwavering dedication in both these roles, I'm truly looking forward to what lies ahead, and I'm certain that her expertise and collaborative approach will empower Montana Western to excel in our enrollment and retention objectives," said Dr. Johnny MacLean, Provost and Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs.

Jaime and her husband, Louie, have three daughters, ages 23, 19, and 5. She is currently pursuing her Master of Science in Business Analytics degree from the University of Montana. In her free time, she enjoys running and being outdoors as much as the weather allows.

"I'm thrilled to continue serving in the role of Senior Director of Enrollment Management while continuing my duties as the Registrar at Montana Western. I'm eager to not only meet, but exceed our enrollment goals, all while providing support systems to ensure the overall success of UMW students from admissions to graduation," said Jaime.

Chrissy Stokes – Director of Admissions
Completing her bachelor's degree in social science with an emphasis in psychology from Montana Western in 2013, Chrissy began working in the Admissions Office as an Admissions Representative in 2015. She previously served as the Associate Director of Admissions before serving as Interim Director of Admissions beginning this summer.

"We look forward to Chrissy serving in this new role and are excited for the enthusiasm and leadership that she will bring to this position," said Senior Director of Enrollment Management, Jaime Ochoa.

"Growing up in the small town of Valier, Montana, I wanted to find a university where I would be more than just a number. I found my home at Montana Western and thrived in a learning environment with small class sizes and a very welcoming community. Since 2015, I have really enjoyed being able to connect with students and families and introduce them to all the opportunities that are available at Montana Western," Chrissy said.

Fish and Wildlife Commission adjusts December agenda to remove black bear regulations, add final decision on wolf rule amendments

The Montana Fish and Wildlife Commission will move the review of proposed 2024-2025 black bear hunting regulations to its February meeting and add a final decision on the wolf administrative rule amendments to its meeting Dec. 14.

The change provides additional time for FWP to assess potential commission amendments to the FWP's proposed black bear regulations, which have included statewide changes. The public comment period deadlines for the proposed black bear regulations and commission amendments will remain unchanged. Comments already submitted will be reviewed by commissioners prior to the February meeting, which is tentatively scheduled for Feb. 16.

During the December meeting, the commission will take final action on proposed amendments to the current Administrative Rule of Montana (ARM) dealing with wolf management. The public comment process followed for these proposed ARM changes is outlined in statute. A public hearing to hear comments was held Nov. 3. Comments were received through Nov. 6. Comment at the commission meeting will be limited to whether the commission should or should not adopt the rule amendments as final.

For a full agenda, background on the scheduled topics and public comments, go to the Fish and Wildlife Commission page on the FWP website.

FWP's website offers live-streamed audio of each Fish and Wildlife Commission meeting.

Bicentennial Giving Tree!

Our name tree is up! Please stop by the Bicentennial apartments and help us make this Christmas Special for our residents by taking a name off the tree and buying a gift of your choice, wrap it up and place back under the Tree.
