LOCATION POSTER

By "Swede" Troedsson

In mid-January, 2024, Billy Pierce, a resident of Dillon, Montana visited me at my home in Dillon. He had been splitting firewood and noticed this Forest Service metal location poster that had been nailed on a tree that had become a piece of his firewood. He noticed the initials NT on the tag. He figured it stood for Nils Troedsson, and he thought "Hey, I know this guy, "Swede" Troedsson!"

He presented me with the damaged poster mounted on the piece of lodgepole pine. The information still visible scratched on the tag follows:

T (Township - 5 S (south))
R (Range) obliterated
S (section) 19
Distance (to the nearest surveyed corner)
4 ch. (chains - 264 feet)
Bearing - Due W (west)
Date (posted) - 9/1/69
By NT (Me)

I had enough information that I was able to surmise it was located on the west side of the Bull Creek road no. 7485, and refers to the nearby surveyed ¼ section corner. I remember posting this tag 54 years ago in order to protect the corner during logging operations!

Bull Creek is about 32 miles northwest of Dillon, and drains into Governor Creek, which eventually drains into the Big Hole River.

One might be impressed with the tight grouping of the bullet holes. My guess is that this slob visitor to the National Forest was only 30 feet away.

My hope during my career with the Forest Service was catching someone destroying government property so I could report them. Some folks just have no manners.

THE URGENCY TO BECOME CYBER-SECURE IN 2024

by Tom Purcell

Cyber attacks will be significantly worse in 2024 for anyone who uses a digital device. Yet few are aware of, or prepared for, the threats they face — or how their poor cybersecurity skills are putting them and their families at incredible risk.

Last year, the top 10 weakest passwords were pretty much the same as they were in prior years, which offers a tremendous opportunity for cyber scammers to rob us blind.

You see, scammers are really good at guessing passwords — the weaker the password, the faster they can crack our code.

First, they send us multiple fake emails or texts that look to be legitimate — spoofed emails from people we know or companies we do business with — hoping we click on the fraudulent links they embed.

Maybe it's a "receipt" from Amazon that thanks us for our recent $300 order and asks us to click the link provided if we have questions about the order.

Or maybe it's a special credit-card offer from your bank — except that it's from an Internet address that has nothing to do with your bank.

If you "click here to apply" you will unwittingly allow scammers to install a malicious code into your computer that allows them to root around, hoping to find login and password details to gain access to your banking or credit card accounts.

Even if they don't discover the passwords they need, it won't take them but a few seconds to crack the weakest ones.

According to the password managing company NordPass, the most commonly used passwords of 2023 are embarrassingly simpleminded. The most popular password was "123456." Scammers — and my dog, Thurber — can crack that one in less than 1 second.

"Admin" is the second most popular password. It and No. 7, "password," also can be cracked in less than 1 second. If you want to see how easy your passwords are to crack, type them into a password detector, such as this one from bitwarden.

The regrettable fact is, in the digital world in which we all now live, cyber scammers are working overtime to come up with ever-more-clever schemes to defraud us.

Ransomware is malicious software that scammers use to encrypt a company's or individual's data and block access to it until a hefty sum of money is paid.

Google the words "ransomware attack" and you'll see a sizable list of individuals, big companies and entire cities that have been completely shut down by increasingly sophisticated scammers.

Another big trend: Activists who support various political causes are launching attacks on individuals and businesses who support their enemies. Utilities and infrastructure that are using outdated systems are especially vulnerable to attacks. But our elderly face the greatest risk of cyber fraud because they are much more likely to trust people who email them or call them than younger generations are.

As we head into 2024, all of us must realize we are facing a new level of risk from cyber scammers.

We must learn what these risks are and learn to detect and thwart them so we can protect ourselves, our families and especially our elders from harm.

Montana files notice of intent to sue over wolverine listing

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks has notified the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) of its intent to pursue legal action over the recent listing of wolverines as a threatened species.

"In Montana, wolverines continue to do well and inhabit much, if not all, of their available habitat," said Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks Chief of Conservation Policy Quentin Kujala. "We work closely with our neighboring states to ensure the continued conservation of these iconic species. Federal protections in this case will only get in the way of good conservation work."

In its listing notice, the FWS switched course by identifying the lower 48 states as a distinct population segment. This finding comes after the FWS previously found the population of wolverines in the lower 48 was connected to those in Canada. The finding came despite protections in Canada and states like Montana to ensure wolverine conservation.

In its listing, the FWS also used climate models from the year 2100 to point to a projected decrease in snowpack to justify its move. This rationale was used despite recent science that shows wolverines are adaptable and able to den and reproduce without snow.

"In the Northern Rockies, wolverines are doing well and states are working closely on monitoring and conservation efforts. This listing is not only unnecessary, it fails to recognize current science," said FWP Director Dustin Temple.

Wolverines were listed as a threatened species by the FWS in November. The first step in challenging this listing is filing a Notice of Intent to Sue with the FWS. Following this action, the state will file a lawsuit in federal district court.

General Austin Knudsen filed a Clean Air Act Lawsuit

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen filed a lawsuit asking the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to declare President Biden's new Clean Air Act rule, which will reduce states' discretion on how to best regulate existing emissions sources including power plants and oil and gas wells, unlawful. The lawsuit is the 37th that Attorney General Knudsen has filed against the Biden administration.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's rule, "Adoption and Submittal of State Plans for Designated Facilities: Implementing Regulations Under Clean Air Act Section 111(d)," pertains to the procedures under which states submit state implementation plans as mandated by Section 111(d) of the Clean Air Act. The rule exceeds the agency's statutory authority and is arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, and not in accordance with the law.

Under section 111(d) of the Clean Air Act, states must submit their plans for the establishment of implementation of standards of performance for existing emission sources. The rule is written to prevent states like Montana from granting flexibility to specific facilities for cost or technical reasons, giving states less discretion in deciding how existing sources can comply and with less time to comply.

Attorney General Knudsen and a coalition of attorneys general filed formal comments in February in opposition to the rule change.

Bulldog Men Suffer 81-74 Home Defeat To Saints

The Montana Western men's basketball team (9-10, 2-4) fell in a tough conference battle with Carroll College (11-8, 5-1) by a score of 81-74. Western was led by Jalyn Stepney in the loss, totaling 16 points on six made field goals. He also added five rebounds and three assists.

Notables

- Carroll put in work on the boards, totaling 41 team rebounds compared to Western's total of 33.

Western Women Overpowered By No. 6 Saints in 77-62 Loss At Home

The Montana Western women's basketball (11-8, 3-3) lost in a top-25 contest with the no. 6 ranked Carroll College (15-3, 6-0) after a late surge proved to be too little too late for the Bulldogs. Shainy Mack and Jordan Sweeney each hit double-digits in the loss, combining for 37 points in the loss.

Notables

- The lack of a scoring presence in the second quarter proved to be the difference maker by the end of the contest. The second quarter saw Carroll overpower Western 23-8 across ten minutes.
- Carroll's strong presence in the post proved to be a difference maker in the game as the Saints out-rebounded the Bulldogs 34-26. Carroll also had nine boards on the offensive side of the ball.
- Mack led the Bulldogs with 26 points after she made 7-10 shots from the field. She also added a pair of steals.
- Sweeney followed with 16 points and three rebounds.
- Maddy Moy had a season high of 10 rebounds in the game.
