CAMARO

By "Swede": Troedsson

One a night in 1971, I was dispatched as a volunteer EMT with the Beaverhead Ambulance Service to a wreck on "Deadman Curve", north of Dillon, Montana. "Deadman Curve" is at the bottom of a hill on the Old Highway 91 North about four miles south of Glen, Montana.

Montana Highway Patrolman Harold Forsman was driving north on the highway when a blue Camaro flashed by him. Harold turned on his emergency lights and started pursuing the speeding car.

The Camaro crashed at the bottom of "Deadman Curve", resting on its roof, up against a barbed wire fence. He found the driver and his passenger, both high school kids, hanging upside down in the car, suspended by their lap belts.

Upon our arrival in the ambulance, Harold informed me that as the car passed by him, its interior light came on momentarily. The driver of the Camaro told Harold that he told his passenger "Holy shxxt! We just passed by a highway patrolman! Buckle up! We're going to outrace him."

The new Camaro had a hood with racing pins. The hood was lying out in the nearby field!

It's fortunate that those kids were buckled up! Had they been ejected from their car, they may have been sieved through that barbed wire fence.

The only injury was to the passenger. He had a fractured small finger.

FWP seeks comments on proposed westslope cutthroat trout restoration in Dutchman Creek

Fish barrier would help preserve native trout

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks is seeking public comments on a draft environmental assessment for a proposal to restore westslope cutthroat trout in Dutchman Creek, a tributary to Prickly Pear Creek in the Elkhorn Mountains near Jefferson City.

Westslope cutthroat trout are native to this area. However, competition with and predation by brook trout have nearly eliminated westslope cutthroat trout in Dutchman Creek. FWP staff estimate brook trout will eliminate remaining westslope cutthroat trout in Dutchman Creek within the next five years if no action is taken.

The proposed project would include three phases:

- Construction of an upstream fish passage barrier about 1 mile downstream of the Forest Service boundary in spring 2024.
- Removal of existing brook trout in a 3.5-mile reach of Dutchman Creek upstream of the fish barrier, beginning in fall 2024.
- Restock the creek with genetically pure westslope cutthroat trout upstream of the fish barrier for three years starting in 2026.
- Returning these fish to the stream above the fish passage barrier is intended to provide a long-term genetic reserve of westslope cutthroat trout, Montana's state fish.

Nonnative brook trout would be removed using a plant-derived fish toxicant called rotenone. Rotenone is routinely used in fisheries management and offers an effective means of eradicating fish that are incompatible with the management goals of a fishery without endangering the surrounding habitat.

A draft environmental assessment has been published for this project and can be viewed online. Public comments on the draft EA will be accepted through March 18. Comments can be emailed to rspoon@mt.gov or mailed to:

The Origin of Death

We know that no-one escapes physical death, but there was a time, likely very brief, when man was not destined to die. So why is it that now, everyone has to die? God's word reveals the time and records the events that led to the origin of death. There is likely a lot of speculation and a multitude of opinions about this subject, but God's record alone has the truth of the matter.

Genesis 2:9 reveals that God created trees in Eden that were pleasant to look at and good for food. It also states that He created two unique trees, one was "the tree of life" and the other "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil."

In Genesis 2:16-17 God told Adam that eating the fruit from the "tree of the knowledge of good and evil" would result in death and commanded him not to eat of it.

It's interesting that Adam and Eve felt no shame about being naked (before eating fruit from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, Genesis 2:25), but immediately after they ate the fruit from this tree their innocence changed to guilt and they attempted to cover their nudity with fig leaves, Genesis 3:7.

According to Genesis 3:22, the "tree of life" was to be eaten to keep the human race alive forever in the sinless condition in which God had created them. After Adam and Eve disobeyed Him, God expelled them and posted a heavenly guard with a flaming sword by the tree of life so no-one could not eat of its fruit and live forever in a state of sin, Genesis 3:22-24.

Roman 5:12 refers to this action of sin by stating, "by one man [Adam] sin entered the world, and death [entered] by sin; and so death passed on all men, for that [because] all have sinned."

From the day Adam & Eve sinned, every person who ever lived has had an appointment with death, which is followed by judgment. Christ died because of man's sin and because of the ensuing judgment in order that man could be saved from eternal death, (Hebrews 9:27-28).

We know from the scriptures, as well as from personal experience, that every man has committed at least one sin and the penalty for sin is death as stated in God's word. The death referred to here is not just the end of physical life on earth, but condemnation and eternal separation from God & the perfection of heaven. In John 3:36 John the Baptist stated, "He that believes on the Son has everlasting life: and he that does not believe the Son shall not see life; but God's wrath abides on him."

Revelation 20:12-15 records the ultimate destination of those who have not believed in Jesus Christ.
