SHOULD A SENSE OF HUMOR BE MANDATORY FOR FATHERS?
Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

Some fathers are entirely too serious. They're paranoid about their children finding out that they had their own youthful indiscretions and regrettable choices. ("I don't make mistakes. You can ask any of your six stepmoms.")

My late father 'fessed up to his own errors in judgment, like when he was in the schoolyard and a classmate yelled to him from a second-story window to toss up some of the abundant hedge apples (a.k.a. Osage oranges) that littered the ground.

Just as the classmate accumulated an armload of the fruit for some immature plot, a teacher suddenly opened the door. Down went the fruit right on top of Dad. As the saying goes, the apple doesn't fall far from the cranium, elbow, spleen...

Another time, Dad and his cousin Bill amused themselves with the old string-tied-to-a-wallet gag. But one passerby spied them in hiding and cut the string, gaining a free wallet. Guess Dad and Bill didn't skip the extended warranty at the five-and-dime again!

When he was a little older, Dad was plowing in the hot sun. He brainstormed the bright idea of lying down in the spring to cool off. The shock of the contrast nearly killed him, which of course, would have set off a ripple in time affecting MY existence. Brrr. I suddenly felt someone plowing on my grave.

Adulthood did not stop Dad's impulsiveness. He particularly enjoyed good-natured pranks pulled on a slow-witted co-worker named Eric (or "EAR-ick," as everyone pronounced it). Once Dad invited, "Shake a leg, Eric." Eric obliged. "Now shake the other leg." Eric obliged again. Finally, Dad suggested, "Now shake both legs." Eric gamely achieved some prototype of what would later be dubbed "hang time" — before falling flat on his keister.

But Dad's favorite Eric incident involved invading Eric's personal space with an accusatory inquiry of "Eric, what's this I hear about you slumbering in bed???"

Caught off-guard, all Eric could offer was a spluttered denial. ("It's a damn lie! Not in three years! Three years!")

Codger-hood did not see a decline in mischief. When the ad salesman for the local paper came by Dad's workplace to drum up business, Dad hit him up with a puzzle. ("When I was 40 years old, our bookkeeper was 10 – one-quarter of my age. When I was 45, she was 15 – or one-third my age. Now that I'm 60 and she's 30, she's half my age. When will we be the same age?")

The little gears started turning in the salesman's head as he counted on his fingers. He finally said, "I know there's an answer to this. Let me drop off some papers at the office and I'll be right back."

The salesman did not reappear until the next scheduled advertising spiel. And the matter of the bookkeeper's age went mercifully unmentioned.

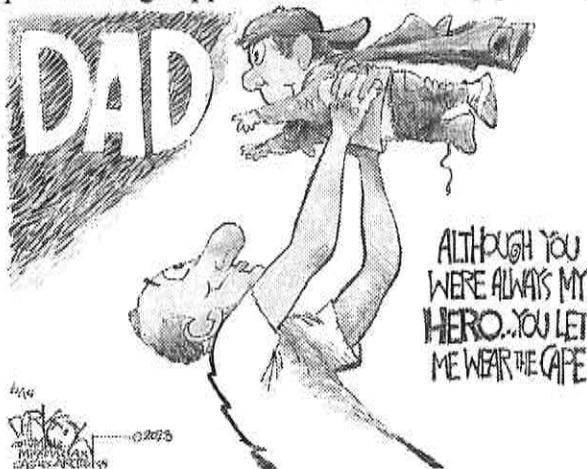

If your father is still living, be sure to thank him for the fun he has brought to your life.

Me? I'll reminisce about the fellow who boasted of his new gazebo.

Dad faked a "sour grapes" demeanor and sighed, "I'm proud for you, but I wouldn't even know what to feed the darned thing!"

Thankfully, Dad's humor lives on in my son.

And for those of you quipping, "Guess these things skip a generation," I've got a big pile of hedge apples and a warmed-up pitching arm...

CARNATION GARDEN

By "Swede" Troedsson

Shortly after I retired in 1994, I kept accepting dispatches by the Montana DNRC (Department of Natural Resources & Conservation) as an Air Support Group Supervisor, which was considered to be a critical shortage category at that time.

That summer, I was dispatched to a state wildland fire on the Stillwater State Forest. The state forest headquarters is located in Olney, MT, about 15 miles northwest of Whitefish, Montana.

The first day I arrived on the fire, I visited the fire helibase, a temporary helicopter landing area which was located some distance east of the headquarters.

That evening, I attended the state lands fire overhead team meeting in Olney. I informed the team that there was quite a "carnation garden" (wads of toilet paper) growing around the helibase and recommended that porta potties be delivered to the helibase. It was my understanding that the helibase was located in a municipal watershed!

Those overhead were shocked! They were in the early stages of organizing logistics on the fire, and they hadn't even considered ordering porta potties for the helibase.

The next morning when I returned to the helibase, four porta potties had to be quickly moved off of the helicopter operations landing area so we could start allowing the helicopter operations to begin that day!

Anglers: If you don't know, let it go

Anglers planning to fish the Eastern Fishing District need to be aware of endangered pallid sturgeon. Anglers are encountering these fish more and more each year due, in part, to successful conservation and recovery efforts.

"It is vital that anglers understand how to identify pallid sturgeon from shovelnose sturgeon," said Zach Shattuck, Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks native species coordinator. "We like to remind anglers: 'if you don't know, let it go.'"

Pallid sturgeon are a federally protected endangered, native fish that live in the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers and their primary tributaries such as the Marias, Milk, Powder and Tongue rivers. Pallid sturgeon are a close relative of shovelnose sturgeon and can have a strikingly similar appearance. Anglers can expect to encounter pallid sturgeon while fishing for more common species such as channel catfish, walleye, and shovelnose sturgeon.

If an angler catches a pallid sturgeon (or if they can't identify what species the sturgeon is), the fish should be handled with extreme care and kept submerged in the water at all times. Hooks should be removed carefully (otherwise the line should be cut as close to the hook as possible for deeply hooked fish) and the fish must then be released immediately. Any sturgeon (even shovelnose sturgeon) over 40-inches in total length must be treated the same way and be released immediately.

These regulations are essential to protecting pallid sturgeon and to protect the ability to continue angling for shovelnose sturgeon. For more information, call the main, regional, or area offices:

- Headquarters (Helena) at 406-444-2535
- Lewistown at 406-538-4658
- Glasgow at 406-228-3700
- Miles City at 406-234-0900

Tips for identifying sturgeon are located on the back of the Fishing Regulations and on signage at most fishing access sites along the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers.

Bird-banding events to be held at Spring Meadow Lake State Park this summer
For the third year, Montana WILD and Spring Meadow Lake State Park will be hosting bird-banding events throughout the summer and would like to offer the public an opportunity to observe the banding station.

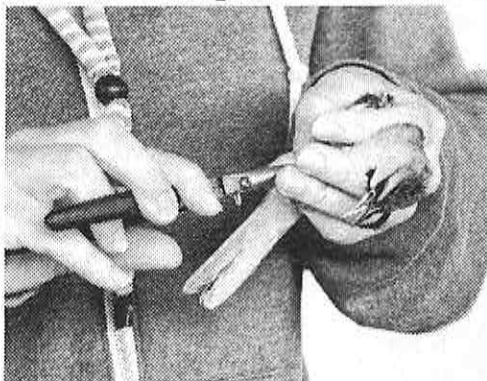

Participants will get the opportunity to watch skilled ornithologists and volunteers capture birds in large, thin nets called mist nets and record detailed data about each bird including species, age, sex and physical condition. Scientists will also attach a small uniquely numbered band to each bird's leg, which will help to track their movements and behaviors over time, before releasing the banded birds back into the wild. Education staff will be on hand to explain the process and to teach about the importance of monitoring bird populations, migration patterns and ecological health. Additionally, educators will have a special station set up for young birders to practice banding and collecting data on model birds, and maybe even get banded themselves!

The scientists running the station will follow the rules lined out in the Monitoring Avian Productivity and Survivorship (MAPS) program. The MAPS program is a continent-wide effort among public agencies, nongovernmental groups and individuals to help with the conservation of birds and their habitats through bird-banding. Learn more at <https://www.birdpop.org/pages/maps.php>

The banding station will be open to the public from 8 to 11 a.m. on the following dates: June 14, June 21, July 8, July 15, July 26 and Aug. 2. Those interested in viewing the station can meet at the gazebo on the back lawn of Montana WILD:

2668 Broadwater Ave., Helena. No registration is required for this free program.

Terminus Distilling Company Updates

Katrina & Derek Lewis

Building

Last month, we mentioned that Derek had been dismantling the floor joists on the Virginia St. side of the building and would soon begin cleaning out the accumulated dust and dirt underneath. He has been making great progress with this site work, preparing for the future concrete in the manufacturing space.

During this digging, Derek has uncovered some fascinating treasures that offer a glimpse into the building's rich history. Among the items were old bottles, matchbooks, and even a label from Dillon's old creamery. We would love to learn more about the creamery if anyone can share some local history.

Business / Community

Lindsay Jaeger has been helping us design signage for each side of the building, merchandise for taking drinks to go, and our official bottle labels. The labels will need to follow strict federal guidelines for what information they include (for example, alcohol content, health warning statement, etc.).

Speaking of federal guidelines, we have been compiling our permitting paperwork for the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau (TTB) to be a Distilled Spirits Plant (DSP). We will also apply for a distillery license through the State of Montana. A distillery license will allow us to serve patrons 2oz of spirits per person per day. This differs from an all-beverage license, which permits the operation of a full bar, or a beer and wine license. After obtaining a Beaverhead County health permit and a City of Dillon business license, we'll be ready to go.

Distillery

Katrina's shrub taste tests are shifting into seasonal fruits - with May's early rhubarb she's working on how to scale up production of this delicious shrub.

Derek and our friend Callie have been experimenting with recipes for different mash bills. Their research is laying the groundwork for our future whiskeys - including bourbon, wheat, rye, and single malt - all made with Montana small grains.
