Sheriff's office is warning people of a scam

Jeremy Crawford, Southwestern Montana News

The Beaverhead County Sheriff's office is warning people of a new scam going around. The scam involves a text message stating your package has arrived at a courier destination and cannot be delivered. The text includes a link for the person to click to update the information. When a person clicks on the link it allows the scammer to hack their phone. If you receive a text like this do not open it. The best way to track a package is through the shipping company's official website.

DOJ's OCP warns of jury duty scam

The Montana Department of Justice's Office of Consumer Protection (OCP) is receiving reports of fraudsters, posing as law enforcement, attempting to scam unsuspecting Montanans out of thousands of dollars by calling individuals claiming there is a warrant for their arrest because they missed jury duty.

The scammers are directing individuals to go the bank, withdraw cash, and then deposit the funds into bitcoin machines or ATMs, such as Coinstar kiosks, and not to tell anyone what they are doing. The scammers also have personal information, such as name and address, on the individuals they are targeting.

Currently, all reports have come from Lewis and Clark County. OCP investigators were able to stop two people from falling victim to the scam over the phone and interdicted another instance Thursday at a bitcoin machine in Helena.

OCP encourages Montanans who are targeted by these scammers to hang up the phone and report it to investigators using the online reporting form here or by calling (800) 481-6896 or (406) 444-4500. To avoid falling victim to the scam, look out for the following red flags:

- Law enforcement doesn't call you if there is a warrant for your arrest;
- Law enforcement/courts don't take payment in the form of bitcoin;
- The immediate threat of incarceration; Directions not to speak to anyone or tell anyone.

26-acre parcel added to Missouri Headwaters State Park

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks has acquired a 26-acre parcel for inclusion into Missouri Headwaters State Park.

This addition permanently secures important habitat and cultural resources on the property, which was a private inholding that bisected the park's eastern edge. Once opened to public visitors, it will also provide greater continuity and expanded recreational opportunities.

The acquisition received overwhelming public support throughout the process, which included an environmental assessment. The Montana State Parks and Recreation Board gave initial approval for the acquisition, followed by final approval by the Montana Board of Land Commissioners.

The parcel was purchased for $930,000 by the Montana State Parks Foundation using funds provided by a grant from the Montana Fish and Wildlife Conservation Trust and facilitated by the Montana Outdoor Legacy Foundation. The foundation then donated the property to FWP on April 29.

"This project has been a goal for the family who owned the property and FWP for many years," said Linnaea Schroeer, FWP's Parks and Outdoor Recreation Program manager in Region 3.

FWP staff will be working to remove old farm equipment, fencing and other structures from the parcel. Walk-in public access is expected to be opened partially in fall 2024. Until then, public access to the area will be restricted due to safety risks.

Within the boundaries of Missouri Headwaters State Park, the Jefferson, Madison and Gallatin rivers merge to form the Missouri River, the longest river in the U.S. This area is significant to Native American peoples and was visited by members of the Corps of Discovery in 1805. Now a national historic landmark, the park hosts thousands of visitors each year. The park is about 5 miles northeast of Three Forks on Trident Road.

REFLECTION

By "Swede" Troedsson

The impact of vehicle on vehicle, and the result on the occupants, sometimes presents a scene that shocks the most seasoned first responders.

One weekend evening another ambulance EMT and I responded to a vehicle accident just north of Dillon, Montana. A father and his son were exiting the parking lot of a bar and restaurant when the side of their vehicle was slammed into by an oncoming vehicle.

When we arrived on scene, the place was bedlam. The crowd in the restaurant had emptied out and was milling about the accident scene. A highway patrolman was trying to control the chaotic situation. To me he appeared shook.

I entered the driver's side of the father's car in order to examine him. His was sitting with his head titled back, with his eyes wide open. The particles of glass stuck to his eyeballs reflected the light from my flashlight. (It suggested to me he didn't even have time to blink!) It was obvious to me he was deceased.

The boy's symptoms suggested to me he had a devastating brain injury. He died shortly after we delivered him to the hospital in Dillon.

A couple of weeks later an attorney visited me at my home. He was representing the family of the deceased and requested a copy of the ambulance report. I informed him he would have to subpoena it. He returned later with the subpoena, where upon I gave him a copy of the ambulance report.

He then asked me if the father was still alive when I arrived on scene. (I suspect the attorney was trying to establish pain and suffering, which could result in a larger cash settlement.)

I told the attorney I was not qualified to declare a person deceased. However, I informed the attorney that the father had no detectable carotid pulse or signs of respiration. His pupils were dilated (with glass particles stuck to his eyeballs), and he was cyanotic (blue) around his nostrils and lips. However, I repeated I was not qualified to declare him deceased.

The attorney left. I suspect he didn't want me as a court witness.

Some of your favorite theatre snacks will be provided.

For Lor Sabourin, climbing is more than a sport; it's a way of exploring identity and building resilience in the face of adversity. They/Them follows Lor, a trans climber, into the sandstone canyons of northern Arizona, on a journey to piece together one of the hardest and most inspiring routes of their life. By embracing the strength in vulnerability, Lor has found the space to thrive and build a climbing community that others like themself can call home.
