Craig Lancaster coming to Dillon

Award winning author, Craig Lancaster will be at The Bookstore from 1:00-3:00 on Saturday, June 29. He is the author of eleven novels and a collection of short stories. A body of work that includes the international bestseller 600 Hours of Edward. His work has been recognized by the Montana Book Awards, the High Plains Book Awards, the Utah Book Awards, and the Independent Publisher Book Awards, as well as many other national, regional, and international honors and citations. In addition to his fiction, Lancaster is a playwright, a freelance editor and graphic designer, and a research analyst. He was a longtime sports journalist in the print and digital realms and for more than a decade has served as the design director of Montana Quarterly magazine. Lancaster grew up in Texas. After half a lifetime of wandering the American West (and beyond), he now lives in Billings, Montana.

His newest novel, Northward Dreams is a story of family violence, dysfunction, and, perhaps, redemption, told across four timelines: More than a decade into the 21st Century, Nate Ray is down and in the find throes before he is out for good. He has burned through jobs and the goodwill of others, including his son, Brandon. When Nate's dad, Ronnie, summons him for a trip from Texas to bury Ronnie's sister, Nate's self destruction is put on hold but new and long-simmering issues arise. Forty years earlier in Wyoming, Electra Ray plots an escape to an uncertain future, for herself and her five-year old son. A new friend awaits on the other end, three states away. But first Electra must break cleanly away from the bonds of a neglectful present. In 2002, recent high school graduate Cherie Bowden is helper her mother settle her grandma's estate in Billings, Montana. Already deferring her own dreams she discovers information that makes her question everything she thinks she knows about the people she comes from. In the early 1950's Montana, Ronnie Ray, 16 years old, estranged from the father he barely know, and on the run from an abusive home life--reaches faithfully toward a connection.

Craig will be signing books, discussing his writing, talking about his books and answering questions in a casual atmosphere at The Bookstore located at 26 North Idaho Street in Dillon. Alan Weltzien will be moderating the event. If you have any questions or would like to reserve a copy of the book please call 683-6807

"There is something true and honest on every single page of this right hook of a novel. Craig Lancaster's Northward Dreams follows the entwined lives of people who've never known anything but hard times and who've never known the word quit."

Beaverhead Chamber Ribbon Cutting Ceremony

The Beaverhead Chamber held a Ribbon Cutting Ceremony yesterday for a Tobacco-Free Vigilante Park, sponsored by Be The Change 406!

Drought conditions could trigger closures, restrictions on Montana waterbodies

Anglers should be aware that restrictions and closures may be implemented soon due to drought conditions. The trigger for angling closures typically happens when the temperature of a waterbody reaches 73 degrees F for three consecutive days. However, some closures can occur at lower temperatures depending on the species being protected.

While several waterbodies across the state are nearing the criteria, cooler temperatures forecasted for later this week could put restrictions on hold for now. These would include "hoot owl" restrictions, which prohibit fishing between 2 p.m. and midnight on drought-impacted streams until conditions improve.

UMW Student Madeline Bradbury Presents at American Association for Anatomy Meeting

University of Montana Western biology major, Madeline Bradbury, recently presented her original research on the anatomy of sea lampreys at the American Association for Anatomy (AAA) annual meeting in Toronto, Canada.

Bradbury worked with Dr. Bradley Wood, UMW Associate Professor of Biology, to investigate the structure of the coelomic wall in sea lampreys (Petromyzon marinus) to better understand the fundamental construction of the abdominal wall in vertebrates and its role in pressure regulation. She performed microdissections & examined histology slides under Dr. Wood's guidance.

The key findings of her research showed that the coelomic wall in sea lampreys acts as a hydrostatic organ, and its structure is critical in maintaining ambient pressure within the coelom. It has a three-layered structure with helical fiber arrangements, crucial for maintaining internal pressure. During muscle contraction and swimming, the wall's arrangement allows for volume stability and lateral length changes. During spawning, body contortions decrease coelomic cavity volume, pressurizing it to expel gametes. This structure is essential for maintaining ambient pressure within the coelom.

These findings illustrate that, similar to sea lampreys, the three-layered orientation of muscle fibers in the human abdominal wall is crucial for selective coelom pressurization. In vertebrates, this orientation facilitates pressure regulation. Unlike vertebrates, lampreys cannot selectively pressurize their coelom and must use mating behaviors to achieve coelom pressurization for gamete release. Bradbury explained that this research was preliminary and that there are several avenues still to explore, including establishing a more direct evolutionary relationship between the abdominal wall in vertebrates and sea lampreys and investigating specific human ailments, such as issues in women's pelvic floor and peritoneal pressure regulation.

Besides facing technical issues, Bradbury said time and workload management proved to be significant challenges while conducting this undergraduate research. She often spent early mornings before class and late nights after work in the lab. However, all this time and hard work is now paying off.

Bradbury's research abstract from the AAA meeting was published in the June 2024 issue of "The Anatomical Record" (page 44).

"I didn't expect this research to be published when I started this project, but I'm extremely proud of the time and work I put in and the findings I was able to uncover," she said.

Bradbury also expressed that Dr. Wood's expertise and guidance were instrumental in the success of the research and that she was grateful to collaborate on such a project with him.

"Dr. Wood and I met weekly to discuss developments in the research and explore the function of the anatomical structures discovered. As an expert in lamprey biology, Dr. Wood answered questions and supported me throughout the process," said Bradbury.

Looking ahead, Bradbury is enthusiastic about continuing research related to human medicine, with a particular interest in degenerative disorders and surgical techniques. This summer, she will attend the Neurological Surgery Student Summer Program, which she hopes will open various MD/PhD pathways and career opportunities. Post-graduation next spring, she plans to attend medical school, with aspirations to explore specialties in surgery and anesthesia while continuing her research as an MD/PhD student.

Reflecting on her education at UMW, Bradbury explained that the Biology Department and block schedule were crucial to her success as an undergraduate and have helped prepare her as she continues her academic journey.

"UMW has cultivated a community of driven individuals within the Biology Department that provides students with hands-on opportunities and sets a high standard of academic excellence. The block schedule at UMW encourages students to develop time management skills rapidly while working in a fast-paced environment," she said.

For UMW students interested in pursuing undergraduate research in biology or a related field, Bradbury suggests exploring options early and developing a plan to manage the potential workload that comes with it.

"Start exploring your options early and discuss your interests with professors and advisors around you—they are here to help. I would encourage students to create a support system of peers and professors early to help navigate the challenges," she said.

For more information about opportunities for undergraduate research and the premedical program at Montana Western, please contact Dr. Mike Morrow, Professor and Chair of the Biology Department, at michael.morrow@umwestern.edu.

What Americans should pray

(Pastor Ken Gilchrist, Big Sky Missionary Baptist Church)

Pastor Joe Wright was asked to lead in the opening prayer for the Kansas State Senate on January 23, 1996. The response to his prayer was immediate. Some of the legislators walked out during the prayer in protest. I wonder what the response of those reading the words of Pastor Wright's prayer presented here will be.

"Heavenly Father, we come before you today to ask Your forgiveness and to seek your direction and guidance.

We know Your word says, 'Woe to those who call evil good,' but that is exactly what we have done.

We have lost our spiritual equilibrium and reversed our values. We confess that.

We have ridiculed the absolute truth of Your word and called it pluralism.

We have exploited the poor and called it the lottery.

We have rewarded laziness and called it welfare.

We have killed our unborn and called it choice.

We have shot abortionists and called it justifiable.

We have neglected to discipline our children and called it building self-esteem.

We have abused the power and called it politics.

We have coveted our neighbor's possessions and called it ambition.

We have polluted the air with profanity and pornography and called it freedom of speech.

We have ridiculed the time honored values of our forefathers and called it enlightenment.

Search us, Oh God, and know our hearts today; cleanse us from every sin and set us free.

Guide and bless these men and women who have been sent to direct us to the center of Your will and to openly ask these things in the name of Your Son, the living Savior, Jesus Christ."

In the six weeks following this prayer, the church where Joe Wright was the pastor received more than 5,000 phone calls. Only 47 of the calls were negative. The church also received many requests for copies of the prayer, including international requests from India, Africa and Korea.

Commentator Paul Harvey aired the prayer on his radio program, "The Rest of the Story," and received a larger response to this program than any other he had ever aired."

The only chance America has to escape the unrest, violence, wickedness & death we are experiencing is to get back to God's principles of what is right and wrong. As God promised Israel in 2 Chronicles 7:14, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."
