TIME TO PUNCH TICKETMASTER'S TICKET

by Peter Roff

The most critical nexus in the free market is the transactions that occur when willing sellers and interested buyers meet. One does not usually look to the federal government to resolve concerns that the costs of particular goods or services are too high.

Sometimes there are exceptions. There is general agreement, for example, that the government can and should act when a company's control of all or most of a single market allows it to act in ways adverse to the best interests of consumers. Now that it costs almost as much to buy a pair of concert tickets as it does to pay the monthly bill, the government has correctly started to examine the live entertainment industry more closely.

The recent U.S. Department of Justice action against Ticketmaster and Live Nation, its parent company, promises long-overdue consumer relief. Since they combined their operations, the two companies have used their virtual monopoly in the marketplace to raise prices far beyond where a free and fair market would put them.

This has frustrated artists and athletes, policymakers who'd prefer prices be set by demand, and consumers who recently discovered they couldn't get anywhere near Taylor Swift unless they were at a Kansas City Chiefs game.

Their 2010 merger, which made Live Nation/Ticketmaster the largest, most influential company in the live event business, was only approved after federal regulators were persuaded that competition within the industry would be unaffected. At the time, Christine Varney, then the head of DOJ's antitrust division, assured one and all there would be "enough air and sunlight in this space for strong competitors to take root, grow, and thrive."

She was wrong. The opposite happened. Consumers were too often left with one choice when seeking out tickets to live entertainment, something everyone should have seen coming. Letting Live Nation and Ticketmaster operate as one firm allowed them to dominate the live events market. They have virtual control over concert promotion, management, and ticketing and something close to a stranglehold over venue management.

How is this possible? Of the world's top 100 amphitheaters, 56 are owned and/or operated by Live Nation. Almost two-thirds of the top-grossing venues in the U.S. are linked to the company, with annual earnings above $2 billion.

With venue control comes consolidation, and, in this case, at least, consolidation leads to exclusivity. Live Nation's response has been to deny it has "monopoly power" and point to other companies through which a person can buy event tickets. That's a diversion. Its closest real competitor, AEG Presents, is less than half the size of Live Nation. They can try to get us to look the other way, but their excuses and misdirection fail to explain why their tactics are not anti-competitive, as the DOJ asserts in its lawsuit.

Cartel-style arrangements with would-be competitors — one firm described itself as a "hammer" for Live Nation — buying up or acquiring majority stakes in regional rivals, and coercive techniques all contribute to their monopoly position.

Live Nation's questionable tactics extend to the secondary and resale markets, specifically through its efforts to safeguard ticketing revenue and data through a software called SafeTix.

Ticketmaster claims SafeTix's rotating bar code system limits fraud. It also creates a moat around consumer data, requiring all ticket transfers to occur on its platform. This forces consumers to sign up with their app, pushing secondary ticket purchasing back through Ticketmaster and bringing all consumer data with it, leaving its rivals effectively cut off from the transactions.

Live Nation's alleged anti-competitive practices and contracts have produced a record-setting first quarter in 2024, with revenues up 21% to about $3.8 billion. It's been a meteoric rise. Since the merger, the stock price has increased 967%, more than double the 382% increase of the S&P 500 over the same period.

The industry is trapped in a web of Live Nation's design. It has no choice but to use it and Ticketmaster. Some say the lawsuit won't do anything to address soaring ticket prices. Still, it's hard to see how adding to the choices available to artists, venues, and consumers won't help.

It is necessary and proper to check Live Nation and Ticketmaster's structural power within the industry. Unlike some of the other supposedly corrective, anti-monopolistic actions taken by the Biden Administration, the DOJ lawsuit is not an antitrust abuse.

Washington has a chance to stand up for consumers. It should take it.

FIRST ELK

By "Swede" Troedsson

In the early part of the 1970s, I was a Forester for the U.S.D.A. Forest Service, stationed on the Beaverhead National Forest. My office was at the Forest Supervisor's office in Dillon, MT.

One Friday, at the end of the work day, I had just returned to my office. Ray Behnert, the Forest Landscape Architect, was about to leave the office. I asked Ray if he had ever shot an elk. He replied "No, I never have." I explained to him that I had been checking on road construction into a timber sale in Mule Creek. (Mule Creek flows into Birch Creek, in the East Pioneer Mountains, which is located about 20 miles northwest of Dillon.) I informed Ray that I had noticed a lot of fresh elk sign at the head of Mule Creek. I went on to tell Ray that the General Hunting Season opened up this coming Sunday. I invited him to accompany me on a hunt. He gladly accepted the invitation!

Sunday morning, at O-dark thirty, we departed Dillon in my Ford Bronco. After parking my Bronco at the end of a newly constructed road at day break, we proceeded to follow elk tracks in the new fresh snow. Hunting conditions were perfect!

We had walked only about ten minutes when a five-point bull elk jumped up out of its bed. Ray got off the first shot, and downed the elk. He was absolutely elated, and amazed at the size of the animal he had just put down. I educated him on how to dress out and quarter an elk.

After quartering up the elk, we returned to my Bronco to retrieve my plastic sled so we could more easily slide the quarters to my Bronco.

We loaded the elk quarters into the top carrier of my Bronco and we were back in Dillon by noon!

Ray gave me half the elk. Boy, did he have an elk story to tell!

Hoot-owl restrictions on additional rivers in SW Montana

Angling restrictions on several additional rivers in southwest Montana went into effect at 2 p.m. on Friday, July 12, due to warming temperatures and low flows. Hoot-owl restrictions prohibit fishing from 2 p.m. to midnight each day. Closures and restrictions will stay in effect until conditions improve.

Hoot-owl restrictions that take effect July 12 include:

- Big Hole River – Entire river downstream of Saginaw Bridge on Skinner Meadows Road
- Smith River – From Eden Bridge to the confluence of the North and South forks
- East Gallatin River – Entire river
- Gallatin River – From Amsterdam Road to the confluence with the Missouri River
- Madison River – From Ennis Fishing Access Site (FAS) to Ennis Reservoir
- Clark Fork River – From Rock Creek near Clinton to the confluence with the Flathead River
- Bitterroot River – Entire river, from the confluence of the East and West Forks to the Clark Fork River
- Blackfoot River – From Cedar Meadow FAS to the confluence with the Clark Fork River

Hoot owl restrictions remain in effect for portions of the Big Hole, Beaverhead, Clark Fork, Madison, Ruby and Sun rivers, as well as the Jefferson River and Silver Bow Creek in their entirety. To view a full list of restrictions, click here.

FWP's drought policy provides for angling restrictions when flows drop below critical levels for fish, when water quality is diminished or when maximum daily water temperatures reach at least 73 degrees for three consecutive days. Water temperatures of 77 degrees or more can be lethal to trout.

These restrictions are designed to protect fish that become more susceptible to disease and mortality when conditions like this exist. One short-term strategy to address heat-induced stress in Montana's wild trout is to reduce catch-and-release mortality by alerting anglers to fish only in the morning.

Anglers can reduce stress on fish at all times of the year by getting fish to the net or in hand quickly, keeping them in the water and reviving them prior to releasing them back into the river.

If high temperatures and extremely low flows persist, anglers may want to consider fishing areas with less stressful temperatures and conditions, such as larger lakes or reservoirs, or higher elevation waterbodies.

Participants also choose if they wish to complete a 1 mile course, a 5 mile BEGINNER COURSE, an 8.64 mile INTERMEDIATE COURSE, or a 23.42 mile RX COURSE. The race briefing is at 6 PM at Taylor Creek Parking lot. The race begins at 7 pm from the parking lot. The HAMR is structured differently than most races - all participants have from 7 pm on Friday night until 7 am on Saturday morning to cover as much distance as possible! Participants can stop anytime they wish during this time frame. Many race newbies complete the beginner loop of 5 miles and then check out and head home. We also have ultra fire breathers who truly race for 12 hours and have covered 60 + miles in one night. Everyone enjoys the wildflowers and the big Montana full moon! Everyone who registers by Monday 7/15 at 6 pm gets an awesome race medal and swag bag of local goodies. We have a delicious CAMP BREAKFAST provided by Sara Bair with Bair Foot Gym on Saturday morning, where we award prizes and celebrate all of our athletes. Two grand prize winners will receive cowboy boots from ATOMIC79 with a custom race champion logo added to the boot by famous local bootmaker Terry Courtney! Prizes will also be awarded to winners in each age group. For details and to register, please go to <https://ultrasignup.com> and search for "Howling at the Moon" or you can use this QR code to enter the trail race. Our wish for all athletes at the Howling At The Moon Race: You find so much JOY in your athleticism that it makes you want to howl! And for non-racers, come out and support our athletes! We invite everyone to camp along the route and enjoy the camaraderie of the event, while truly lifting the spirits of the trail racers. See you soon Dillonites! Let's HOWL!
