Beaver Head Hunters Genealogical Society

The Beaver Head Hunters Genealogical Society will be holding their fourteenth annual Cemetery Walk on Saturday, 10 August at the Mountain View Cemetery starting at 2:00.

Every year, 3 or 4 of the Beaver Head Hunter members present the life of Beaverhead county residents who are buried in Mountain View Cemetery. This year we will be talking about past Beaverhead county sheriffs. Not all the sheriffs of the county were buried in Mountain View Cemetery, so this limited our ability to talk about the earliest sheriffs like Henry Plummer. Three of the sheriffs chosen lived in the 1900s.

We will be hearing about sheriffs David F. Reinhardt, William C. Orr, John M. Troupe, and John B. MacDonald.

When you come to the walk, bring water, a chair, and something for shade (hat, umbrella, etc.). Come find out how law abiding (or lawless) Beaverhead county was while these sheriffs were in office.

Beginning August 3, 2024 Jaycee Park is dog free. The park is the diamond of downtown Dillon and should be treated in a respectful manner. Our children play on the ground at Jaycee Park and dog waste presents an unhealthy situation.

We also send our gratitude and appreciation to the staff at Beehive Homes and Hospice for their thoughtfulness and care they gave our mom during her short stay at their facility. We wish to thank Barrett Hospital and Healthcare, Dr. Hansen and staff, Beaverhead County Ambulance Service, Brundage Funeral Home, Father Pascal Kasanziki of St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Missoula, Father Gregory Lively of St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church in Dillon, St. Rose of Lima ladies for hosting the reception, The American Legion Post #20, Stephens Greenhouse, friends and family for sharing in Sally's life. A very special thank you to her exercise/coffee group for keeping her young and active!

Secretary Christi Jacobsen: 'Montana's new business registrations increased in July 2024'

Montana Secretary of State Christi Jacobsen says more than 5,200 new business registrations were filed in Montana during the month of July, according to the Montana Business Economic Report.

For the sixth time in seven months in 2024, more than 5,000 new business registrations were filed with the Secretary of State's Office. Nearly 6,000 new business registrations were filed in April.

"Montanans continue to chase their dreams by opening their small businesses, and we're honored to be part of their journey," said Secretary Jacobsen.

Secretary Jacobsen recently announced that the Secretary of State's Office will again provide a one-time fee waiver for all Montana businesses filing their 2025 Annual Reports. The fee will be automatically waived for each business filing between January 1st and the April 15th deadline.

"Thank you for doing business in Montana," she added.

pieces of evidence were able to be analyzed and DNA extracted using current technology that was not available in the past. The investigation stalled over the years as suspects, known to Danni, were eliminated. "The investigation remained open because we knew Danni was murdered and someday, we were going to have the tools available to solve this case," Springer said.

In 2019, the sheriff's office renewed efforts to solve the case. In 2021, when Springer became sheriff, he believed there needed to be new, fresh and outside eyes on the case. He hired private investigator Tom Elfmont, a retired Los Angeles Police Department officer with decades of experience, to assist. Elfmont was remotely aided by Sergeant Court Depweg of the Newport Beach Police Department, who specializes in solving homicides using DNA technology.

During the initial investigation, four hairs were collected from Houchins' body. That preserved evidence was sent to Astria Forensics in California for analysis. A partial DNA profile from one of the hairs was developed and run through the FBI's Combined DNA Index System, but no matches were found. The profile was then sent to Parabon NanoLabs in Virginia, where genealogists used additional DNA databases to identify Hutchinson as the suspect.

On the evening July 23, 2024, Elfmont and Depweg interviewed Hutchinson. During the nearly two-hour interview, Hutchinson, who had lived in Bozeman at the time of Houchins' death, displayed extreme nervousness. Investigators noted he sweated profusely, scratched his face, and chewed on his hand. When shown a photo of Houchins, Hutchinson slumped in his chair and exhibited signs of being uncomfortable. Upon release, his behavior was observed to be erratic.

Early the next morning, at 4:17 AM on July 24, Hutchinson called the Beaverhead County Sheriff's Office, informing them he needed assistance before hanging up. Deputies found him shortly thereafter on the side of the road, dead from a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

The investigation continues in an attempt to tie up loose ends. The information we've received will be shared with federal and local law enforcement agencies in an attempt to locate possible victims of similar crimes.

This resolution brings a long-awaited sense of closure to Danni's family and the community. The Gallatin County Sheriff's Office remains committed to justice and thanks all those who assisted in bringing this case to a close.

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

Maybe I have two left feet when it comes to zigging and zagging. But it sure seems the entire world is determined to get in my way. ("Nations must reverse declining birth rates! What if we drop below 8 billion people available to antagonize Tyree?")

I am most keenly aware of the phenomenon at home. The Mills Brothers had it wrong with the song "You Always Hurt the One You Love." Should've been "You Always Crowd the One You Love."

Even with a small family, it seems to require an act of Congress to write on the calendar, procure a kitchen towel or use the bathroom mirror. ("Here's your towel, but there's a filibuster blocking your access to the soap dispenser.")

My wife, son and pets possess an uncanny sixth sense for knowing exactly when to be in my path. (I want us to be on the same page, not the same floor tile.) Think of it as Spider-Man's "Spidey sense" for detecting danger. ("Spring into action! He's in danger of reaching a Band-Aid before he can bleed out!")

 "Let me sit there!" "I need that electrical outlet!" These cheerful greetings make me fear that someday my family will have the U.S. Cavalry herd me onto a reservation and teach me English.

To be sure, prolonged delays (at the airport or doctor's waiting room) can afford folks the opportunity to write a long-neglected "thank you" card or balance the checkbook; but what I encounter is a never-ending stream of 30-second and 60-second delays. It's like productivity suffers death by a thousand cuts. I'll bet that over the course of a lifetime, I've idled for a total of - well, someone is shaving between me and the calculator, so never mind.

Tailgating motorists also covet the space I'm trying to occupy. Maybe one of them will finally rear-end me and send me careening to my doom. If so, I'll come back and haunt them as The Ghost of One Freakin' Micro-Second Farther Down the Road Than You.

Some people lie when the truth would suit better, and others aspire to intrude upon your personal space even when common sense would dictate otherwise. ("I don't have a car. I don't have any kids applying for a license. But, oooo, I crave your spot in line at the DMV!")

I don't know where the stream of vehicles is headed, but first-class postage can go up twice while I'm crossing the street to my mother's mailbox. (No, wait. Postage could go up twice even if the Starship Enterprise BEAMED me across the street. Bad example.)

I try not to be a hypocrite. When I'm shopping, I loathe to mumble "Pardon me" as I squeeze between umpteen other shoppers and their potential purchases. So for ages, I have made a habit of using "the road less traveled" in selecting my route. But even if I dart down an aisle labeled as "Sundries, Realistic Paintings of Your Parents Having Sex and Festive Turnip Spice Candles," some bozo is inevitably camped out and consulting his financial adviser, his psychic and the pope about which Yoko Ono 8-tracks to purchase.

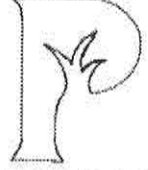

Someday I'll put these frustrations and indignities behind me. I already have my plot purchased at Lone Oak Cemetery. Hey, where did those squatters come from?

Excuse me. "You always hurt the ones you catch hogging your final resting place..."
